UNIVERSITY EDUCATION, FLIGHT FROM REASON, VANDALISM

The smart crowd who dashed over to Duke and painted up the Woman's campus, tore down the Devil goal posts, and ran into the police and the Duke defense were not representative of Carolina. They were representative of high schools and prep joints where immaturity and irresponsibility is not uncommon to juveniles.

The rest of the University regrets the unrepresentative display of emotion and thoughtlessness of those, who under the wild excitement of the moment, went off half-cocked.

Even if Duke freshmen did burn our bon-fire—which is highly conjectural—their showing themselves jokers made it high time we show ourselves as asses, is that it?

Such events as these not only threaten athletic relations with Duke, but wreak no mean havoc with our own psychology on the eve of Saturday's game. There might easily be such apology in the air by Saturday that we'll feel like giving the Dukes the ball game to make up!

The great shine act we pulled several years ago over there was followed next day by Duke's doing us up brown, 21-0.

The immediate stand: the thoughtless discharge of patriotic spirit night before last was regrettable, did not represent an intelligent student body; that there will be no recurrence of the thing tonight is the responsibility of all of you who will look like the fools later. And this goes, even should a few straggling Blue Devils, unrepresentative of Duke, show up over here. Laugh their "invasion" off, for after all High School Week comes in the Spring.

Letters To The Editor

Over 250 Words Subject to Cutting

To the Editor.
 Dear Sir:

While the non-academic world whirls around in a senseless delirium howling "War, War, War!" and like an impotent gelatinous mass slides quickly towards it, Carolina students, representing the white hope of civilization, allow themselves to be ignited with a shockingly similar dangerous spirit of violence and emotional hysteria by the mere sight of a blazing bon-fire! "Duke did it! They came over and lighted our bon-fire! Duke did it! Down with Duke!! Yeah!" And with that, hundreds of students shouted, marched to the boom of a bass drum, ran brainlessly around, migrated in crowded speeding automobiles to the Duke campus—all without knowing exactly why!

Carolina with its great tradition of culture and intellectual achievement should be ashamed that a mass of its students could so easily break loose from all civilized restraints and, reverting to the animal, run wild in the night air.

It saddens or at least puzzles one that youth can get so excited, as Jay Nock puts it, "about the silly little stuff of late parties, hip-flasks, turning their girls upside down," (please refer to front page picture DAILY TAR HEEL, November 10) and may I add, football; all the while remaining so indifferent, so lethargic to "something that really counts"—say an effective Peace. (Did you who ran and yelled around the bonfire last night, go to the Armistice Day program in Chapel period today?)

With today's wars and rumors of wars spreading insidiously over the earth, it should give us "peace-loving" Americans pause that from little, prankish inter-collegiate "bonfires" (and the spirit they produce) mighty international conflagrations may easily grow!

N. Y. U.—A TWO-WAY VICTORY

To the Editor.
 Dear Sir:

Your readers may be interested in the following editorial from the November issue of The Crisis, official organ of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It is headed "North Carolina Does It Again."

"Just for the sake of the record, The Crisis wishes to report that for the second year in succession the football team of the University of North Carolina came to New York October 9 and played against the team of New York University which has Ed Williams, 217-pound colored star, as one of its backfield men. The Tar Heels defeated New York, but N. Y. U. followers cannot advance the alibi that the Southerners weakened them by refusing to play against a Negro. This is a brand of sportsmanship which other Southern universities might copy from progressively liberal Chapel Hill."

This attitude of the team, in marked contrast to that shown by other Southern teams, especially in my native state of Georgia, was a source of greater pride to me than the defeat which the Tar Heels handed the N. Y. U. aggregation. In refusing to stoop to the prejudice which has been a traditional part of our Southern culture, the players achieved a victory that will have more real, lasting significance than a trip to the Rose Bowl or even walloping Duke Saturday.

From The Bottom Of The Well...

THE REDEEMING FEATURE OF A FIRE THAT BURNED TOO BRIGHTLY

The other day somebody claimed that Joe College was dead. That his son had changed his name to "Joseph Collegian," a gentleman of responsibility and no little prestige.

A few weeks ago somebody claimed that a loud and rollicking cheer in the football stadium had changed to a mild smile of satisfaction. Their three reasons were "Joseph Collegianism," a student body growing too large for unified spirit, and professionalism, either openly or secretly, in intercollegiate athletics.

Wednesday night 1,500 students that gathered en masse around a hotly burning bon fire refuted all these contentions.

A pack of incensed Carolina students that invaded the Duke campus riddled these beliefs with a thousand and one holes.

It is a dangerous move to point a wagging finger at the courageous crusaders. But probably it will be done.

If the ill-burning fire was lit by prankful members of our own student body, the Dukes—since they are human beings too—will have an indefensible case of poor sportsmanship against us. Our action was merely on the basis of totally unfounded suspicion.

It may have been an unfortunate occurrence altogether. But it has been a long time—almost too long—since 1,500 marching Carolina students enkindled a spirit that blazed brighter than flaming Emerson field.

A PLUM OUT OF SEASON...

It was not many weeks ago that the nation focused a spotlight on the white robes of that old Civil War relic—the Ku Klux Klan.

The organization was denounced as un-American and a new Supreme Court Justice joined eight "old men" with one mark against him in the eyes of the nation.

The following issue of the Carolina Magazine came through with a story on this current situation which was ranked in literary circles as "nationally significant."

It was not long after this that the Carolina Political Union announced for publication that Imperial Wizard Evans, national head of the order of the Ku Klux Klan, would soon appear in Chapel Hill to speak before the students of the University.

So two campus organs are breaking down the old adage that institutions for higher learning are isolated from the world of current affairs.

The Carolina Political Union and the Magazine have even stuck a finger in national pie.

NOTICE

Messrs. Fearing and Holroyd
 Yesterday's wish was an absurd one. What ever made you believe that the picture in Tuesday's TAR HEEL was a Carolina co-ed's? after seeking a basis for your advertisement the only evidence found was in the recent campus poll where the majority of the co-eds admitted that they were in favor of more than a good night kiss. But gentlemen, this piece of evidence is easily broken down. Words without deeds is like a garden full of weeds.

Conflagration!

The village fire department answered a call to number five Cobb Terrace at 7:45 last night. An asbestos cover being used to control the heat from a burner caused flames to break loose in the basement of the cottage. The major damage was caused by the smoke that filled the house.

QUALITY WHYS

Cheap shoes are like cheap women. On display, they have all the charm and glitter of the aristocrat. Live with them awhile, and they fade, lose their figures, turn into shrews that make life miserable for a man. Usually the cheap woman shows her cheapness in subtle ways, for all their surface similarity to the lady. So with shoes; their faults can be discovered.
