LETTERS To The Editor

grass belonged to the students they had a perfect right to walk on it. The government of the United States also belongs to the people. Our grass-trodder is possibly a citizen. It is his government. Why doesn't he then try to run it? There's no difference from this point of view.

It seems that only this year has such a marked destruction of the grass taken place. Perhaps the freshmen were told to ignore the signs. Or maybe it isn't the freshmen. Maybe the upperclassmen are getting lax in their respect for their Alma Mater. However, we do not hesitate to say that if yesterday's advocator - of the intentional-destruction-of-school-property is not a freshman, he has the mind of one. I do believe, though, that a freshman would certainly show more sense than to come out with a letter like that.

Mr. Roosevelt And A Mackerel

valuation of the dollar to 60 per cent of its former gold worth, after piling experiment upon experiment, Mr. Roosevelt looks about him and finds eight millions unemployed, business conditions still bad and evidently headed for an even worse slump, and a fierce struggle raging not only between the leaders of business and labor, but between labor groups themselves.

Now, going into his sixth year in the White House, Mr. Roosevelt seemingly has abandoned his direct distribution of money plan for Mr. Hoover's old "pour the money in at the top" idea. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is back in the money and loaning legal tender for government bonds.

So it begins to look like we're right back where we started. If the dollar were raised back to 100 per cent, cotton would be at an all-time low, other commodities would be priced at or below 1932 levels, and God knows what would happen to the stock market. All of which proves that it is easy to inflate, but not so easy to deflate.

To complicate matters, public sentiment, in line with the old second term jinx, is turning against the President. No man of such inconsistent methods could hope to be a demigod for eight years. Another depression will put Mr. Roosevelt on the same boat with Woodrow Wilson, which boat docks at a dreary port.

So maybe it would be a good idea for us all to go out and catch a mackerel.

Senators Discuss Amendments

up a report to be read at the meeting last night. Senator Hobbs, in his report, took up each of the suggestions in detail, and made clear the stand of the committee on each of them. After Hobbs' report, a motion was made from the floor that the committee be given a vote of confidence in its actions on the proposals. When the vote was taken, the committee was upheld by a large majority of the senators present.

President Ramsay announced to the senate that he had been making arrangements with Burton Craig, president of the senate in 1895, to speak to the present organization early in the winter quarter. Ramsay also announced that the next meeting of the senate, Tuesday, December 7, will be an executive meeting at which each of the committee heads will present his final report for the fall quarter. As the constitution provides that there shall be no meetings of the senate during examination periods, the meeting scheduled for Tuesday, December 14, will not be held, but will be postponed until after the Christmas holidays.

Student Council

When the bill on the calendar was brought up for debate, Senator Woodward pointed out that the details of Student Council actions could be published without using the names of the defendants, thus doing no harm to the defendant, and presenting the true facts of the case. Woodward stated that he believed by this method most of the false rumors could be stopped. Senator Curley took the rostrum in opposition to the bill with the argument that, if such actions were published, it would bring unfavorable publicity to the school, and that, without names, the true facts were likely to become even more confused. Curley also stated that the student body already had sufficient recourse in the faculty to appeal any decisions of the council felt to be unjust. After heated debate on both sides, the bill was voted upon and defeated by a large majority of the senate.

The bill to be discussed at the first meeting of the winter quarter is—Resolved: that the Dialectic senate go on record as approving the abolishment of the organization of Freshman, Sophomore, Junior, and Senior classes at the University of North Carolina.

St. Louis, No. 30—Ford Motor company's St. Louis assembly plant operated again today, after workers were escorted by police through a picket line of the striking United Automobile Workers of America.

According to officials of the CIO, who called the strike Wednesday, the company refused to bargain collectively, worked against its members, forced employees to sign "loyalty pledges," and fostered a company union. Milton N. Johnson, plant manager, denied all of these charges.

Assembly Debates Anti-Lynch Bill

his statement by reading from a speech by Senator Borah. He also pointed out that in the immediate past the states had handled the problem well.

Roth, in supporting the bill, gave figures which showed that public sentiment is in favor of it. Royster, who had seen the lynching of a Negro, said that there were nearly as many Negroes as whites in the crowd.

Phillips' main argument was that the federal officers and federal courts would probably make a more thorough investigation and hold a less partisan trial. Maner contended that the people who were on the spot probably know more about the case than the G men would. Ben Dixon, the last speaker, was decidedly against the passing of a bill that would give the federal government, rather than the state government, the power to try lynchers.

The group voted 39 to 3 in favor of tabling the bill.

Before the discussion an announcement was made that the Di would treat the Phi to a beer party on Friday night, by way of a reward for their victory in the recent gridiron battle between their teams.

The assembly voted to give ten dollars to the Carolina Political union, to be used as that organization sees fit.

When questioned regarding the possibility of Hathaway speaking in Browder's place tomorrow, Heard said that the union wants the communist cause to be presented by the party leader. He said that since Hathaway had already spoken here he did not think it advisable to have him substitute for his leader.

If in reply to Heard's telegram, Browder still says that he cannot make the trip, an attempt will be made to have him speak here at some later date. In this event no other speaker will substitute for the communist.
