Madison, Wis., Jan. 22.—Charged with conspiring to raise gasoline prices during 1935 and 1936, 16 major oil companies in the middle-west were found guilty in Federal court today in one of the biggest cases ever brought by the government under the Sherman anti-trust act.

The corporations and individuals are liable to maximum fines of $5,000 each, with the individuals also facing possible prison terms of one year. Motions for a new trial were immediately filed by the defense, the attorneys stating that the case would be carried to the Supreme court if necessary.

The jury, composed of middle-aged farmers and small town business men, deliberated for eight hours before returning the verdict of guilty.

Woodhouse Names Hard As One Of Feature Speakers

CPU Lecturer Expected To Give Unbiased Viewpoint

Journalist Praised

"Any student who doesn't hear William Hard will miss one of the feature speakers of the year," Professor E. J. Woodhouse said yesterday, of the Carolina Political union's speaker who talks in Memorial hall tomorrow night at 7:15.

Commenting further on the ability of the assistant chairman of the National Republican party, Woodhouse said, "At the present time he is easily one of the ten best journalists in this country commenting on public affairs."

Praised Highly

A very competent, experienced, and independent newspaperman who owned and edited an important city newspaper recently told Professor Woodhouse that, "Hard is one of the very best newspapermen in Washington, and as unspoiled by the newspaperman's contact with the realistic as anyone he knew."

The famous news commentator was characterized by Professor Woodhouse as being "one who does not give up his ideals in the face of opposition that might discourage less vigorous and persistent workers for social justice."

Close To Hoover

"Hard was probably closer to ex-President Herbert Hoover during the latter's administration than any other newspaper or magazine writer. He was a good friend of Hoover's and could analyze Hoover's position in a very systematic fashion."

WILL OSBORNE TO FEATURE SMOOTH RHYTHM AT DANCE

Fitts Reports Only Few Bids Are Left For Social Event

There will be a minimum of hot swing tunes at Mid-Winters February 11 and 12 because Will Osborne, who orchestra is furnishing the music for the event, is the exponent of smooth, soft rhythm.

Osborne and his boys will play this year in the Bynum gymnasium. The limited amount of floor space here is alleviated by the German club's decision to limit the number of bids to only 200.

Morris Fitts, treasurer of the organization, reports that the bids have been going fast, and there are only a few left. The set includes two tea dances on Friday and Saturday, the junior class prom Friday night, and the formal Saturday night.

The main feature of Osborne's music is the slide effect which produces a sound resembling organ music. By combining the soft organ sounds with popular dancing rhythm, Osborne has succeeded in producing an individual style which has received acclaim in the many cities in which he has appeared.

Radio Broadcasts

His band, which appears over stations WBT, Saturdays at 6:45 and WTAR Tuesdays at 8:30, is composed of 14 musicians, and the organization has been entertaining in night clubs and on radio and stage for 14 years.

Osborne himself is an authority on modern classics, and has studied music in this country, Canada, London, England, and France. He has never had a singing lesson, but his natural
