

Bailey To Read "The Star Wagon"

Author To Give Version Of Maxwell Anderson's hit

"The Star-Wagon," Maxwell Anderson's current Broadway success, will be read Sunday evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers theater by Howard Bailey, of the Playmaker staff.

The play has been a success since it opened last December at the Empire theater in New York with Lillian Gish and Burgess Meredith in the leading roles.

Critics have said that the play includes some of Anderson's most finished and pithy writing. "The blending of the fantasy and realism in the play is the work of a true craftsman of the theater."

Anderson is also author of the popular "Winterset" in which Burgess Meredith starred on the stage and in the moving picture version.

The Senator's speech Wednesday night will be on some subject concerned with peace. It will be given in conjunction with the national collegiate peace demonstration as a part of the local campus peace movement, which is being sponsored by the Venidas group.

Student Talks
Ramsay Potts of the University, and Frank Braynard of Duke, will give short talks immediately following the feature address. Both students will present their viewpoints in regard to peace. Following the three speeches the usual open-forum discussion will be held.

Other features of the local demonstration will be the selling of white poppies by Carolina co-eds, the joint presentation of radio programs by the University and Duke peace committees, and the sponsoring of a poll on peace by the Carolina Political union.

Trackmen At Duke

Harry March in the lows, with Bill Corpening and Captain Rube Graham in both hurdles.

In the field, Dale Ranson's prides and joys should take both leaps into the air, the high-jump and pole vault. Leighton Dudley is the man in the pole vault, while March and Vaughan Winborne, both six-footers all season in the high-jump, are favorites.

The shot and the discus will have Chuck Slagle, Ed Juliber, and Bob Weinberger of Carolina operating against Duke's Fischer.

It's Duke
In the shorter distances it's all Duke. Reavis and George McAfee dominate the sprints. The quarter should be interesting, as Deaton of Carolina runs up against Captain Johnson of the Devils.

During the spring vacation, the Tar Heels edged out the Yellow Jackets at Atlanta 9-8, unexpectedly coming through in sabre and epee. However, tonight the Blue and White fencers will take to the strips minus two of their leading fencers, one in each of those two weapons—Bernie Aleskovsky, number one epee man and Richard Gips, usual lead-off sabreist.

World Problems To Be Discussed Here

Nigrelli Tells Of Conference Set For May 5, 6, 7

A culmination of the efforts of the various international relations groups on this campus will be reached May 5, 6, and 7 during a Conference on International Problems. The meetings will be open to the entire campus.

This project, which will bring outstanding thinkers on current affairs to Chapel Hill, is being planned by the International Relations club. The purpose of the meeting is to present a survey of the economical and political problems of today, with a particular emphasis upon the policies of the various nations of the world. Worldwide conditions will be studied with the hope of an eventual universal attempt to achieve international and national security.

The ultimate aim of the local sponsors is a merger with the Human Relations Institute, so that each will run a conference on alternate years. It is hoped that this joint action will make possible a direct appropriation from the Carnegie endowment.

The planning and technical arrangement for the conference has been done by an executive committee headed by Henry Nigrelli and Ralph Bragdon. Other members include Ed Farish, Dewitt Barnett, John Kendrick, Anne Perry, Lee Wiggins, Len Miller, and Polly Pollock. It is hoped that most of the southeastern colleges will send representatives and about 90 of them have already been contacted.

Those speakers who have already been engaged give promise of an enlightening array of opinion. Speaking turns have been reserved for such men as Josephus Daniels, ambassador to Mexico; Frances Sayre, assistant secretary of state; Max Lerner, editor of Nation magazine; and Dr. Otto Nathan, famed German economist. There will also be round table discussions led by eminent members of the local and Duke faculties.

Display and distribution of literature upon international relations is being planned by the committee.

There will also be an exhibition showing the important part which this state plays in nation-wide affairs. In addition to the formally scheduled addresses, a series of group interviews and classroom seminars will be conducted.

to Philadelphia bubbling over with ambition — and they have come back down south again, saddened with life in general and the Athletics in particular. Not one of Mr. Coomb's players have struck and established themselves, with the exception of Weber.

And when it comes down to shipping players to the big show, Hearn has it all over the Blue Devil. For Mr. Werber, Carolina has two established big league stars; for the rest of the Duke-Athletic men, Hearn has two rookies in big league camps who show every sign of developing into front-rank stars.

The two glittering Hearn stars are Burgess Whitehead of the Giants and Lew Riggs of the Reds. Werber may be a better batter than Whitehead, but Burgess and his Phi Beta Kappa key — another Carolina first, he's the only Phi Bete in the majors — have won two pennants for the Giants at second base with great pivot and team play. Riggs is a better than average third sacker — you have to be better than average to stick in the Big Show for four seasons.

The rookies are Johnny Humphries and Johnny Peacock. Humphries is with Cleve-

After graduation she went eight miles to college every day for a whole year and a part of another until illness forced her to quit. When her fourth child was old enough to be left at home, she returned to college and finished the two year course, and has since been taking correspondence work with a determination to secure her degree sometime, even though she labors under the difficulties of poor health, limited funds and little time available for study.

A young man took a course in short story writing under Prof. W. L. Wilson through the bureau of correspondence. He recently wrote that one of his stories has been accepted by Laurence R. D'Orsay of Hollywood as saleable. Several persons have reported they secured good business positions after taking an accounting course being given by Prof. Robert Sherrill.

New Courses

Under the plan for this year, three new courses are offered and one course has been revised. The new courses are: "Regional Sociology of the South," by Prof. Lee M. Brooks with Dr. Howard W. Odum's book, "Southern Regions of the United States" being used as the basis for comprehensive study; a course in "Adult Education" to be given by Prof. Roben J. Maaske of the department of education to meet the practical needs of directors, supervisors, and teachers in the field of adult education; and a course in "Appreciation of Art" to be given by Prof. Russell Smith, head of the University Art department.

The revised course is "Book Selection for Children's Libraries" given by Miss Nora Beust. It is expected to attract many new members to its enrollment.
