Press Institute Opens Today

 ing, there will be a series of talks on the various aspects of newspaper work. Among the speakers are Anthony J. McKeelin, sports editor of the Raleigh News and Observer; L. S. Leprade, editor of The Durham Herald; Charles McDevett, managing editor of The Kinston Daily Free Press; and William S. Howland, executive news editor of The Winston-Salem Journal.

Saturday evening at 6 o'clock there will be a lawn party, sponsored by Graham Memorial. Carl Goerch, editor of The State magazine, will be the main speaker.

The press session will be concluded tomorrow night at a general meeting to form a permanent organization, elect officers and make plans for next year.

According to Director Stick, each school has three delegates and a faculty adviser, but some schools are sending more and paying their own expenses. The only expenses of the delegates are meals and some rooms, Stick stated.

The next time no one else is listening, ask yourself this question: Would I give marriage a "fair" trial?

Strike At State Averted

 advised instead of general consolidation, physical consolidation.

This, he said, would have meant the abolishing of State college and the removal of the school from Raleigh to Chapel Hill. He argued that any unfavorable publicity to the college would likely result in such a move now.

He was first greeted with boos and hisses which were finally checked, according to report, by students who insisted that he be heard.

His statements were violently objected to from the floor as students expressed the opinion that he was attempting to evade the issue. They claimed that this had been the case since the faculty first passed the rule against the dance in February and had not informed the students until they started preparation for the occasion the first of this month.

Harrelson was also asked why he had not secured a quorum for a meeting of the faculty council when it was petitioned to reconsider the issue after 1,122 students (96 percent) had voted in favor of the dance and only 39 voted against it.

Many of the students backing the dance maintain that this is the chance to put an end to the faculty control which "does not recognize the student government, and maintains an undemocratic, dictatorial, high school jurisdiction over the student body."

"My Day" OR Life On A Raft

By Charley Gilmore

A freshman English instructor named Gwynne Daggett has discovered how to get work out of his students. He just stands on his head. That's a lot better than sitting on something else.

When he asked the class if he should stand on his hands to impress them, the boys gave a very positive response. They wanted to see a professor who was head-over-heels in love with his work.

How To Win Friends
 If Acrobat Daggett has the right idea, our whole philosophy of persuasion may be changed. When Dr. Graham appears before the faculty this afternoon, don't be surprised if he throws himself out of joint.

I understand Student Party members practised calisthenics at their meeting last night. Next election Mitchell Britt will do forward somersaults, and Bill Cole is working out a back flip that should be worth several hundred votes.

Shot From a Cannon
 Yesterday Alex Heard wrote Barnum & Bailey. He wants to sign the Great Pinellis for his next CPU speech. If that doesn't drag 'em out, he might as well throw in the towel.

Even at that, if he throws the towel in deftly enough he should be able to draw a fairly good audience; or else Instructor Daggett has got an act that's only good for a one-day stand, if you know what I mean.

The whole place has gone topsy-turvy. Over in Phillips, Professor Plyler says that a drink of carbolic acid won't hurt you if you chase it with whiskey. A slug like that would make anyone stand on his head.

They say the secret of standing on your head is putting the right foot upward.

Miss Kane, Pianist

A large audience, last Sunday, heard Miss Helen Kane of Chicago give a highly meritorious recital of piano music.

Her program contained a varied assortment of classical, romantic, and impressionistic music. The opening selection was a short Sonata by Scarlatti. This was followed by an excerpt from one of the English Suites of Bach, and the Variations in F minor by Haydn. Of particular interest, was the exemplary reading of the Bach work by Miss Kane. It was one of the finest contributions on her program. Bach's English Suites with their brilliance, clarity, and homogeneity evince the true Baroque spirit in music. His art is like the sculptured figures, the niches and the embellished ornaments of the Baroque cathedrals.

The Haydn Variations, in Rococo style, were given a thoroughly musical rendition and deserved the expressions of enthusiasm that Miss Kane's playing evoked from those who heard her performance.

It is to be said that Miss Kane is a thoroughly conscientious and capable artist. She will undoubtedly go far in her career, if one may judge from her potentialities, careful application, and fine training. Let us hope she will visit our campus soon again.
