

Coach Wolf Expected Home

been since Tuesday night as the result of an internally infected left leg. One floor above him, fully dressed, quarterback George Stirnweiss sat and sipped water, waiting for the doctor's word to go home.

Wolf, clothed only in a pajama top and straddling the narrow bed, talked freely of this and that, uninterrupted by the visits of two doctors and a nurse. After a precursory examination, verdict came that Wolf would probably be permitted to come home tomorrow, in time to witness or direct afternoon practice on Fetzer field.

How It Happened

The genial mentor was taken to the University infirmary early in the week with an upset stomach and a fever of 103 degrees. Thought at first to be a minor head cold, the trouble was later diagnosed as an infection of the leg, and Dr. Foy Roberson ordered his removal to Watts hospital.

Today the Coach was once more back in shape. With his temperature down to normal, the infected area had subsided to a faint reddish spot and the old Bear vitality and sense of humor was up to par again. R'aring to get back into harness, Wolf asked for his immediate dismissal.

Doctors, however, thought it best to have him a guest for another night. Arrangements were made to give him one or more X-Ray treatments, after which he will be listed as cured.

Visitors

Visiting him this morning were coaches Johnny Vaught, Walter Skidmore, Bill Lange, Johnny Morriss, boxing coach Mike Ronman, George Barclay, sophomore tackle Gates Kimball, and sophomore center Bob Smith. All dropped in on recuperating Stirnweiss also.

The coach, though not unduly worried about his ball team, admitted that he lacked reserve power in a number of positions and that the schedule for the season was plenty tough. "A team to look out for," he cautioned, "is State college. Doc Newton has really got something this year and even says so himself."

Stirnweiss

Stirnweiss was chafing at the bit waiting for the call to action. Just when that call will come is another question. Wolf said the Flying Dutchman may be out of uniform for weeks, or perhaps the entire season. Time alone and a few X-rays, which have been taken every day for the past two weeks, will tell. He is not expected to be released from the hospital until some time next week.

He first went to the hospital

two weeks ago with stomach pains that were first diagnosed as appendicitis. X-rays revealed it was a severe case of stomach ulcers and Stirnweiss was put on a strict liquid diet. He took his first solid food yesterday, and will have to be on a restricted diet for the next five months.

Lalanne Boosted

George looked well enough to rush down into a uniform today, but he'll not do any rushing yet. Wolf frankly doesn't count Stirnweiss in on this year's plans. That would leave the job of filling the shoes of Stirnweiss who in turn was to fill the shoes of Crowell Little squarely to Jim Lalanne.

Wolf thought Lalanne could handle the task, but he did say it was too bad Sweet James had been boomed in the public prints before he had ever played a minute of varsity football.

If Stirnweiss is out for the season he will only have one more season of football for Carolina. For after next year he will have used up the five years of competition granted collegiate athletes by the Southern conference.

$5,000,000 Allotted Greater University

University trustees and council of state asked PWA to grant 45 per cent of total cost of the new projects. The remainder would come from revenue bonds, which would be repaid by receipts from use of the buildings by students and others.

Other Allotments

Dr. Graham pointed out that PWA has allotted, prior to the recently-approved projects, funds for four dormitories at North Carolina State college, and two other dormitories at Woman's college.

Of twelve dormitories asked for the three units of the greater university, five were to have been built here, four at N. C. State, and three at Woman's college. As present allotment stands, Carolina will receive two; State, four; and Woman's college, two.

Coed Orientation To Continue

Carrington Smith came through with a free picture show for all the new girls and their orientation leaders.

Orientation chairman Libby Spencer feels that the short introduction to university activity has proved of unusual benefit to the transfers, and states that "this group of girls promises to make the best crop of coeds Carolina has ever had."

Assisting chairman Spencer with the orientation program were Olive Cruikshank, Altajane Holden, Kathryn Fleming, Margaret Evans, Rachel McLain, and Edna Hinds Bynum. These will serve through the year on the YWCA social committee, and in cooperation with the other girls serving as "big sisters" will see that the new junior transfers begin an active year at the University at least until the close of the fall quarter.

New Coeds To Be Honorees

maining 50 will be stags. Bob Magill said that the latter will probably be counsellors, since they are "imbued with the spirit of service."

There will be 15 coed marshalls and 15 men marshalls to see that everything runs smoothly and everyone is introduced to everyone else. Graham Memorial grill will be open during the dance for drinks (soft).

Crowded Dorms Cause Waifs

though more rooms are available, some are not accessible to the campus and rates are too high for the average student.

Bradshaw's Opinion

It is the opinion of Dean Bradshaw that present congestion is not due to a large increase in the student body over that of last year but rather due to the fact that more than average number of students reserved rooms last spring. Undoubtedly all these reservations will not be filled, but the extent of this cannot be determined for several days. Although rooming conditions are crowded at present, there is definite and permanent relief in sight. The University is definitely guaranteed of having one new men's dormitory and one new women's dormitory by next year, and there is a possibility that several more will be built through use of government funds.
