CAROLINA

By Morris W. Rosenberg

POLITICS: "El Mundo," Porto Rican newspaper, reported last week that President Frank Graham and Congressman Mauverick are being considered for the governorship of the island of Porto Rico following the expected resignation of the incumbent governor, Winship.

However, Dr. Graham says that he "knows nothing whatever about it," and sources close to the President have stated that he will not leave the University.

President Graham has been very close to the present Washington administration and has served in many important capacities, including membership of the Educational committee, vice-chairman of the Consumers Advisory committee of the NRA, chairman of the advisory committee on social security, and membership on the committee that framed the report on the South which the National Emergency Council recently submitted.

JUBILEE: The University and Region No. 6 of the Boy Scouts of America will sponsor a Carolina Boy Scout Jubilee here October 6-9. Dr. James E. West of New York, chief scout executive, Governor Hoey and other scout officials are expected for the session. President Graham will extend greetings and Professor H. D. Meyer will deliver the welcome address to the group. R. M. Grumman, University extension division director, will assist with the program.

Here's how the expected 1,500 scouts will solve their rooming problem: Scout patrols will pitch tents and camp around the campus; Sea Scouts will go sailing on an imaginary sea near the Bell Tower; Explorer Scouts will live in pioneer shacks and shanties under the open sky.

Campus Has Four Presidents

A study of the regimes of the first three of these men would be a history of the breakdown, the rebuilding, and the coordination of student government and the honor system. Francis Fairley stepped into office when the University had just been torn asunder by the revelation that a highly organized cheating ring had been in existence on the campus for several years. As a result, about 50 students were suspended from school, and Fairley's term of office was mainly one of cleaning house and strengthening the weakened student government. He appointed a committee, headed by Phil Hammer, former TAR HEEL editor, to make an intensive research into the philosophy and workings of the honor system. Its findings brought about the establishment of class honor councils, which were intended to make the handling of honor code violations more efficient and more equitable.

Parker's Task
John Parker had the task of restoring confidence in the honor system and in making students realize the responsibilities it entailed. His was less a progressive regime than one of critical self-examination, correction of abuses in student government and coordination of student activities. It was at this time that a rule was made that a majority of a class had to be present at class meetings to pass class budgets. He campaigned for the student legislature, which, however, was not authorized until Bob Magill came into office, and was against staff nominations, because he thought it would cause politics to play too big a part for Carolina to tolerate.

Fairley and Parker, during their terms, tried to clarify the relationship between the student government and various student activities, too many of which regarded themselves as independent of the student body, and to decide the amount of authority the student council had over organizations like the woman's council, the athletic council, the University dance committee, and the PU board. Up until Bob Magill's presidency, each of these groups had been autonomous with no meeting ground to settle their differences and no sounding board for campus opinion.

The legislature is designed to remedy these faults and to give the general student body more control over the above organizations. Ground was cleared for this by the abolition of hazing in 1936, the great improvement in the managing of student finances, and the establishment of the student advisory committee—three students who are permitted to study all phases of campus activities and to make recommendations to the comptroller, many of which, like screens on the dormitory windows and mirrors over the dormitory basins, have been followed.

It was Magill's intention to make students realize the educative values of student government both at college and in later life. The framework of the legislature, intended to be a step in that direction, was drawn up by a special appointed committee, one of whose members was Jim Joyner. And the future of all that Fairley, Parker, and Magill have accomplished is now in his hands.

Margaret Johnston Engaged To Gardiner

Mrs. George A. Johnston of Chapel Hill announced last Sunday the engagement of her daughter, Margaret, to Robert Gardiner of Philadelphia, Pa. The couple will be married in the Episcopal church in Chapel Hill on October 17.

Miss Johnston was a coed at the University last year. Gardiner, who graduated from Carolina in 1937, was a track star and a member of Delta Psi fraternity.

CAMPUS PERSONALITIES

By DON BISHOP

The small blond young man you see pounding down the home stretch at Fetzer Field or down the gravel walks in the vicinity of Bingham Hall is quite likely to be Bill Hendrix, vice-president of the University of North Carolina student body by unanimous approval.

Hendrix is a track and cross country man extraordinary. He is captain of the hill and dale squad and co-captain with Bill Corpening of the track team. Last spring, just before campus elections, both political parties stampeded to the Hendrix camp to put him on their ticket for student body vice-president. At that time, he was vice-president of the Junior class, understudy to President Jim Joyner; he now holds the same relative position for the entire campus.

In his cross country running, Bill seldom sees his opponents once the race has started. It seems he is always out in front. He has placed first, or tie for first, in every cross country event he has entered since his sophomore year, except one. In his first year on the team he ran fourth in one of the races.

Last summer he participated in the Princeton Invitational meet, and he readily admits running is one of his greatest interests.

But the name Bill Hendrix must also be associated with other phases of campus life. He has always had a great interest in student government, here and in high school at Greensboro. There he was president of the Junior class. He is studying banking and finance here.

Bill declares he doesn't go in much for the social life hereabouts. However, he is president of the German club, campus dance organization. He is also president of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Dr. Harold D. Meyer Speaks To Freshman Friendship Council

Topic Has To Do With Youth Movements In Germany, Italy Today

"The Two Youth Movements In Germany and Italy" was the Dr. Harold Meyer topic when he spoke at the first meeting of the Freshmen Friendship council held in Di hall last night. "Hitler will take Czechoslovakia and then Poland," Dr. Meyer stated.

He went on to tell of how the youth all over Germany met every Wednesday night at the same time and discussed various problems and also of the many other things he observed concerning youth movements while he was abroad.

W. T. Martin, president of the council, opened the meeting by reading Psalm 121. The meeting was then turned over to Francis Fairley who introduced the speaker.
