Classes Excused At Prof's Will

To stop all rumors that Greater University Day in Raleigh tomorrow would be a holiday, Dean R. B. House announced yesterday that "the faculty have not been requested to grant a holiday," and there will be no interruption of class work. However the instructors are able to excuse classes if they so desire, he stated.

Dean House's message reads as follows: "I understand that many students think that Saturday, October 1, has been declared a holiday on account of the Carolina-State game in Raleigh and the celebration there of All-University day, and I want to correct this misconception of the matter.

"Except By Faculty Vote"

"The faculty have not been requested to grant a holiday and they have specific regulations prohibiting interruption of class work except by faculty vote. It is recognized, of course, that emergencies may occur warranting the administration to depart from this general rule, but there has been ample time to consider this matter and no holiday has been requested or granted.

"I am sure that faculty and administration desire students

Telegram Praising Roosevelt For Stand In Czech Crisis Sent By Student Mass Meeting

Joyner Presides As 1,000 Assemble And Send Message

Editor-In-Chief

By FRED CAZEL

At the mass meeting held last night for expression of student opinion on American policy in the present European crisis were nearly 1,000 students and townspeople. The meeting resulted in sending a commendatory telegram to the President of the United States.

Text of the telegram follows: "We, students of the University of North Carolina in mass meeting, and citizens of the United States, commend you for your efforts to influence the governments of Europe in behalf of peace; we urge that you continue to exert all possible influence and to cooperate in every way with other states of the world to effect a peaceful solution to the problem of Germany and Czechoslovakia which threatens to involve the whole world in war. (Signed) Jim Joyner, president of student body."

Joyner presided at the meeting and expressed as purpose of the meeting "to show what part American students could have in crystallizing the opinion of the country." Although present developments have thrown a different light on the problem he felt that we should take some action similar to that being taken in various colleges throughout the country.

Dr. Pegg Speaks

Joyner introduced first Dr. C. H. Pegg, head of the freshman social science department, who gave an historical background to the problem and presented it from the German standpoint.

"Germans feel as a people that the treaties of Paris were too harsh," said Dr. Pegg, and so have felt themselves justified in breaking them.

Also he stated, "The nazi movement is somewhat predicated on an expansion philosophy—a nazi revision of the Berlin"

Gerrard Hall To Be Remodeled With Second Grant

Word was received late last night from the PWA administration in Washington that the University had received almost half a million dollar grant to carry out a million dollar building program.

Two separate grants, totaling $478,925, have been approved for construction and remodeling of campus buildings.

The first PWA award, which consists of $315,809, will be used to erect more dormitories, and faculty and graduate student apartments at Carolina inn.

Historic Gerrard hall, Alumni building, and Caldwell hall will be completely remodeled with the second grant of $163,116. Plans for the restoration of Gerrard, one of the oldest structures on the campus, have been in existence since it was condemned for student use, but not until this federal aid was granted have the hopes of the administration materialized.

Administration heads had no comment on the PWA grant late last night.

Figures for the remodeling projects given in the application were: renovation and addition to old medical building, $182,000; equipment for the old medical building, $20,000; equipment for the new medical building, $25,000; renovation of alumni building, $100,000; renovation of Bynum gymnasium, $25,000, and renovation of Gerrard hall, $25,000.

Funds for Carolina inn extension will be used to provide space for a cafeteria, convention hall, short courses, institutes and faculty center.

The new building allotment will be financed 45 per cent through PWA grants and 55 per cent by state revenue bonds which would be repaid by receipts from the use of the buildings by students and others.
