State Alumni Laying Plans To Observe University Day

Former Students To Hold Banquets In Many Cities

University of North Carolina alumni are laying plans to observe the 145th University Day on October 12 at various points in the state and in several cities outside North Carolina as well, according to announcement made yesterday by J. Maryon Saunders, University alumni secretary.

The Chapel Hill celebration will be centered about exercises to be held in Memorial Hall here at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning when Mark Ethridge, Louisville, Ky., newspaper publisher, will speak on "The South and Its Prospects." The customary memorial services to University alumni who have died during the past year will be a part of these exercises.

Greensboro alumni will hold their banquet Tuesday evening, October 11, with Dr. H. G. Baity and Professor O. K. Cornwell as speakers.

The Wake County alumni have invited Mr. Ethridge and Coach Ray Wolf as their speakers for a meeting in Raleigh on October 12.

Mecklenburg County alumni will gather also October 12 in Charlotte, having J. Maryon Saunders, alumni secretary, as their Chapel Hill representative.

Other North Carolina groups that have reported plans for University Day banquets include Henderson, Albemarle, Rocky Mount, Sanford, Lexington, and Harnett County.

Out of state meetings are scheduled to be held in Washington, D. C. with Dr. R. D. W. Connor, United States Archivist, as speaker; Knoxville, Tenn.; Bristol, Va.-Tenn.; Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, and Richmond.

New York alumni are holding their annual fall banquet on November 12 when the Carolina football team plays Fordham University.

It would take about 9,512 years for a person to count to a billion.

Grid Star On Screen

In 1932 William Julius, or just plain Bill, came to the University with desires pertaining to higher education. In the process of such pursuits, he struck up an acquaintance with a football and thereafter became known mainly for his performance while on a gridiron. He served his apprenticeship on the freshman team and concluded a successful reign as varsity end under the Snavelly regime in 1935. His name a household word—in the domiciles of those sportingly inclined—Moore left Carolina to seek his place in the world at a time when most people were seeking a nice high place to jump off from. But nevertheless, it wasn't long before he was working, and working hard. For he exchanged a sheepskin for pigskin and joined the Los Angeles

Bulldogs, of the American professional football league.

Shearer Walks In

Los Angeles, in case you didn't know, isn't so terribly far from the metropolis of filmdom, so enter the heroine with no words minced: Norma Shearer one day chanced to be watching the Bulldogs play a game of ball, and with her was a casting director from one of the Hollywood studios.

Miss Shearer, with the aid of a paid of field glasses, gave the footballers a casual once-over while wondering if she would ever get to play Scarlet O'Hara. Suddenly she stopped, studied, and then spoke.

"Why, look, there's a handsome man down there," she ejaculated to the casting director, who aroused himself long enough to
