• Campus Bodies

Yesterday we received a letter from one "Bewildered" asking several questions about campus government which we feel are in the minds of many students.

First, where is the Student Legislature that we voted on last year? And just exactly what will it do?

The Student Legislature that the campus voted for last spring has not yet been organized. President Jim Joyner has apparently seen no need for legislation. And rather than allow the group to meet unnecessarily with "much ado about nothing" he has chosen to leave the legislature unorganized. The legislature will represent the fraternity, non-fraternity, and women's groups, and will act as their legislative voice.

Second, what are the functions of the Student Audit Board, and who are its members?

The Student Audit Board keeps check on the finances of the various campus organizations, including the four classes. These organizations draw up their own budgets, and the Audit Board checks on their expenditures and sees that they keep within these budgets. The board is composed of four students, and three faculty members. The president of the student body is always one of the student members and acts as the chairman of the Board.

What is the P. U. Board?

The P. U. Board, or Publications Union Board, is the custodian of the publications fees that the students pay every quarter. The Board seeks to divide these fees between the various publications in such a way that each may receive the amount necessary to properly finance it. The Publication like the Audit Board is composed of both students and faculty members.—T. S.

• Not For Us

America, where all men are created equal, is noted for the exceptions to this rule which it so openly condones. And, of all places, undemocratic practices are quite common in some of America's best educational institutions. We refer, in particular, to the absurd restrictions placed on freshmen.

One of the favorite appellations for new men in a number of colleges is the undignified "rat." The defenseless neophytes bear this title at Emory university and Western Maryland college; at Virginia Military institute they fare little better, being of the little-more-refined "Brother Rat" category of student classification. Even nearby Duke university is a participant in this cultural lag, its freshmen being required to wear dunce caps during the fall quarter.

To show the absurdity of freshmen rules at Emory and Western Maryland (which may be considered a representative cross-section of this less progressive element in higher education) we summarize some of their "rat" regulations:

"No freshmen will be allowed to sit on the library steps . . . No freshmen will be allowed to walk on the grass . . .

Rats must smoke only in their rooms . . . Rats must make way for upperclassmen at all times . . . Rats must speak to everyone on the campus . . . Rats must buy a 'rat cap' . . . Rats must carry out all requests of upperclassmen . . ."

The slapstick comedy of it, the poignant tragedy of it, more forcefully impresses us with the belief that education here at Carolina is far from being "in a rut."

University Club Expresses Thanks For Help With Pep Rally

The University club wishes to thank the following individuals and groups for their cooperation and help in making the pep rally Friday evening a success.

The Book Exchange for the torches; David Connor and American Tobacco company for firewood;

The speakers, Mrs. Estelle Page, Dr. Foy Roberson, Sarge Kellar, and George Washington;

Swain hall for opening early to accommodate those who wished to attend the pep rally;

Ledbetter-Pickard company, for the blanket for Rameses;

The buildings department for cooperation in erecting the platforms.

gain, and the individual be assured of the most advantageous position for rehabilitation.

PAROLEES HAVE JOBS

According to Commissioner Gill, only 10 percent of the approximately 1500 persons now on parole are unemployed—although many of them are working for very low wages. Their work ranges from the most menial tasks to prominent positions. "It is a wholesome convincing record which the commissioner places before the public; a report which is made from the proper angle and which should indeed be kept in mind when sporadic instances of parole violation, or resort to crime even more violent than the parolee's original violation, push their way to spectacular attention."

Dr. Vance At Country Life Conference

Dr. Rupert B. Vance of the Institute for research in the social sciences will speak Friday before the Country Life conference at Lexington, Ky., on "Tenants and Crops."

While Vance is away from the University he will have several special conferences in the nation's capital.

Tuesday Dr. Vance spoke to an audience at Johns Hopkins university using "Basic Social Trends in the South" as his topic.

Letters To The Editor

Over 100 Words Subject to Cutting

• Answering Clark To The Editor.

Dear Sir:
A recent news item in the DAILY TAR HEEL containing a communication in which Mr. David Clark of Charlotte stated that President Graham "is attempting to control members of the faculty of the three branches of the University upon the basis of fear, that is, fear of being unable to secure promotion or of losing their positions if they are not subservient to him" interests me very much.

I have no desire to enter into any controversy with Mr. Clark. Neither do I think that President Graham needs defending by a member of his faculty. However, I do feel that Mr. Clark's statements were made without a full knowledge of President Graham's relation with the members of the faculty of the three branches of the University.

Of course, President Graham has not always followed the advice of the faculty of the three branches of the University. If he had done so there would have been no transfer of State College's School of Science and Business and of the Woman's College School of Library Science to the University at Chapel Hill or of the School of Engineering of the University at Chapel Hill to State College. These changes were made against the wishes and sometimes over the protests of the faculty of the branch from which the activity was moved. But there was no indication that any member of the faculty of any branch of the University was afraid to express an opinion during the time these matters were under consideration, nor is there any evidence that President Graham has attempted to demote or remove any faculty member for his actions in these changes.

Coming Politics Cast Shadows On State House Steps

Pictured here with Governor Hoey at a capitol entrance are the State college students in charge of this year's pocked legislature. Front row, left to right: B. G. Andrews, Dick McPhail, Governor Hoey, Morton Brown, and Horace McSwain. Middle row, R. S. Smith, J. D. Thompson, J. F. Webb, Jr., and T. N. Stainback. Back row, C. K. Watkins, president of the Student Legislative assembly, R. L. Edwards, C. S. Harris, and H. B. Huberman. Fifteen Carolina students, chosen from the CPU, Di senate and Debate squad will participate. A partial list includes Sam Hobbs, chairman, Harry Gatton, DeWitt Barnett, Ben Dixon, Horace Richter, Roy Clark and Bill Cole.

During the school year 1934-1935 it became evident that under consolidation the School of Science and Business at State College would lose its curricula the faculty of this school prepared a curriculum in General Science which, it was hoped, would be substituted for the curricula being discontinued. When the curriculum was presented to the Policies Committee of State College, in March, 1935, President Graham met with the committee and objected to the curriculum on the ground that it was attempting to continue a function of State College which was not in keeping with the plans of consolidation. Four of the nine members of the committee disagreed openly with President Graham. A year or two later the writer heard President Graham state his admiration for the frank and open manner in which those members of the committee who disagreed with him expressed their ideas.

Less than thirty days after the meeting of the Policies Committee at which President Graham expressed his disapproval of the curriculum in General Science as prepared by the faculty of the School of Science and Business, a committee of ten members from the School of Agriculture of State College, known as the Applied Science Committee, met and recommended that twelve departments from different schools of the College be grouped into one school to be known as a College of General Science. The committee expressed its opinion that strong departments in such a College were necessary for an outstanding College of Agriculture. This proposal was not in keeping with the plans of consolidation, but not a single member of the committee has been discriminated against for making the proposal.

The faculty of the School of Science and Business did not agree with President Graham's actions of March, 1935, relative to the curriculum in General Science. During the spring term of that year a program was prepared, seven members were assigned topics to discuss and President Graham was invited to attend a meeting and hear the ideas of the School of Science and Business relative to the proposed curriculum. He came and listened very attentively, but did not change his mind.

It is interesting to note what happened to those members of the faculty of State College who opposed President Graham on that occasion. The dean of the School of Science and Business who presided and presented the speakers is now dean of the Basic Division of State College. One man who was a professor in State College is now a professor in the University at Chapel Hill. Another who was an associate professor in State College is now a professor in the University at Chapel Hill. One man who was an assistant professor in State College is now an associate professor. Another who was an associate professor is now a professor. One professor who took part in that program has retained his professorship and has had the administration of a new curriculum added to his duties. In addition he has been elected to the Administrative Council of the University of North Carolina and has been appointed to the Athletic Council of State College, all with the approval of President Graham. The other two men who appeared on the program were professors in State College at the time and are so listed in the current catalog.

A number of similar cases could be cited but space does not permit.

In the early days of consolidation there was fear in the faculty at State College, not of President Graham, but of the uncertain future. With the election of President Graham to the presidency of the Greater University of North Carolina new hope was born. Today the whole faculty of State College confidently looks forward to a bright future under his leadership.
