Hill Hall Program Includes Send-Off For Footballers

A combination pep rally, team send-off, and football clinic will take place tonight in Hill music hall beginning at 7:15, under the joint sponsorship of the University club and Graham Memorial. Various programs have been welded together to give students a concentrated dose of Carolina spirit. A request has been made by Bob Magill, director of Graham Memorial, and Jimmy Davis, president of the University club, that during the rally special care be taken of the furniture in Hill Music hall. No smoking will be allowed because of the carpets and upholstery, and students are asked to refrain from standing on the seats.

players who will clash with the Fordham Rams are expected to attend.

Assistant Coach Johnny Vaught will pinch-hit for Wolf in the capacity of dean of the football clinic. The long-awaited movies of the Carolina-Duke game will be shown, and Vaught will continue Wolf's talks, lead discussion and answer all questions.

Pat Patterson, head cheerleader, and his leather-lunged cohorts will lead cheers and the song fest, a recent innovation at Carolina rallies.

Due to the very large attendance at the football clinics, Bob Magill, director of the student union, has moved it to Hill music hall where the crowds can be accommodated more satisfactorily.

PLAYMAKERS TO PRESENT ONE-ACT PLAYS TOMORROW

Group Will Tour After Performance Saturday Evening

Three new one-act plays will be presented by the Playmaker tour company at Chapel Hill high school auditorium tomorrow and Saturday at 8:30 p. m. From Chapel Hill, the company will go to Raleigh, Harrisburg, Va., Waynesboro, Va., Hampton, Va., and Penn Yan, N. Y. on their 36th tour under the direction of Professor F. H. Koch.

Year before last, "Three Foolish Virgins," first of the new plays, won the Playmaker award for the best play of the annual festival of the Carolina Dramatic Association in Chapel Hill. Concerning the real-life counterparts of the characters in her play, Mrs. Bernice Kelly Harris writes: "The curtain has gone down on Miss Sarah Hodges, principal in a trio of bookishly quaint old maids, relief cases all, who live alone, carding, spinning, knitting, and, as Miss Sarah would have it, waiting for a cavalier."

TWO MORE PLAYS

"Soldadera" (soldier-woman), by Josephine Niggli, the heroic struggle of Mexican Valkyries in the Revolution of 1910, portrays the effect of the revolution on the women, writes Miss Niggli, who left their homes and dragged after their men, cooking for them, dressing their wounds, tending them, fighting when necessary, broken shells whose only desire was for revenge for all they had suffered during those horror-ridden years before 1910.

"Magnolia's Man", by Gertrude Wilson Coffin, goes back to 1904, ten years before the outbreak of the World War, to a time when freedom had not yet come to the rescue of the spinster. In rural North Carolina then

KAY KYSER TO TREAT ALUMNI FRIDAY NIGHT

New York Grads Meet Saturday Before Ram Tilt

By JIM VAWTER

Big doings and festivities will take place in New York city this weekend preceding and following the football game between the University and Fordham.

One important interest will be centered around Kay Kyser, graduate of Carolina and now a nationally famed orchestra leader. Kyser, through correspondence with Maryon Saunders, executive head of the Carolina alumni association, has arranged for a gala affair, possibly broadcast, Friday night in the Manhattan room of the Pennsylvania hotel where his band appears.

All Friday evening Kyser and his band will feature "Carolina spirit" and all University of North Carolina alumni and students have been cordially invited to take part. Throughout the entire evening Kay will call upon prominent Carolina alumni present to speak a few words. Dean Francis Bradshaw and Maryon Saunders have been invited to be there and greet all alumni and students.

Another feature connected with Kay Kyser will take place at the game Saturday afternoon. He has been invited by the Fordham band to lead them in paying tribute to the Carolina section with "Hark the Sound."

After presenting the North Carolina song, the band leader wished the Tar Heel eleven much luck in day after tomorrow's northern invasion.

Now Is The Time For All Seniors To Pass The Budget

President Felix Markham

Seniors are expected to bring their own fireworks this morning as they abandon coeds and coeds to assemble at 10:30 in Memorial hall for consideration of the proposed class budget.

Surprise of the arithmetical tangle yesterday submitted to the DAILY TAR HEEL was a $250 appropriation for the senior dance. Last week the juniors set aside $1,250 for their half of the affair.

QUORUM PLEASE

President Felix Markham called attention to the fact that a quorum of class membership must be on hand before any action could be taken toward passing the carefully balanced piece of finance committee manipulation.

Figure for both income and outgo has been tentatively set at $5,572. Largest single appropriation is $2,450 for the Yackety-Yack. Smallest squandering will be $2 for stamps and telegrams.

Jenkins Compiles Public Documents

Dr. W. S. Jenkins, professor of political science at the University, is preparing a collection of public documents including files of session laws and legislative journals for the library here.

In collaboration with W. W. Smiley of the University library staff, and aided by grants from the Smith fund, Dr. Jenkins has microfilmed a large number of unique public documents for the collection.

While on a Kenan leave of absence from the University during the fall of last year, Dr. Jenkins studied in Washington, New York, and Boston, large collections of public documents of all the states. This fall, with the aid of the social science research council, he is working through manuscript papers of Congress and through correspondence of the Department of State in the Library of Congress and at the National Archives.

Dorm Selling To Be Voted Upon Tonight

NEW PAMPHLET BY WEAVER, HAMMER GAINS RECOGNITION

Publication To Be Used In Course At Columbia

A pamphlet written this year by Fred Weaver and Phillip G. Hammer explaining self-government at the University is rapidly gaining recognition as marking a new milestone in the history of student government.

The Columbia Teachers' college has asked that 100 copies of the pamphlet be sent to its library, so that they might be used as reference in connection with a course in student government. Among the other associations and institutions which sent for copies were the American Association of Deans and Advisors of Men and the University of Florida.

In the October 15 issue of the publication of the National Student Federation, a review of the pamphlet was printed, praising the work of Weaver and Hammer. After telling of the substance of the leaflet, the reviewer concluded by lauding the publication in the following words: "The work of Mr. Weaver and Mr. Hammer provides an admirable model for work which may be done on other campuses. A body of information gathered from such reports from institutions over the country would make available the genuine survey of student government procedures, techniques, and values."

This present explanation of student government at the University is not the first of its kind, however. Jeff Fordham, president of the student body in 1937, published the first booklet during that year. Maine Albright issued a pamphlet in 1931, giving further information, and explaining the progress of the student government.

With its two preceding booklets, the pamphlet written by Weaver and Hammer has shown the position which the student government at the University maintains in comparison with the other colleges of the country. The booklet points out that through "individual responsibility" the student at North Carolina leads a unique college life. The privileges enjoyed by the undergraduates here are unequalled by any other university.

As co-authors Weaver and Hammer point out, "This University endeavors to bring young people into manhood by education. One of the primary attributes of manhood is independent or self-determining responsibility."

Group Selects Members To Serve On New Assembly

Closing a hot battle between the 16 members nominated, the Interdormitory council elected 10 councilmen last night to represent the group in the new student legislature.

Herb Langsam, Bob McLemore, Walter Kleeman, Jack Hughes, Bill Broadfoot, Jack Vincent, Bill Pearson, Mitchell Britt, John Slingetray, and Joe Boak were the men chosen.

Allen Merrill, editor of the DAILY TAR HEEL, and Jim Joyner, president of the student body, spoke during the meeting in order to clarify matters brought up by the council about the legislature.

President Puddin' Wales told the council that what they had expressed as necessary for betterment in the dormitories had been paralleled recently by work in the administration. He stated that results had been obtained and many dormitory problems have been solved. There is a great need for the meeting of individual councils in the dormitories, he said.

Look, Joe College

To all the Joes, Jakes, Johns, and Jims who called the DAILY TAR HEEL night office as this issue was in the making, all we can say is that we do NOT know anything about those mysterious notes telling people to call us.

As far as we know there have been no pictures made of cake races, track teams, etcetera, for this publication.

Carolina Spirit Pays, For—

"Tarzan" Breaks Into Print After Cheering For Years

Publicized

"Tarzan" Morris, ex-officio Carolina grad, does more yelling for the Tar Heels than ten freshman quadrangle flashes.

By FRANK GOLDSMITH

"Tarzan's" famous yell is as much a part of North Carolina football equipment as tape, helmet, and shoestrings," according to Jack Miley in his article "Yahooo Football Trailers" which is run in the November 17 issue of Ken Magazine.

No true Carolina rooster need be acquainted with "Tarzan's" ear splitting cry which rents the air every time a Tar Heel eleven takes to the gridiron, but Mr. Miley goes farther into the background of the "loudest one man cheering section." According to the article, between Carolina games "Tarzan" or Lathe Morris, a native Texan, works for a living on a tobacco farm down in Farmville, North Carolina. But as soon as Ray Wolf's Tar Heel outfit goes into action late in September Morris is on his way to Kenan stadium to hog call the Carolina eleven to victory. His wife has become more or less resigned to her husband's peculiar hobby, having enveighed him into giving her a new dress every time he goes to a game.

"DON'T YELL FOR NUTTIN'" "Tarzan" is not the type who yells for yelling's sake, as he is well acquainted with the game, having played quarterback on the undefeated Blinn

Advisory Board Raises Question Of Soliciting

Bill Cole, chairman of the Student advisory committee, announced last night that a poll would be taken this evening to learn the students' reactions concerning soliciting in dormitories. About 25 National Youth administration students will canvass each dormitory room, during the course of the evening.

There are three questions to be answered by the dorm residents. The first is: Do you approve of the University's regulation which prohibits commercial solicitors from canvassing dormitory rooms? The second is: Should self-help students, approved by the University self-help committee, be allowed to canvass dormitory rooms as representatives of commercial firms?

The question which led to the conducting of the poll concerns the selling of newspaper subscriptions. It is stated as the following: Would you object to self-help students, approved by the University self-help committee, canvassing dormitory rooms for subscriptions to the daily papers during the first week of each academic quarter between the hours of 8:30-11:30 p. m.?

When several officials on the campus were interviewed concerning the poll, they reminded that the University enforced the soliciting regulation, because of the continuous flow of salesmen of all types who were disturbing the students in the midst of studying.
