MRS. MORGAN TO OPEN SERIES OF LECTURES TODAY

Men-Coed Relations Will Form Theme Of Discussions

Dr. Mildred Morgan, prominent authority on men-women relations, begins a series of lecture and discussion groups tonight at 7 o'clock in the Methodist church. "Intelligent Courtship" will be the subject of the opening talk.

This afternoon the delegation to the Blue Ridge YM-YWCA conference last summer and the YM-YWCA groups here will entertain Mrs. Morgan at a tea in Graham Memorial from 4:30 to 6 o'clock. The student body is invited to attend.

Blue Ridge representatives highly recommend Mrs. Morgan as a charming personality and capable speaker. Both men and women delegates praise her as a witty, entertaining, well-informed lecturer. As one representative remarked "she has a whole lot of room to talk" as she is married and bases her information on her own life and the lives of her intimate friends.

OPEN DISCUSSIONS

Dr. Morgan's approach to the problem of men-women relations is a practical one unbiased by religious or other prejudices. Her lectures usually take the form of open forum discussions in which she asks the opinions of the members of the audience and supplements their views with her own.

The lecture series will concern the problems and considerations of courtship, engagement, marriage, and campus life particularly as applied to this campus. Students are requested to ask questions. If they do not wish to do so in assembly, they may write them out and drop them in the box provided for the purpose at the YMCA building. Also Mrs. Morgan will be (Continued on page two)

Fordham Attempts Field Goals In Effort To Score

By SHELLEY ROLFE
(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Nov. 12—An underdog University of North Carolina football team, accorded no chance in pre-game estimates by the experts, came out of Dixie this afternoon and completely outgamed and outfought the Fordham Rams here before 30,000 paying customers.

Stalling the Ram attack after the early portion of the first quarter, Carolina made two scoring thrusts on its own accord—one in the dying moments of the second quarter when Steve Maronic missed fire on a fake field goal on the Ram 26-yard line and the other ran out in the last period when George Watson fumbled after Carolina had taken the ball on the Fordham 35.

FIELD GOALS FAIL

After driving down to the Carolina 25 early in the game Fordham could never steam up its attack again. The Rams made two fourth period attempts at field goals but both failed. One was blocked and the other bounced off the cross bar. Len Eshmont, star Ram sophomore, was stopped colder than a frozen herring.

On the first play of the quarter, after Fordham had driven eight yards to the Carolina 19, Wilbur Stanton, Ram place-kicking artist who beat St. Mary's last week on a kick from the same spot went in to his duty. He failed, for the entire Carolina line rushed him, and the resulting boot was a slow dribbler that barely got over the line of scrimmage.

Later in the period Fordham passed from its own 42 to the Tar Heel 18 on a five-yard penalty and along down the middle forward from Kazelo to Jacuski. After a pass and a line buck were set back, Kazelo dropped back to kick a field goal, but the ball bounced off the cross bar out of the end zone.

STELLAR STIRNY

George Stirnweiss, coming back to play against the school he went to for two weeks, was the hub of the Carolina attack aided by Jack Kraynick, had a 45-yard punting average that helped the Tar Heels hold Fordham at bay the second half, and he was the most consistent ground gainer on the field.

Stirny started the second quarter drive by cutting back and forth through the Fordham secondary from the Tar Heel 23 to the 34. Then Kraynick took command to run the ball down to the Fordham 19 in three (Continued on page three)

YM-YWCA Begin New Services

Worship committees of the four YM and YWCA cabinets inaugurated this week a familiar and generally well liked morning service of contemplation and thought. Since Tuesday morning small groups of students have met at 8:15 in the assembly room upstairs in the YMCA building for the first of these periods of meditation.

Anyone may attend these seven minute meetings which will be held every weekday during the year. There will be no stereotyped form of worship service. Several books adapted to the religious problems of young people are kept in the assembly room. Students will enter the group in silence, read these works or books of their own choice, and if they discover a passage or thought which would be of interest to all, they may present it to (Continued on page two)

IRC ROUND TABLE ON AIR TODAY

Student's To Speak On 'Mediterranean'

The University of North Carolina Round Table again goes on the air this afternoon from 3 to 3:30 over WPTF and represents the fifth in a series of broadcasts sponsored by the International Relations club. The broadcast today features students who will discuss "The Mediterranean Situation." Henry Nigrelli will preside and those participating are: Niles Bond, Charles Lerche, and John Busby.

Participants will attempt to present the conflicts that prevail in the Mediterranean area, emphasizing the Anglo-Italian collision. The Mediterranean, so often called the "Dangerous Sea," has been a focal point about which the destinies of nations have been decided and it looms still as an all-important keynote in international politics.

The broadcast has received considerable interest and efforts are being made to hook-up the broadcast on a southern network so that the pro- (Continued on last page)

President To Appear At CPU Anniversary

Chief Executive May Announce New Legislative Program

By JIM McADEN

Franklin D. Roosevelt will visit the campus of the University of North Carolina December 5 to make a nationwide address in connection with the Carolina Political Union's third anniversary celebration.

Presidential Secretary Marvin McIntyre called union Chairman Voit Gilmore from the White House at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, making the official announcement of the chief executive's first speech of primary importance in North Carolina since 1936.

The address, which will undoubtedly be broadcast over a national radio hookup, will be of national interest, in that the President has yet to make known his plans for congressional legislation for the next year. He is expected to announce a proposed program for which he and his legislative leaders will attempt to gain congressional approval.

RECEPTION PLANNED

Although definite details of the speech, which is occasion for the first visit of an incumbent United States president to the University, have not been decided upon, Gilmore and University President Frank Porter Graham are already making arrangements for the Roosevelt reception here and contacting various persons of state and national importance whose presence here December 5 is anticipated.

The scene of the address will be decided by weather. Woollen gymnasium will be furnished with approximately 8,000 seats in case it is too cold or rainy for an outdoor talk while Kenan stadium, with normal capacity of over 24,000, will be ready for use.

RESULT OF 3 YEARS WORK

The presidential visit will culminate three years of constant work by the Carolina Political Union, lead successively by Frank McGlinn, Alex Heard, and now Voit Gilmore. Last spring Roosevelt was scheduled to speak here, but failed to complete plans for the trip. It was just last month that Gilmore visited Washington. (Continued on page two)
