Administration Bans Student Labor At Opera

Heels Close Season Tomorrow; Band To Play At Final Game

Six Varsity Men End Collegiate Football Careers

By SHELLEY ROLFE
The University of North Carolina football team reaches the end of its 1938 trail with the traditional Thanksgiving day game against Virginia at Charlottesville tomorrow. Game time is 2 o'clock.

Six Tar Heel players, Co-captains Steve Maronic and George Watson, Bob Adam, Horace Palmer, Carl Peiffer, and Jack Kraynick, will be performing in the final game of their college career. Only Adam will not be in the starting line-up, as he was hurt in scrimmage last week.

PEIFFER STARTS

Peiffer will be starting his first game of the season at left-end in place of Chuck Kline. Palmer will be at the other end. Maronic's tackle mate will be Gates Kimball. Jim Woodson and Dan Desich, both of whom will be back next season, start at guards; while Bob Smith is down as center. The backfield will be George Stirnweiss, George Radman, Watson, and Kraynick.

Carolina goes into the game heavy favorites to trip the Cavaliers for the nineteenth time in the long series. Virginia has won 21 times, taking most of them before the war. The Cavaliers last took a battle in 1932, winning 14-6.

The Tar Heels will be out after their sixth win of the campaign, hoping to finish with a record of six triumphs, two defeats, and a tie for the year. The Wolfmen have beaten Wake Forest, State, NYU, Virginia Tech, and Davidson, have been dropped by Duke and Tulane, and two weeks ago achieved their most successful coup de grace of the season by holding Fordham to a scoreless tie.

Committee Still Undecided On Gift

Chairman Raney Solicits Suggestions From Whole Campus

Bill Raney, chairman of the senior class gift committee, announced yesterday that as yet the committee has not decided on the gift to be presented to the University by the class.

The following projects, according to Raney, are under consideration and are being thoroughly investigated: a recording machine for the preservation of speeches and music, a set of fiction books or a set of scientific books, either of which would be presented to the library and a sundial to be erected in the park in front of the library. Also under consideration is the plan of rebuilding the ancient telescope here, which is believed to be the first telescope used in the United States; and the committee is also thinking of contributing to the fund for the installation of new seats in Memorial hall.

Raney said that the committee was very anxious to receive suggestions from anyone on the campus, including the students of all classes and members of the faculty.

In The Old Days—

Students Used Pistols, Dirks For Playthings Before Autos

"Too Lively Virginian" Charged With Six Offenses In 1818; Fights Common

By EMILY POLK CROW
In Chapel Hill today automobiles are the most dangerous playthings the students have. Before the automobile, students had other playthings equally as dangerous—the most common of these being the pistol and the dirk.

Fights were a common occurrence at the University at the beginning of the 19th century. In 1818, one boy whom Dr. Battle terms a "too lively Virginian" was charged with the following offenses:

1. With torturing animals with spirits of turpentine.
2. With lying.
3. With slandering the faculty.
4. With threatening physical violence to a member of the faculty.
5. With writing scurrilous and (Continued on page two)

"CAM" CAMERON, STUDENT FUNDS AUDITOR, RESIGNS

Clyde Shaw Will Succeed To Vacant Office Next Month

Resignation of M. T. Cameron, student activities fund auditor, was rendered at the meeting of the Student Audit board held yesterday. Clyde Shaw, University graduate of last June, was named Cameron's successor. The latter will vacate his post about the middle of next month.

Cameron will fill a position with the Haskins and Sells company of Charlotte. He was graduated from the University two years ago, and makes his home in Cameron.

As an accounting major, Shaw, whose home is in Concord, made a brilliant record at the University, being a member of Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity. After his graduation last spring, he was employed by the C. B. Everson company of Winston-Salem. Since this fall, however, Shaw has acted in the capacity of graduate assistant in the commerce school.

The board also passed action yesterday on the bill providing the auditing of all student activity books by an outside firm. The report will then be open to public inspection.

ACTION IS TAKEN TO KEEP STUDENTS FROM UNION ISSUE

Dean House Refers To Situation As Being "Ridiculous"

An alleged "picket line" which some feared might develop into a "ridiculous" demonstration was avoided at the campus production of "Faust" last night after the University administration banned the participation of 25 student workers who were to assist the Opera-on-Tour company as stage hands.

Stating that the administration was in no way concerned with the issues involved, Dean House, in making a pre-curtain speech before last night's performance, said that its primary consideration was a responsibility not to involve students in a labor dispute.

NO ISSUE CONSIDERED

"We have received today information," said House, "that we should not furnish students as strike-breakers. The situation does look ridiculous. Situations of this sort being disagreeable, and students being involved, we decided it best to request the students not to perform this service. We don't give a hang about issues on either side. We are thinking of our responsibility to students and parents and we're trying not to make an issue of the thing."

"CANNED MUSIC"

In the past the opera company has followed the plan of employing stage hands at every performance to assist in handling the scenery. However, the stage-hand union, because of an agreement with the musicians' union, has refused to allow their members to be connected in any way with the Opera-on-Tour company. This is due to the fact that the company does not employ an orchestra, but uses "canned" instrumental music.

Women's Dorm Wins Contest

Campus Gives Over $200 In Red Cross Membership Drive

New Women's Dormitory, by strengthening their lead last night, won first place in the Red Cross competition for campus dormitories, it was announced late last night. R. H. Grumman, of the Extension division of the University, said the total funds received to date from both the fraternity and dormitory contests had reached the $210.53 mark.

A total of $143.17 was contributed by the fraternities while the dormitories gave the remaining $66.36 in answer to the call. Grumman also stated that 678 members had been enrolled as contributors to the Red Cross, as compared with the mark of 600 set as the quota for the University. He predicted that there was a possibility of the enrollment climbing to 750, if expected returns come in.

Graham dormitory finished a close second to the coed residence, with Everett winning third place.
