Pearson Rally Will Feature Woodhouse

Unusual Step Is Taken By Aspirant For Presidency

Bill Pearson, independent candidate for student body presidency, last night announced plans for a Pearson Rally to be given Monday night in Swain hall at 8 o'clock.

The unusual rally will be headlined by Dr. E. J. Woodhouse, instructor of political science, who will make an impartial talk on "Campus Democracy and Why Vote."

Pearson said the meeting would be sponsored by friends "interested in the fight against totalitarian odds."

MUSIC

Music for the occasion will be provided by Jeep Bennet, his clarinet, his orchestra, and his wife as vocalist. Along with his swing arrangements, "Jeep" will introduce a specially written Pearson campaign song.

Alonzo Squires, blind freshman student, will offer impersonations and will feature a blow-by-blow description of the "Pearson-Davis fight."

In releasing news of his latest campaign step, Pearson declared:

ENCOURAGED

"I have been greatly encouraged lately by the recent reports of support which have come to me not only from close friends, but from others who, sympathizing with the principles at stake, wish to help me in the abolition of clique control. Right now, before our eyes and undistorted in its most objectionable form, there is a condition which necessitates alleviation. Student Government is on a trial-election or appointment!"

Carolina Dances Are Nearly As Old As Carolina Itself

Knife Fights And Fancy Costumes Were Features Of Old-Time Affairs

By GLADYS BEST TRIPP (This is the third in a series of historical features by Miss Tripp) "My pantaloons were white canon crepe, lined with pink muslin and showed a peach blossom tinge," wrote General E. J. Mallett to a friend in speaking of the dances he attended at the University in 1818. Later in the century the costumes for dancing changed to a black broadcloth coat, usually bought for $34, cassimere pantaloons at $14, and a British florentine waistcoat for $8, with a total cost for a "tuxedo" at $56.

Dancing has been popular at the University since the year after its doors were opened, when the students were permitted in 1796 to attend dancing schools. For $2 a month, Mr. Perrin, (Continued on page two)

Illinois Congressman Brings HRI To Close With Address Today On American Politics; Rice, Buchanan Debate Forms Of Education

Progressivist And Essentialist Theories Argued

The progressivist and essentialist forms of education were debated last evening at Memorial hall by Dean Scott Buchanan of St. John's College and Dr. John A. Rice, former rector of Black Mountain College. The talks given by the two men were supplemented by brief remarks from Dr. I. L. Kandel of Columbia University.

Dr. Rice urged the application of the principles of freedom as meaning "just take a walk anywhere," in the field of education and even as a basis for life. He defined the differences between the type of government now existent in this country and that in totalitarian states, as being a difference in the areas of freedom. In the democracies, the progressivist pointed out, we have the opportunity to decide what our areas of freedom should be, while in the totalitarian state, only the leaders determine what areas of freedom should exist.

The noted educator then stressed the need for a totalitarian man in the world today. Differentiating between the totalitarian man and the state, he stated that the man must be knowing, communicating, and thinking. By knowing he must read both the best and the worst books, and above all he must know himself; by communicating he must transmute both in language and feeling; by thinking he must think about what he hears, reflecting upon his own and others' (Continued on last page)

NATIVE EXPLAINS CHINESE STAND

Tsui Says Japanese Initiated Aggression

T. L. Tsui, first secretary to the Chinese embassy in Washington, spoke to a large crowd at the morning Human Relations session yesterday on the "Significance to the World of the Sino-Japanese Conflict."

The Japanese aggression, which began with the taking of Manchuria in 1931, was the signal, Mr. Tsui said, for other nations to seize territory, for Italy to take Ethiopia, and for Germany to take Austria and Czechoslovakia. This lawlessness, begun by Japan, was a disease which spread to other parts of the world.

In surprise announcement late last night, Bill Lange, associate football coach and member of the physical education staff, was appointed to succeed Walter Skidmore as Carolina's basketball coach.

INGENIOUS TRAP IS RESPONSIBLE FOR CAPTURE

Judge Phipps Fines Culprit $25; Places Him On Probation

By RUSH HAMRICK

Caught after an ingenious trap had been laid by officials of the University library, a graduate student with unusually high grades was convicted in Chapel Hill recorder's court this week of stealing money from carrels in the rear of the building.

No definite statement of the amount of money stolen could be obtained, but reports placed the sum in the vicinity of $50. The culprit was fined $25 by Judge L. J. Phipps and placed under probation.

From statements obtained at an informal gathering of library officials and graduate students, suspicion for a series of minor robberies and thefts had been fixed on the graduate student. After the meeting library officials laid a plan for his capture in such a way that there could be no doubt of his guilt.

TRAP LAID

On Wednesday, March 29, the suspect came to the reading room of the library. Immediately upon seeing him a library official sent one of his assistants to a carrel, which the student frequently used, with a pocket book in which marked money had been placed. The assistant placed the lure in a chair and then concealed himself among the stacks of books.

The suspect left the reading room, and immediately a buzzer warned the library assistant of his approach.

Passing by the carrel, the suspect saw the pocket book. He went down the aisle, supposedly looking at books in the stacks; and walked back again, this time observing the other occupants of the small room. He then placed his hand on the pocketbook, snatched it hurriedly, and proceeded to empty its contents, taking only the money. Using his handkerchief, he now attempted to erase all fingerprints from the pocket (Continued on last page)

Smith Will Speak At 10 O'clock In Memorial Hall

The Human Relations Institute meeting will come to a conclusion this morning at 10 o'clock in Memorial hall, when T. V. Smith, Democratic congressman from Illinois, will talk on "Promise of American Politics." Throughout the morning classroom seminars will continue, however, in which Professor I. L. Kandel, Dr. John A. Rice, Dean Scott Buchanan, and Smith will speak.

Directly after reviewing the American political scene, the Illinois representative will remain in Memorial hall and will speak for Dr. Thomas and Dr. Kattsoff's political science and philosophy classes on "The Individual and the State." The public is invited to attend this lecture as it is the other seminars.

Dr. John Rice, president of Black Mountain college, will address the Hill Foundation tonight at 7:30 in Graham Memorial.

PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER

Smith has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the presidency on the Democratic ticket in 1940. He is noted not only as a politician, but also as a philosopher. Among the books that he has written are: "The Democratic Way of Life" and "The Philosophic Way of Life." During the past five weeks he has been appearing with Robert A. Taft, Governor of Ohio and rumored Republican presidential nominee, in a series of programs over the National Broadcasting Company on "The Foundations of Democracy."

This morning's program closes out a week of outstanding speakers in the several fields dealt with by the institute. Beginning with Dorothy Thompson's "A Modern Conservative View Point of a Modern Revolutionary World," the Institute moved into more specific ground, discussion of pertinent sectional, national, and international questions. "Our Future Economic Policy" was discussed by David Cushman Coyle, Mordecai Ezekiel, James H. Rogers, J. J. Spengler, Gottfried von Haberler, and George Galloway.

OTHER TOPICS

"The Need for Planning in the South" was the next topic dealt with. Arthur Raper, Howard W. Odum, Barry Bingham, Ralph Davis, W. W. Alexander, and Jonathan Daniels all offered plans for the solution of the South's problems. The International situation, touched on by Dorothy Thompson, was reviewed by men of opposite views. W. H. Auden, British writer, presented the socialist viewpoint, while Laurence Dennis, banker, talked from a reactionary standpoint.

The relation between business and industry was discussed by Russell Day (Continued on page two)

Coeds Possess Big Reserve Of Excuses For Unwanted Dates

Experienced Girls Expose Fool-Proof Male-Shedding Methods

BY SANFORD STEIN

If a Carolina coed ever tells you she has never refused a date, she either has never been asked, is president of the Liars' club, or is afflicted with a martyr complex. Turning down an undesirable male in such a way that he's still good for an occasional cut at a Grail dance is a problem that all female inmates of Chapel Hill must face. It is truly a hard nut to crack, but no Carolina coed is ever mentally drowned.

Therefore, we have compiled a summary of the major excuses used by girls on this campus for rejecting potential dates. Our information has been obtained from authoritative sources— (Continued on page two)

COACH TO TAKE NEW POSITION ON FIRST OF JULY

New Mentor Came To Chapel Hill Three Years Ago

Bill Lange, associate football coach and member of the faculty of the physical education department of the University, was late last night appointed to succeed Walter Skidmore as basketball coach for Carolina, Coach Robert A. Fetzer, head of the Athletic association, announced after a call meeting of the coaching staff. The new mentor will assume his duties July 1.

A native of Huron, Ohio where he starred on the basketball and football teams, Coach Lange came to Chapel Hill in 1936. He is a graduate of the class of 1921 at Wittenberg college in Ohio. Here he played basketball, football and baseball, making the Ohio all-state team in basketball and football.

After receiving his diploma, Lange taught school for two years, and for one year he managed and played on the Cleveland professional basketball squad. He then was coach and athletic director for 13 years at Muskingum college in Ohio where his teams made excellent records.

The announcement came sooner than was expected as it was believed that this matter would not have been taken up until the meeting of the Athletic council Monday night.

STUDENTS PLAN SUNRISE SERVICE

Easter Ceremonies To Begin At 5:15

Fetzer field will be the scene early Sunday morning of what is planned as an impressive Easter Sunrise service, sponsored by the YM and YWCA groups and conducted entirely by students. John Bonner, vice-president of the YMCA, and Miss Jo Martin will serve as co-chairmen.

"Significance of the Resurrection" will be the theme of the service, which will get underway at 5:15 a.m. The YM and YWCA hold the service every year.

HYMNS

The program will begin with the singing of Easter hymns, followed by scripture reading, "The Easter Story." After prayers and silent meditations, hymns will be led by the University men's and women's glee clubs, and the YMCA quartet will be heard in a selection.

For special meditations, poems will be read from the book by Stud-dard Kennedy, "The Word and the Work," and prose selections from Albert Schweitzer's book, "His Life and Hours," will be read.

Group Explains Fool Queen Choice

To clear up a misunderstanding about the nominations for the May Queen and her court, the May Day committee yesterday emphasized that the selections made by the nominating committee are only suggestions and that students are free to vote for any women students they choose.

The choices of the committee were made with the effectiveness of the whole pageant in mind as well as the beauty of the individual women.

Photographs of the nominees will be posted in the YMCA.
