SOPH CLASS GETS QUORUM TO PASS YEARBOOK BILL

Group Will Have Individual Pictures In Yackety Yack

Individual pictures of the sophomore class in the Yackety Yack heretofore only a dream, will become a reality next year. The rising sophomore class finally drew a majority to Memorial hall yesterday morning, aided by the jiving of Charlie Wood's "Swing-wing" quartet, to pass the measure by a unanimous vote of the 389 freshmen present.

SECOND ATTEMPT

A quorum of 375 was needed to act upon the bill submitted by Bill Alexander, rising sophomore class president. This number failed to appear at a called meeting of the class last week, when Charlie Wood's All-campus band furnished entertainment. Since that time numerous freshmen have spoken in favor of individual pictures, especially after seeing the group pictures which later appeared in the 1939 Yackety Yack.

The rising sophomore class, by voting for individual photographs, has set a precedent over other classes of the past.

President Bill Alexander stated yesterday: "Since the majority of the class favored the individual pictures, we've done much for the betterment of our school and our yearbook."

New Stamp Club To Hold Auction Tonight At 8

Under the guidance of Dr. George C. Taylor of the English department, a Chapel Hill stamp club is being organized, with its first meeting to be held in the small lounge of Graham Memorial tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

According to Dr. Taylor, the club will be organized along financial as well as purely interest lines, and each meeting will include a stamp auction in which collectors can sell duplicates and also purchase stamps below market prices. In addition, each auction will be followed by an informal period for trading, discussion, and exhibition of collections.

"A club of this sort will fill a definite need in North Carolina," Dr. Taylor asserted. It is hoped that Chapel Hill will become the stamp center of North Carolina.

CHOICE ITEMS FOR AUCTION

The main feature of the initial meeting Wednesday night in Graham Memorial will be an auction, for which many choice items have already been submitted including mint coronation issues from Ceylon, India, Strait Settlements, and Hong Kong; a selection of the Trans-Mississippi issue of 1898; and a mint plate number strip of the two cent 1895 U. S. issue from the famous Crocker selection which has just been auctioned in New York.

There is still room for more items in the auction, and collectors wishing to place items on sale must submit the stamps with Catalogue number, value, and minimum price of sale to the secretary, Frank Turner sometime prior to Wednesday night.

A large crowd of philatelists is expected as notices have been sent out all over the State inviting collectors to this meeting.

Matsner To Address Medical Students

Dr. Eric M. Matsner, an outstanding authority on birth control in this country, will speak Friday to the medical students of the University and to the public health department. His address will concern the modern aspects of birth control.

Dr. Matsner is a representative of the Birth Control Federation of America and is touring through this part of the country. He will speak at Duke Saturday. Tentative arrangements are for Dr. Matsner to make his address here from 12 to 1 o'clock. The place has not yet been decided upon.

THREE PLAYMAKER EXPERIMENTALS SET FOR TONIGHT

Tickets Obtainable From John Parker At South Building

Texas, Massachusetts, and the Great Smoky Mountains of North Carolina form the setting for the three new plays to be produced experimentally in the Playmaker theater tonight at 7:30. Tickets may be obtained without charge from John Parker, business manager of the Playmakers, 314 South building. Seats will be held for ticket-holders until 7:20 after which time they will be opened to the general public.

In "Out From Bedford" Fred Walsh, holder of a Rockefeller fellowship in playwriting, writes of the whaling days in his native city, New Bedford, Massachusetts. His play is concerned with the pull of the sea for the men who have grown up near it and who wrest their living from it. From tales told along the wharf by the old seamen or droned beside the fire of a winter's evening, the author gained a vivid picture of the days of sailing vessels when men set out from New Bedford in search of the great sea-mammals that supplied oil for the lamps of every household. Then came the discovery of the oil that came out of the ground and of its many purposes and the great whaling industry gradually declined. Mr. Walsh has set his play in this transition period.

POLITICS

In "These Doggone Elections" Fred Koch, Jr. writes a comedy of election chicanery in the household of Hank and Seamy Millsap, which is split by political diversities. Hank's staunch Democratic heart almost quails before Seamy's Republican shrewdness but a hound dog and a mouth harp finally restore the family political balance.

Emily Polk Crow's play of Sam Houston, "Texas Forever," is set in Houston's Gonzales camp in 1836 and depicts a tense situation in the ragged Texas army during the revolt against

Putzel Urges Di Senate To Unite In Common Cause

Taking the motto "Agree to differ; resolve to love; and unite to serve" for his subject, Charles Putzel, newly elected president of the Dialectic senate, last night urged the senators to unite in a common cause in deriving from the senate the fullest benefits during the coming year.

President Putzel pointed out that if the senators failed to differ on questionable issues there would be no justification for the existence of the senate. He stated further that if we do differ we can still remain friends thus carrying out the second point of the motto. The president said that in uniting to serve the senate, the University, and each other, the senators "would carry out the united purpose of living the fullest lives through service."

Senator Ed Kantrowitz presented a proposal for interesting incoming freshmen in the senate next year. The senate voted, however, not to disclose the provisions of the proposal to the public.
