DUKE STUDENTS SPEAK TO YWCA

Souders Stresses Personality

"We're beginning to look past the local field and get into a bigger scope," said Floyd Souders, chairman of the worship cabinet of the senior YMCA of Duke university, as he spoke to members of the University YWCA at a meeting at Gerrard hall last night.

Souders, the first speaker on the program, stressed personality projection and game a simple rule that one might follow in order to do that. "Go out of your way every day," he said, "to help someone;" and he pointed out that the personal application of this rule leads to the development of group personality. Souders used Lloyd C. Douglas' book, "Magnificent Obsession" to illustrate his points.

George Cole, president of the Duke organization and a representative of the Duke men and women relations group, followed Souders as speaker. He took as the title of his talk, "Tin Helmets and Wooden Crosses," and stated that both are symbols of the preservation of something and are demanding of those who take them up. The speaker brought out the fact that great men are remembered by what they have preserved, and he said that it is up to the preservers of tomorrow to choose their own means of preservation.

Guy Berner led the program which was opened by a call to worship. Immediately after the benediction, a discussion of the means of obtaining group fellowship was held. This was followed by a reception.

Books Of University Press Could Fill 30-Foot Shelf

Organization Is 17 Years Old And Has Printed A Total Of 285 Volumes

By WALTER SPEARMAN

A "coming out party" would be appropriate for the University of North Carolina Press this fall. She is 17 years old, she has a new dress to wear, she has literally filled a 30-foot shelf with her publishing achievements, and she is full of bright ideas about future plans!

The new dress is the remodelled Bynum gymnasium building, where the Press is most satisfactorily situated in a suite of ten rooms after sloughing off the outgrown basement of Alumni building.

New outlook toward the future is noted in the fact that rounding out a total of 285 volumes, the Press this year for the first time includes a novel, a volume of drama and a Federal Writers Project book.

The novel is "Purslane," a North Carolina story by Bernice Kelly Harris of Seaboard. The drama is "Mexican Folk Plays" by Josephina Niggli of Monterey, Mexico. The Writers Project volume is "These Are Our Lives," a new kind of book which the people of the South—tenant farmers, negro laborers, mill workers, house servants—speak for themselves and in so speaking create a vital and significant literature.

What is this 17-year-old University Press? Founded in 1922 "to publish periodicals or catalogues pertaining to the University" and by publishing deserving works "to promote the arts and sciences and the development of

Sept. 25	N through Q
Sept. 26	R through S
Sept. 27	T through V
Sept. 28	W through Z

COOPERATION

The full cooperation of all students is asked in appearing at the cashier's office on the assigned day to receive bills and make payment at the same time. If the plan does receive the full cooperation of the students it will be used hereafter and will maintain an even flow of payments into the cashier's office and avoid the necessity of students standing in line for long periods.

It will facilitate the cashier's work if students will remember their registration numbers for all students are listed by these numbers and not alphabetically.

Group Also Makes Loan Of $900 To German Club

Director Bob Magill of Graham Memorial yesterday disclosed that $620 collected in student fees during the regular session last year were diverted during the summer to pay for summer school expenses.

Magill also said in a report to the Graham Memorial board of directors that $900 had been loaned to the German Club last June. The loan was for one year, with the provision that the director of the memorial be a member of the executive committee of the German club with the right to veto power during the time in which the loan remains unpaid.

Of the money allotted for summer school expenditures, $275 dollars was given to the summer school social committee, while the remaining $345 was used to balance the Graham Memorial budget.

ENROLLMENT DROPS

In explaining the amount presented to the social committee, Magill stated that "this committee is responsible for the dances and several major aspects of entertainment. Due to a sudden drop in enrollment its budget had to be revised, and expenses already contracted for could not be cut to meet reduced income." The added expense to the union's budget was also the result of the decrease in enrollment.

PIANO BOUGHT

A portable piano, to be used for campus dances, was bought in a "trade in" for $150, while $1,000 was spent on improvements for the Graham Memorial grill. New doors are also being built for the lounge, at a cost of $319.

Magill also reported that a plan to provide the various campus organizations with material on freshman had been introduced. He explained that was "to provide the basic information the purpose of the Interest Indicators needed to enable freshmen to enter activities more easily and intelligently."

Secretary Talks On World Crisis

"We must come to some real decision in the present crisis" said Bill McKee, new secretary of the YMCA in an address before a meeting of the junior-senior cabinet last night. The subject of his address was "The Dilemma of Christians in Present-Day Conflicts."

The speech was preceded by the usual business session of the group which included the passing of a motion and an amendment to this motion. The motion read as follows: That the executive committee composed of representatives of the three cabinets of the YMCA shall be empowered to direct the general policy and program emphasis of the association for the year 1939-40. There was some discussion as to the power this motion would give the executive committee and before it was put to a vote an amendment was added which read as follows: the action as concerns Jr.-Sr. cabinets of the executive committee shall be subject to ratification by the junior and senior cabinets.

NEED DECISION

McKee, in his address to the group, reviewed the current international situation and then emphasized the fact that we must come to some decision at an early date. Continuing, he said "We are caught in a period of real confusion in our thinking and in our actions and we must do something about it."
