

AVIATION CLASS MEETS TODAY FOR FIRST TIME

Prof. Parkinson To Teach Ground Course Here

For the first time in the history of the University, government training in aviation will be available to its students when Professor Parkinson, of State college, opens the first class at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Bingham hall.

All ground courses will be taught here but courses in actual flight training will be taught at the flying fields in Raleigh. Although written consent from the parents of all students enrolling in the course will be required, those who have not already obtained permission will be allowed to begin the course.

In addition to written permission, qualifications include payment of a $40 fee and perhaps a laboratory fee of two or three dollars. In addition, all students must pass a physical examination at the University infirmary and another physical examination at the office of Dr. Powell Fox in the Masonic building in Raleigh.

On The Cuff

dous resistance. They laughed when Chuck Erickson returned from the VPI-Marshall game last week declaring the Techs would be tough. But unfortunately, Mr. Erickson had the last laugh. The Gobblers were tough; tougher, in fact, than either Wake Forest or The Citadel in the opening two Tar Heel games. Virginia Tech scored one touchdown, had another called back when Woolwine was a mile off sides going down for a pass and had another stopped when James Francis Lalanne broke through three Gobbler safety men to nail a ball carrier on the 12 yard line.

ALSO In addition to the Gobbler resistance, Carolina was suffering from a number of matters including in numerical order:

- (1) Lack of George Stirnweiss, who had a jittery afternoon jumping up and down on the bench,
- (2) A psychological letdown from superlative efforts against The Citadel and Wake Forest,
- (3) Midsummer 90 degree heat and
- (4) The inevitable bad afternoon that hits every football team no matter how good it may be.

The Tar Heels will bounce back from that Virginia Tech. There is a slight matter of NYU this week-end and the Violets are loaded, but this is Tuesday. Why worry about things so far in the future?

And who is the guy that goes around saying Duke has a stolid, slow moving attack? The report may be true as charged but you can't prove anything by Andy Kerr. That is nothing except that the score was 37-0, the heat was terrible and if people want to blow themselves up, the pleasure of playing Duke is theirs.

chance to gain experience with all those fine monogram backs around but he's potential dynamite.

"The line is tremendous, averaging 210-lbs. Ralph Kirchem and Ralph Wenzel are the standouts. Kirchem has been operating at tackle for three seasons while Wenzel is close to being the best end in the south. Tulane will probably beat Fordham next week, they have too many reserves and Fordham will be bothered by the heat."

in the Italian army as consultant officers. It was said that a group of monks had been ordered out of their monastery near the German-Italian border to make room for these consultants.

"WAR OF NERVES"

"During our travels we saw little of the 'War of Nerves,' which was stressed so by the American press in September. Italy was the most nervous of the group. France and England adopted a stoical attitude. 'If we have to go to war, we'll go,' they said. 'In the meantime we'll be prepared.'"

Dr. Lyons says the Allies did not believe at that time that there would be a war, because they thought that Hitler would stop. The Germans thought that there would be no war because England and France would back down.

"The Germans are expert rationalists," says Dr. Lyons. "They believe that they are the victims of an international conspiracy to reduce the superior German people to a state where they cannot compete with other nations on an equal basis. They believe themselves best able to handle the resources of the countries they have taken. With this attitude they justify their actions. I do not believe, as many do, that there will be an internal explosion in Germany because Goebbels is really an artist of propaganda. Anybody could be affected by his statements and come to believe them."

NO HATRED

"During our trip we found no real hatred among the people themselves for other countries. Each country felt sorry for the other and thought it was merely being guided by a deluded leader. I suppose the hatred will come later."

"I know little of military strategy, but it was generally admitted that Germany was actually better equipped than England and France, though potentially the Allies equal their foes. Where Germany is weakest is in the line of succession of her officers. She has been training her soldiers for only six years. Though she has numerous good officers in command, it would be difficult to replace them if they were killed. The opposite is true in England and France."

POWDER KEG

"Switzerland feels that she is on the edge of a keg of gunpowder. She is very despondent about her tourist trade. Quite often our party of 30 would be the only guests in a 200-room hotel."

"The plight of the Czechs we found most pitiful," Dr. Lyons concluded. "One old man told me confidentially, 'Germany has taken our guns; they have taken our airplanes; but in each one of our kitchens we keep a long sharp knife. We live but to plunge it into the back of some German.'"

Chess Champion

Chapel Hill's finest strategist, has consented to take the role of umpire. Although his legs are not what they once were, according to his own admission, Dr. Hayden has risen to the heights when the occasion demanded it. In 1933 in San Francisco, he was one of 40 who matched wits with the then world's champion, Arthur Alekhin.

Dr. Hayden said yesterday that the champ lost four matches that night, so it might be indication of tonight's happenings. Whatever the outcome, however, the Kings, Queens, Knights, and Pawns will wage a merry war of it, with 15 kingdoms at stake.

After the hostilities have died down, the victors, or victor, and the vanquished will get together and form a chess club, every member of which will have the chance to play Feldstein during the year, too.

Douglass, Phillips To Plan Survey

Working with the Bureau of Educational Research and Service, Drs. Harl R. Douglass and Guy B. Phillips of the University Department of Education, will go to Leaksville to make preliminary plans for a survey of that school system tomorrow.

Also working on the project are: Dr. D. J. Highsmith, State Department of Education; Dr. A. M. Proctor, Duke school of Education; and Dr. J. H. Cook, Women's College, Greensboro.

In connection with the survey Dr. Phillips said, "Our work is comparable to that of an efficiency expert in industry. We investigate the school and try to give advice toward running the school more efficiently and less expensively."

The survey will be made during the next two months, after this group lays a foundation and formulates plans for the work.

Coeds To Be Given Re-examinations

All undergraduate women who did not take or failed to pass the examination on the Woman's handbook, will be given a re-examination tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in Gerrard hall.

we'll get beat." Jim Tatum was equally impressed with the power of Penn.

Wolf indicated himself that his team would have to be at its peak in all departments if Carolina is to survive the Violet invasion, the first trip South for NYU since 1933, when the Yanks played Georgia. For three years running NYU has been beaten in Manhattan by Wolf's team, each time in a close battle.

discussion will be held, with the "candidates" answering any questions put to them from the floor. Upon the conclusion of the program in Memorial hall, a reception will be held in the main lounge of Graham Memorial. All students and faculty will have the opportunity at that time to meet the four men and speak informally with them.

HORTON

A fifth probable gubernatorial candidate, Lieutenant-Governor W. P. Horton appeared on the union's platform two weeks ago. He supported the president's repeal of the arm's embargo and made a plea for the maintenance of personal freedom.

In commenting on Cooper's consent to appear here next week, Gattson announced: "The securing of four of the 'candidates' in the gubernatorial race is the culmination of much effort on the part of the members of the CPU to bring to its non-partisan platform another unique, edifying program on the political scene in North Carolina."

Please report irregularities in delivery by calling 6476 from 2-5 p.m. weekdays.
