

Colorful Program Scheduled For University Day Tomorrow

Events Will Mark Erection Of Oldest Campus Building

A program of colorful exercises to be presented tomorrow will mark the 146 anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of Old East, oldest state university building in the country. Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, former president of the University, will be the main speaker of the occasion.

While the University was not the first chartered state university, it was the first state university to actually open its doors to the public. The University of Georgia and the University of Pennsylvania were both chartered by those respective states before our University was chartered by the state legislature in Fayetteville.

SIX-YEAR PERIOD

Tomorrow's celebration will be part of a six-year period of celebration of the chartering, founding and opening of the University. November will mark the meeting of the state legislature in Fayetteville, when, among other things, it was decided to grant what is now Tennessee to the government. It is at this celebration that President Roosevelt will speak if he is not detained by Congress or other matters. In 1943 and '45 other celebrations will be held commemorating the completion of the University and the opening of its doors to the public. The actual birthday of the University cannot be determined exactly as the different phases of its conception and first operation all took place in a six year period.

Dean R. B. House will preside over tomorrow's ceremonies and will introduce Dr. Frank Graham who will, in turn, introduce the main speaker, Dr. Chase.

MARKERS

Judge Robert W. Winston, graduate of the class of 1860, will speak for ten minutes on "Memorial Hall—Its Tablets and Memories." This will begin the second half of the program which will be devoted to the formal announcement of the erection of markers to three of the University's sons.

It was announced yesterday that the Rev. Donald Stewart of Chapel Hill will deliver the invocation and the Benediction.

Di Disapproves Mediation By FDR In Current War

The Di senate killed a resolution that President Roosevelt act as mediator between belligerent nations, and passed a bill stating that the United States should come to the aid of Canada in case of invasion, after initiating 30 new members at its meeting last night.

Arthur Link, chairman of the committee to arrange debates with literary societies of other colleges, reported that negotiations are under way with a Duke society.

BIASED

Points brought out in opposition to the bill approving President Roosevelt as mediator between belligerent nations were that his biased attitude would be harmful in drawing up any peace, and that the President might act in bad faith. John Busby suggested that the Queen of Holland would be a suitable mediator in the present war.

Discussion of the resolution to aid Canada in case of invasion indicated that although Di members oppose participation in an overseas war, they feel that the mutual interests of the two nations are such that the U. S. could not afford to allow Canada to be invaded.

HOBBS APPOINTED TO LEAD SHOWS EACH FORTNIGHT

Cheerleader Turns Into Impressario Of Entertainment

Vance Hobbs, head cheerleader, yesterday was named impressario for Graham Memorial amateur hours, Musical Quiz contests, community sings, and other invocations planned during the year.

Beginning next Tuesday night at 7:30, and continuing every other week after that for the remainder of the year, Hobbs will conduct programs in the Memorial lounge aimed at keeping the campus smiling and entertained.

Next week's show will feature an all non-professional group of parlor entertainers. If any student, faculty-member, or resident wishes to participate, blanks are available from Miss Tempe Newsome at the YMCA or from Bob Magill in the Graham Memorial office.

AWARDS

A complete set of prizes has been offered by the Graham Memorial student union, the awards being three dollars for first; two dollars for second; and one dollar for third.

Impressario Hobbs's career began when he was still at Central High school in Charlotte, where he was known as a "general cut-up." It was not until he arrived in Washington in 1933, intent on making national fame, that he gave first evidence of showmanship.

On March 4, 1933, on a street corner in the Capitol, an inebriated gentleman anticipating President Roosevelt's repeal of prohibition, suddenly and silently passed out in the arms of a patrolman of the law. With inauguration day traffic flying past, the policeman shouted for a boy scout to come out from the crowd and direct the moving vehicles.

NO BOY SCOUT

"I ain't no boy scout, but I can do it, bud," came the reply from a little chap from North Carolina.

Thus, Vance Kerr Hobbs made his advent on the national scene as a showman and director. Since then, he has been an impersonator in past Graham Memorial amateur hours, and was last spring elected head cheerleader.

When asked the secret of his success, Hobbs shyly answered, "My mother dropped me from Chimney Rock at an early age."

UNC Freshman Barely Misses Ride From Europe On Athenia

Trip On S. S. Montrose Through Heavily Mined Sea Still Brought Excitement

By HARVEY O. WHITE

When he arrived in Glasgow September 2 to catch the S. S. California home, he found that it had been turned into a troop ship and he would have to book passage on the S. S. Montrose, leaving two days later. If he had missed the S. S. Montrose, he would have been forced to ride on the Athenia, for that ill-fated ship was the next one to leave for America after the Montrose.

Even though he did miss the eventful ride on the Athenia, Oren says that the trip home on the S. S. Montrose wasn't exactly a joy ride. After being led out of Glasgow by a pilot because the waters in that vicinity were heavily mined, they headed for more friendly waters. After smooth sailing for two days, they received orders from the British Admiralty to return immediately to England. The first real confusion came at this time, for the two hundred Polish and Jewish refugees aboard didn't like the idea at all of turning around, for they had felt that they were safely on their way to America. There was no calming them, Oren said, until after their boat was turned around again six hours later, headed for America.

BLACKOUT

Oren is probably the only Carolina student who has been in an actual

Impressario

Vance Hobbs, head cheerleader, who has been appointed by Graham Memorial to head a semi-weekly series of programs in the student union lounge. Amateur shows, musical quizzes, and other shows are being planned.

The original roll will consist of those persons who attend the first two meetings.

WILL CHOOSE OFFICERS

A president, vice-president and secretary will be elected at the next meeting. The club will collect no dues—a treasurer will not be chosen.

Meetings will be held twice monthly and the general public will be invited to attend.

Assembly Inducts 43 New Members, Challenges Senate

After initiating 43 new members last night the Phi assembly voted to challenge the Di senate to a football game, a keg of beer going to the winner.

Speaker Joe Dawson said that he expected more new members at its next meeting. One hundred was originally announced as the number expected last night.

After discussion as to whether the challenge to the traditional Di-Phi football game would be accepted by the Di, the motion to offer the challenge was passed unanimously.

The motion introduced at the last meeting that the Phi should hold a dance this fall was tabled again until next meeting. Hassell Thigpen, who was appointed last week as chairman of a committee to investigate the "Seven Sad Sirens," reported that "the sirens are not so sad."

Woman Reporter Enters Old East — By Mistake

Golden-haired Shirley Hobbs is the new DAILY TAR HEEL reporter for the Phi assembly which meets every Tuesday night on the fourth floor of New East.

Uncertain as to where the building was located, Shirley stopped in front of Old East (the oldest boys' dormitory on the campus), and asked a passerby if this was where the Phi met. Assured that it was, she walked up the side stairs until she arrived on the third floor safe and sound.

"I met several boys on the way," said Shirley, "but they just said 'hello' and acted as if I belonged there." It wasn't until she had wandered into three bedrooms that Shirley began to suspect that maybe she was in the wrong place.

Her exit was at a slightly faster pace than her entrance.

Tar Heel Workers Meet At 2 O'clock

An important meeting of all members of the DAILY TAR HEEL reporter staff and feature board will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the office in Graham Memorial.
