Chancellor Of NYU Is Main Speaker For University Day

"The United States will inevitably become the leading power on earth.' but the present war, if it continues for a long period, will result in a Europe crippled economically and an America distressed economically," predicted Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase, Chancellor of New York university, as he yesterday addressed the University he served for 11 years as its president.

Dr. Chase's address was the main event of the University Day program commemorating the 146th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the oldest state university building in the country. A drizzling rain caused the cancellation of the traditional Academic march from South building to Memorial hall and resulted in a smaller attendance than was expected, but the sizeable audience that attended gave Dr. Chase an enthusiastic homecoming welcome.

COMPARISON Comparing world conditions, at the time he accepted the presidency of the University, to current world conditions, Dr. Chase said: "No temporary war boom can offset the longe-range injuries done to our economic structure. That we must face with all our ingenuity and resourcefulness."

Summing up what might be called the "results" of the last war, and regarding the different definitions of the word "democracy," he said: "The last war did not change this way of living. Russia has exchanged one form of despotism for another. We said harsh things about the Germany of the Kaiser, but it was at least a civilized nation, which Nazi Germany is not. The war will not of itself advance the cause of democracy. You cannot impose democracy on people by force of arms."

DRAMATIC HISTORY

Speaking of the University, "No institution in America has had a more dramatic history," he asserted.
