

UNC Squeezes 14-7 Win Over Tough NYU

Frosh To Nominate Officers Tuesday; Election Thursday

Little Activity Seen As Student Council Sets Date

Nominations for freshman class officers will be received in Memorial hall Tuesday morning at 10:30 and election day will be Thursday, Jimmy Davis, president of the student body, announced last night.

The nomination and election dates were set at the regular meeting of the Student council last Tuesday night, but announcement was withheld, Davis said, in keeping with council policy of allowing freshmen only one day of official campaigning in an endeavor to keep upper-classmen "out of freshmen elections."

Wednesday morning's freshmen chapel period will probably be given over to candidates for campaign speeches.

As first year men are not allowed a student council representative, they will only choose a president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer. Election of class honor council will be held later in the quarter.

NOT MUCH "POLITICKING"

There has been little hint of pre-nomination activity, although Yates Poteat of Winston-Salem, is known to have backing for president.

Last year's frosh campaign featured three candidates for chief executive, with Bill Shore finally defeating Bill Ward in a run-off. Ward led in the first election but Muck Dunn, who ran third, threw his support to Shore.

Location of the voting place has not been decided upon by the Student council, which supervises all campus elections. But Davis said that the ballot boxes would probably be placed in the lobby of the YMCA.

CHURCH UNION MEETS TONIGHT

Speakers To Be All Students

"The Significance of Personal Religion to the Campus," will be discussed tonight at the first Union student forum, composed of students from the various Sunday evening students' forums in the churches and the Hill foundation, from 7 to 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the Presbyterian church.

George Ralston will conduct the forum. Fred Broad will talk on "The Challenge — Is Religion Worth While?", Fred A. Cazel, Jr., will discuss "The Distinguishing Marks of a Christian," Martha Clappitt will speak on "Resources of the Spirit-Prayer," and Naomi Neuman will discuss "The Social Implications of Personal Religion."

All students are invited to attend the forums, which will meet every third Sunday. The meetings are held to provide an opportunity for united expression of the various groups of their common functions in the life of the spirit, and a real opportunity for broadened vision and deepened fellowship.

BULLETIN!

Attaches at Watts hospital last night said that two Chapel Hill residents, Charles Moorey and Rosenberg (no other name given), involved in an auto wreck last night out on the Raleigh road were treated for first aid and released. The car, a late model convertible, was said to be badly damaged.

All We Can Say Is "Whew!"

Here are the gentlemen of the pigskin trade, Carolina brand, largely responsible for our skin-of-the-teeth victory yesterday over NYU.

In the usual order, they are: Co-Captain George Stirnweiss, called All-American by those in the know, who outran three husky Gothamites to skim into pay dirt for the first tally. Next is Coach Bear Wolf, who is either picking a bushel of four-leaf clover or rubbing a rabbit's foot. We promised he'd be looking at you, if we won.

And last but definitely not least, is Halfback George Radman, non-publicized speedster who leaped high in the air to snag Stirn's touchdown pass in the closing minutes. He was also a bulwark in Carolina's pass defense.

A cast of approximately 50 persons will be required to produce Green's new play, which is a drama of Flora MacDonald and the settlers of the upper valley of the Cape Fear River. The play is to be directed by John Parker, business manager of the Playmakers.

Five performances of the play will be given at the Opera House in Fayetteville on November 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24. It will be brought to Chapel Hill for performances in Memorial Hall December 5 and 6.

Playmaker Film Portrays Career Of Russian Czar

"Peter I," a Soviet film dramatizing the life and career of the Czar who westernized Russia, will be shown on the screen of the Carolina Playmakers' theatre this afternoon at 2:30.

The French film, "Pearls of the Crown" had originally been scheduled for this afternoon's free showing, but "Peter I" was secured instead.

Today's movie program is the fourth in the series which is being presented this quarter as a prelude to a course in movie art study during the winter quarter.

The scenario of "Peter I" was written by Alexis Tolstoy, who is considered the greatest of present Russian screen writers. Included in the cast of the picture are some of the most famous actors of the Soviet stage.

Built around the life of the lusty, wise and militant Czar, the film presents a vivid picture of that tempestuous period in Russian history which marked the country's awakening to Western culture and scientific progress.

NON-FRAT MEN MAY JOIN GERMANS

Sutton Explains New Proposals

Students who are not fraternity members will have the same standing as fraternity members in the German club, if the recently-completed plans of reorganization are accepted by the faculty and student council, Louis Sutton, secretary-treasurer, said yesterday.

"We are trying to remove politics from the organization," Sutton added. "If present plans are approved the German club will be one of the most democratic institutions on the campus. Non-fraternity men will have the same privileges, same voting and selection powers as fraternity members."

If 40 non-fraternity men wish to band together to join the club, they will be granted a membership on the executive committee of the German club. Also, if any fraternity, regardless of size, wishes to have all members of the fraternity members of the dance club, then that fraternity may

STIRNY, RADMAN CLICK IN FINAL PERIOD TO NIP VIOLENT VIOLETS

Hefty New Yorkers Batter Tar Heels For Three Quarters Until Final Coups

By SHELLEY ROLFE

For three disheartening quarters, the vaunted Violets of NYU, holding a one touchdown margin, threatened to unload the largest upset of the Southern football season, but in the final period the University of North Carolina, which has not clicked as it is capable of ever since the Wake Forest game two Saturdays ago, suddenly came to life, turned a recovered fumble and an intercepted pass into two scores to defeat NYU, 14-7, before 20,000 dazed customers at Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon.

Striking through the air for a touchdown in the waning moments of the opening quarter, the Violets outplayed, outfought and outgeneraled the Tar Heels in such a manner that for a time there was fear that Ray Wolf's team would not come out of the game alive let alone with anything but damaged reputations. But in the final period, those two grand Rebels, Li'l George Stirnweiss from New York and George Radman from Cleveland who combined to defeat NYU last autumn, got together again.

Making his biggest All-American bid of the year Stirnweiss scored the first touchdown and passed for the second, Radman caught passes and the Tar Heels collected the two touchdowns that enabled them to win their fourth game in a row this fall and end the NYU winning streak at two.

The Carolina turn-about came so suddenly and unexpectedly that it caught most of the spectators unaware. Except for the first few plays of the game, NYU held the upper hand against the baffled Tar Heels. Violet backs gained almost at will through the Carolina line and the Tar Heel running and passing attack was effectively bottled up. NYU held a statistical edge from one end of the game to the other, but in the end Carolina had the fireworks to win the fourth season in a row over the puzzled Violets who are beginning to wonder

New Medical Plant Going Full Blast With Students, Faculty, Animals

New Quarters Of Class A University Medical School

Located on the large plateau facing Pittsboro road, the huge new building shown above is the home of the rejuvenated medical school. Architecture is in Southern colonial style of red brick and limestone trimming, and the structure contains approximately 1,000,000 cubic feet of space, 10 times as much as was available in old Caldwell hall.

Besides having the latest equipment of modern science, the faculty of the school has been expanded to meet the needs of the increasing enrollment. Dedication of the edifice is expected to be in December.

Big Five Story Building With Equipment Gives UNC Proper Medical School Setup

Although the paint is hardly dry, the new home for the school of medicine and division of public health at the University has been completed and students and faculty and their inevitable animal companions have moved in.

If you haven't inspected the new building, you will doubtless be amazed at the completeness and modernity of everything about it. Every piece of equipment and apparatus, every gadget represents the most recent development in its field.

Conforming to the prevailing style of other campus structures, the building is of Southern colonial architecture, in red brick with limestone trimmings. Six huge columns grace the entrance.

Not counting the basement, there are five stories, and the structure contains approximately a million cubic feet of space, 10 times as much as was available in the old home, Caldwell hall. In length it is 260 feet. The central portion is 40 feet deep, but there are wings at either end that project forward 78 feet.

LOCATED ON PLATEAU

The building is located on a large plateau to the west of the main University campus, facing the Pittsboro road, and there will be room for any type of expansion for an indefinite period. It is of fireproof construction throughout and has all the modern features to be found in the leading two-year medical schools.
