CAROLINA COMMENTARY

BY JOHN ANDERSON

A BIG WEEKEND . . .

Were you there last night? . . . Bubbles Becker caused all the stags—well, most of them—to crowd around the bandstand in rapt ecstasy, beating and singing with his bubbling rhythm. Well, if you were not, don't miss Donahue tonight . . . Were you in the cheering section wanting to tell the boys to fight, only to be quieted by the impertinent "Quiet please" of the announcer? Well, if not, you must see the Carolina-Duke game tonight! . . . Were you importing last night? If not, there are a good number of non-dated sad sirens in the Dorms one, two, three, who'd welcome a date tonight made this a.m. . . . Were you in the library last night? No, well during all this big weekend, remember that this quarter is over half over and those term papers and book reports have got to be started. I know you'll remember; just like we will — next week . . . Were you at the movie yesterday? If not, there's a good one tomorrow, that is, if you're out of bed in time . . . Yep, it's a big weekend . . .

ADVICE TO IMPORTS . . .

Listen gals, maybe I'm a little late telling you, but there are certain Carolina traditions you must abide by while on this campus. DON'T ask why there are more fraternity boys at the Dorm dances than dormitory boys . . . Don't say you fear Duke will beat Carolina tonight and forget to mention the football game on November 18 in Durham last fall . . . Don't suggest going home after the dance tonight—your escort has other plans . . . Don't tell any of your experiences at other colleges on other weekends; remember, you might want to come back down here . . . Don't mind having to walk several miles over the campus this morn—you won't feel like it tomorrow . . . Don't hint for your escort to buy you anything—he's darn near busted by having you down here . . . Don't drink unless you must. But be sure you can hold your head if you do—remember you're with a Carolina Gentleman . . . Don't be surprised if it is raining like the devil after the dance tonight; it usually does . . . Don't forget the new frat rules; go somewhere else after the dance . . . Don't look upon the coeds with scorn; they'll take him away from you next week—if they do so desire . . . And, milady, if you want to come again, be careful of late dates . . .

JUST BETWEEN ME AND MYSELF . . .

Why won't they cash our checks at Swain Hall, Jr.? They are afraid of our credit . . . Why did the night club in Graham Memorial fold up? Too well lighted; not enough private booths . . . Why are there red lights in the end of the girls' dorms? To give the Carolina coed even more of a rep . . . Why did they have "Boiled Collars" on the menu at the coffee shop the other night? You sap, that was pose you were in the officials' or the athletes' place in the ring or on the court. If we'd all stop to do this, I'm sure our student conduct at athletic events would reflect credit on the cherished reputation of a Carolina gentleman.

This is a simple formula to produce better conduct at athletic games. And it is effective. Athletic officials, the players themselves, and athletes in general are wholeheartedly opposed to any display of unsportsmanlike conduct by the student spectators. Carolina athletic teams are famous for gentlemanly conduct while playing the game. If the student spectators will put themselves in the position of the players, as Coach Bob suggests, we are satisfied the cherished reputation of the Carolina student body will not be in danger.

or even agreeing with public opinion. Last week Lange decided his club would beat Clemson. This thinking was frowned upon, but the Phantoms won.

So Mr. Lange should be listened to. He believes his team will snap out of the slovenly play it has displayed its last two games against Virginia and Davidson. He realizes it will take peak basketball to topple the Devils, but he insists his team will hit the form it has not shown in almost three weeks.

"We haven't really looked good since we beat Wake Forest in mid-January. We weren't so hot against Clemson, although we came back in the second half. Our performance against State was better than we got credit for, but still nothing outstanding. But somehow I know we'll hit top form for Duke."

SCORING DUEL

No matter who wins, the battle is almost certain to develop into a scoring duel between Glen Price of Duke and George Glamack of the home forces. Price is considered the best floorman in the conference. He's here, there and everywhere, passing and shooting. In early season games, observers watched Duke and were unanimous in declaring that the Blue Devils had nice uniforms and Price was a swell team.

The Dukes still depend on Price, but not as much as before. For one thing, Glen has a bad foot and had to miss a couple of games last week. His foot is on the mend and he'll probably play most of the game.

Glamack is positively tremendous when he is on. He hasn't been on since last Saturday when he tallied 17 points against Clemson and the person of Bonnie Banks McFadden. Therefore, if only through the law of averages, the Gorgeous One should be ready for a tremendous evening this swing around the court. It is generally agreed that Glamack will have to be hot if Carolina is going to win.

Chuck Holley will get the Duke nomination to bell Glamack at the start. Clyde Allen, one of three brilliant Blue Devil sophomores, the other two being Ray Mock and Spuhler, will also try his hand at the job if Holley proves inadequate. Lange, not wishing to tip his hand, wouldn't say yes or no about watching Price, but chances are that Paul Severin will get the job.

Still looking for the line-up that will click best at all times, Lange will use Hank Pessar and Bobby Gersten as starters again. The two began the Davidson game and Pessar was high scorer while Gersten, as usual, impressed one and all with a workman-like, fighting performance. Glamack will be at center. Severin and Pessar are to be the forwards with Gersten teaming up with Al Mathes at guard. Severin, Mathes and Glamack have been starters in practically every game of the Carolina season that so far has produced 16 wins in 18 battles.

Eddie Cameron, bossman of the Dukes, will use Cap'n Bill Parsons at forward along with Price. Holley is at center and Cy Valasek and Tom Connelly, guards.

band with him to the University campus.

He has an exclusive contract to provide music for entertainment and dancing on all ships of the South American Prince lines, the Furness-Withy Steamship lines, the Furness-Bermuda Pleasure cruise lines, the American Republic lines and the entire Eastern Steamship fleet. In addition, Donahue orchestras play all year in the Bermudian, Inverurie, Castle Harbor and St. George hotels in Bermuda.

"Commodore" Donahue, a title given him by the Merchant Marine, currently is receiving high praise in Metro-nome magazine. Other features have been prominently displayed in Billboard, Variety and Downbeat magazines.

Chaperones for tonight at the Order of the Grail dance will be: Dr. and Mrs. A. K. King, Mr. and Mrs. J. Maryon Saunders, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Armstrong.

Only dormitory men may attend the tea affair this afternoon, but all may attend the Grail dance this evening. Admission will be one dollar at the door.

performance of "Hamlet."

Saroyan's play, his second to be produced in New York within a year, is a story of an odd assortment of waifs and strays who drift through a San Francisco bar seeking spiritual release. It is not traditional drama, and it depends for unity chiefly on the bar, which draws the characters together, and on Joe, who sits at a little round table consuming champagne and contemplating life. "In content," said a Theater Arts reviewer, "it is much the same as is everything that Saroyan writes, a hymn to the human heart expressed in terms of a poet's imag-that had been left in them except the money.

The thefts last quarter amounted in value to approximately $1,500, but most of this was recovered and several thieves were apprehended.

The pawn shops of Durham are being searched for stolen goods and University police, under the direction of Mr. Burch, are carrying on a thorough investigation.

A description of the missing articles was circulated throughout the campus last week. Any other missing articles should be reported immediately to the office of P. L. Burch or to the dean of students' office in South building.

The authorities warn students to take the necessary precautions to prevent any further thefts, it was announced.

COUP

Confidence Vote To Dorm Council

Because of a change in ruling, the coeds who attend tonight's Grail-Interdormitory dance will be allowed to stay out the customary two hours after a "big" set of dances—previously, German club sets and May frolics.

After first deciding that coeds would be required to come in at 1 o'clock as after any ordinary dance, Mrs. Stacy and the Dean of Students office agreed that the Interdormitory set was well-planned enough, perhaps even better than the Germans and May frolics, to warrant the extra hour.

Though the original plan to house visiting coeds in K dormitory fell through by nine dissenters refusing to move out, there still remains the Graham Memorial open house after tonight's affair, with chaperones.

On behalf of the Interdormitory council, the DAILY TAR HEEL thanks Mrs. Stacy and others who gave a vote of confidence to the Interdormitory council. To the Interdormitory council, congratulations for a well-planned dance set. The favor was granted at a time when the administration is interested in a dance-de-emphasis drive.

MOVEMENT

Average Level Entertainment

For as long as we can remember campus dabbling in the theater on the Hill has been for the most part confined to the socially significant, ultra-serious drama of the Playmakers with, of course, a sprinkling of light comedies and a dash of the ultra-amateur shows sponsored spasmodically by Graham Memorial.

In other words the intellectual slice of the University population has its Carolina Magazine of the theater ever so often in the numerous Playmaker productions. But the numerous Buccaneer fans who always manage to make up the largest group in our midst have been out in the cold.

All of this gives promise of being remedied now as Carroll McGaughey and his Student-Faculty Jamboree clan announce the organization of a Student Entertainment club which would delve into the production of musical revues of a light nature several times a year. The overwhelming success of the recent Student-Faculty Jamboree no doubt accounts for the organization of the new group, and the unbridled enthusiasm of a Memorial hall capacity audience last week heralds the potential popular favor for such a theatrical venture.

Just one suggestion: a catchy name for the organization, one at least unmistakably divorced from confusion with the Student Entertainment committee. It's all a bit complicated but somebody somewhere should have a distorted idea about what constitutes entertainment for the average college student.

"Pass In Revue" was a smash hit in anybody's language and English Professor E. E. Ericson hits the nail on the head when he says it had all the attributes of a Chapel Hill "Hellzapoppin'." We anticipate "Pass In Revue II" with pleasure when the spring rolls around.

FROM FETZER

More Pleas For Sportsmanship

Athletic Director Robert A. Fetzer, "Coach Bob" to everyone, is considered a man of excellent judgment in athletic affairs. Wherever athletics are mentioned, his opinion is eagerly sought and highly regarded.

Discussing student actions at athletic contests this winter, Coach Bob pointed out four incidents at a recent boxing match which hardly reflected to the credit of the University. He spoke of the failure of the student body to cheer for the visiting team, of whistling and yelling at the entry of girls with boys, of booing of an official's decisions, and of leaving a contest before it is over.

"Try to put yourself in the shoes of the other fellow," is Coach Bob's suggestion. "Sup-
