Students in Academics

An Intercollegiate Press bulletin from Dartmouth college reads in part:

"Proposals to have Dartmouth undergraduates take a hand in devising educational policies of the college have had their first concrete result in the appointment by the English department of a special faculty committee to meet periodically with representatives of the English Council of English Majors, a body of 12 men formed this year.

"Some steps toward student representation in departmental counsels have already been taken in the social sciences at Dartmouth, but the English department's fully organized plan is the most important development to date. In accepting the student proposal, the department commended the purpose and organization of the Council of English Majors, while the Daily Dartmouth, which has backed the idea of student participation, declared editorially that "congratulations can be equally divided between the students who had the initiative to organize the committee and the faculty who had the sympathy to recognize it as valid and constructive function of the educational process."

The DAILY TAR HEEL stands ready to ditto these congratulations to any academic department and to any group of majors in any field who undertake a similar step toward student representation in curricular affairs.

Register Wednesday

Universal military conscription will first assert itself to 1,000 Carolina students next Wednesday when they file through a registration line at Woolen gymnasium to give their names and other information which the government is requiring for its draft machinery.

The Central Records office has worked out an alphabetical schedule so that students may register throughout the day without having to wait in long lines. If this schedule is adhered to, all of the 1,000 should be able to register with a minimum of inconvenience.

To facilitate the registration, it has been arranged for students to be excused from their classes at the hour of their scheduled appearance at the gymnasium.

The entire draft set-up depends on cooperation to carry it through successfully. Persons officiating at the registration contribute their services. The Central Records office has donated its equipment. The cooperation of the 1,000 students is all that will be necessary to make the registration run off smoothly.

'Academic Freedom'

Mr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, last week gathered all the members of his faculty together and informed them of that university's policy in the present war situation. He told them, among other things, that the university had thrown its resources into the national defense effort and had enlisted in the war "between beasts and human beings," in which, he said, the United States has been involved economically and ideologically since hostilities began. Perhaps he was right about the United States being in the war. Certainly enough isolationists have been claiming that for many months. Perhaps he was also right in declaring Columbia university into that conflict. We don't know how much Columbia can help in winning the war for Great Britain; and we aren't decided as to whether Dr. Butler should want to get this country into war.

But Dr. Butler also said something else that has brought much damage to lovers of democracy and peace. For Dr. Butler said that the university must have freedom to pursue its high ideals, unembarrassed by conduct on the part of members which tends to damage sound learning and moral teaching. And to this denial of freedom of speech and opinion of faculty members he added this: "Academic freedom holds no meaning whatsoever for students. That phrase relates solely to freedom of thought and inquiry and to freedom of teaching on the part of accomplished scholars."

That is no new doctrine that President Butler has cooked up for use in the present war crisis. He said it in 1918, and again in 1935, so he apparently believes in it. That is his def-

Light On The Hill

All-American

Knute Rockne came to Chapel Hill this weekend. An actor walked through his role on the screen and there were cliches, but he was here all the same. Through all the synthetic moments of heightened dramatic climax that too often the fate of film biography his spirit shown through. In the audience they sensed it and felt it. Rockne's spirit was there, and it is good when Americans feel the spirit of America.

Sometimes they can feel it zooming through a wind-rippled wheat field in Kansas. Sometimes it quivers in the waters of Niagara or comes shimmering over New York harbor when the upraised hand breaks through the mist. Sometimes they know it in the Alabama swamp or on a dingy street in Boston. Sometimes it pops out in a goosepimple when they stand astride the Blue Ridge or down near Hatteras when the wind comes howling by a sanddune. Sometimes they know it standing by the then to speak it out. Dr. Butler can say that that's not what the term means. Perhaps he is right, although a lot of people have been surprised by his definition. What is important, however, is the fact that, in a democracy, everybody can say what he feels is the truth. Some people believe that we should aid England and thus better defend this country. They have the right to this opinion, and they may be right. Those who believe in directing all our energies toward home defense without aid to Britain also have a right to be heard—notwithstanding Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia.—Michigan Daily.

Well when the sunlight is hazy through the branches and leaves are fiery red.

Certainly they know it when the team first pours onto the field and the band in blue and white has opened its heart. Knute Rockne was the American spirit that plays the game. He was the spirit that spurs them on when the tide's the other way, that replenishes the fight a thousand-fold when there was none. Knute Rockne was the waving wheat, the swamp, the waterfall and the stuff that is America.

The film yesterday held that spirit in its grasp. It held the sinew and fibre of one among Americans who occasionally interprets to us this land, who throws aside the doubt and brushes the sky with exciting hope even before despair. America needs those men who sweep the people in their grasp and reveal to them whose sight has been too dim to see what it is we have here. Those men renurish the sunken soul and rekindle the flame.

In the theater yesterday the spirit was there, the surging spirit of hope that strengthens muscle and soul. It was a spirit that only great men and great things have inspired in our history. It was all

Sunday Supplement

By Buck Timberlake
Mornin', folks. And here we go on a round-up of comment and ditties from other college campuses.

From the BESSIE TIFT QUILL, Bessie Tift college, Forsyth, Ga., we garnered this bit of filler:

He: "Come on."
She: "No."
He: "Why not?"
She: "Just because."
He: "Don't you love me anymore?"

She: "It isn't that."
He: "Please, just this once."
She: "No."
He: "Aw shucks, Maw. All the other kids are going barefooted."

No, we hadn't heard of that college before either.

The Coed Ball here a couple of Fridays ago was a pretty nice occasion—replete with the new crop of coeds, male escorts and male stags.

The OKLAHOMA DAILY, of the U. of Okla., reveals that coed balls out there are of an entirely different nature. The dances are coed in the true sense of the word. Not a male is allowed. And last week the president of the university broke a long precedent by being the first man to attend.

Maybe you're wondering what the gals did beside twiddling their thumbs. We quote: "Between guessing games and bursts of spontaneous entertainment, the girls jitterbugged to the music of the Ramblers orchestra. As usual, one boy dressed as a girl crashed the gate, but 400 alert eyes spied him and 800 willing hands helped him out!" Haw!

Venturing over on the serious side: Syracuse U. has been having a time trying to curb wreckless driving by students. Warnings of fines from the police dept. didn't help the situation much. So the editor of the DAILY ORANGE hit upon an idea which had a definite improving effect. He instructed his staff of reporters to take down the license number of every car. breaking a traffic law. Numbers and offenses were published in the paper the following morning with "GUILTY!" topping the column. Here's the way they were listed:

- S2413—caused near-accident by stopping in middle of street.
- Conn. UL417 — attempted to frighten friends on curb.
- 5S2985—passenger on running board.
- 3S2528—failed to stop on leaving campus drive.
- IW9030—illegal parking.

Maybe a similar plan would put the damper on what little wreckless driving we have here at UNC.

THE VIRGINIA TECH of VPI includes this one: Will Rogers suggested epitaph for a much-married Hollywood matron—"At last she sleeps alone!"

Well, all right. You stay in bed and we'll go to church.

Churches

Sunday worship services at the Chapel Hill churches this week will be as follows: at the Presbyterian church, the Rev. W. T. Thompson of the Union Theological seminary in Richmond, Va., will talk at 11 o'clock.

At the Baptist church, the Rev. G. P. Albaugh will speak on "Jesus and the Liberal Mind" at the morning service.
