Legislature To Consider Campus Organization

The Student Legislature will convene in its third special session of the year tomorrow night to take action on the campus organization bill, speaker Bill Cochrane said yesterday.

If the bill is passed, the campus will be organized into 400 discussion groups so that the president of the student body and the legislature may "get the considered opinions of 85 per cent of the students accurately on any campus issue."

The bill was drawn up by a committee on organization appointed during the summer by Dave Morrison. This committee turned its draft over to the Ways and Means committee early this month.

Second Bill of Year

After revising the bill, the legislature committee voted last Tuesday to report it to the floor without comment.

This is the second bill to come before the body this year. The Legislature organized hastily for its first term under a new constitution two weeks ago when a special session was called to consider the fate of the Buccaneer. More than half of the legislators were elected in the three days before the organizational session.

Ben Heath Calls Tuesday Meeting Of Dorm Council

Ben Heath, president of the Inter-dorm council, announced yesterday that the council will meet Tuesday evening in Graham Memorial to discuss dormitory exhibits for Homecoming next weekend.

The newly organized council, composed of approximately 80 members including the council of dormitory presidents, has already passed its budget, organized its main committees, and is considering its future plans for the quarter.

Call Meetings

Prior to last year Heath said the council was in the habit of meeting every Tuesday evening, but last year the council decided to eliminate the regular meetings in favor of call meetings. Under the new system meetings are summoned only when necessary to discuss important matters.

"Even so," Heath remarked, "it is necessary to call a meeting about once every two weeks."

Charles Boren Finds Native Panama Swampy, Unsanitary, Disgusting

By Shirley Hobbs

"If Panama were blockaded, the people would starve because they don't grow enough food on which to exist," Charles Boren, University sophomore, said after a three-month stay at Fort Gulick which is near Cristobal. He was employed by the same company from Charlotte which built Woolen gym. Charles served as assistant clerk and time-keeper for the project of building barracks and officer's quarters at the new fort. "Before they started building the fort, there was nothing but jungle," he said.

He declared that the land is swampy, hilly, and unsuited for agriculture, and the conditions so unsanitary that it is necessary for all the food to be shipped to Panama. He described intense military activity. The Canal is being enlarged and new locks are being built. Planes are constantly circling the canal to guard it. A part of the new military precautions are the bomb-scrappers at each lock. These are attached to floats before every lock and go under the water and scrape the bottom of a boat approaching the lock to detach

SPEAKER Bill Cochrane has called the third session of the Student Legislature to convene tomorrow night.

Leaden Skies Fail To Spoil Celebration

By Sylvan Meyer

Three branches of the Greater University of North Carolina observed Greater University day in Raleigh yesterday to a background of thrilling football and chilly gray autumn skies.

Opening with a colorful parade in downtown Raleigh led by the State college band and ROTC, the University band, and a delegation from WCUNC in gold uniforms, the celebration reached a denouement at half-time. Elizabeth Patton, Dave Morrison, and Paul Lehman, student body presidents at the three institutions, addressed the grid-iron throng at that time.

Governor Clyde R. Hoey, spoke briefly, presenting the outstanding player on the State college squad, Dick Watts, with a football autographed by members of Knute Rockne's famed eleven.

President Graham Speaks

"This day is devoted to a Greater University and a greater North Carolina," President Frank Graham of the Greater University said. He also congratulated both teams and student bodies on the fine sportmanship displayed during the game.

Peak of the commemoration day was the pigskin battle waged in Riddick field for two hours of the afternoon. Dismal drizzles from the skies served to bolster the spirits of the fans and temper the activities of the men on the field. Except, that is, for the fellow in the Carolina stands who spent the second half working a crossword puzzle in his DAILY TAR HEEL.

That First Touchdown

Flashing over a touchdown in the first two minutes of play, State college rocked the fans back on their heels after which the crowd never settled down. More than once a wince ran the length and breadth of the stadium as the players on the field collided crashingly. Even the dour steward by the (Continued on page 4, column 5)

Final Tryouts Tomorrow For Radio Work

Final tryouts for those students interested in radio work will be held tomorrow afternoon, from four until 5:30 in the radio studio in Caldwell hall, Earl Wynn, director, said yesterday.

Wynn also announced that the regular Sunday night class for playwrights and continuity writers would be held tonight from 7:30 until 8:30 in Caldwell hall. Last week this group met for the first time, and their program for the year was outlined. Tonight they will start regular work.

First tryouts for those interested in radio work were held 10 days ago, and over 80 students took part. There are still, however, several positions on the studio staff that need to be filled.

"We need script writers, announcers, control men, technicians, and continuity writers," Wynn said, "and we hope students who have an interest in radio work will come out tomorrow afternoon and participate."

The first radio production from the campus studio was sponsored last Tuesday night by the music department. Within the next two or three weeks regular programs will be outlined.

This is the second year that the campus radio studio has been in operation. Dr. Ralph McDonald is in general charge of production, and arranges all the shows. He is at present working out plans for programs of many different types.

Order of Grail Has Hayride Today

Members of the Order of the Grail and their dates will leave Graham Memorial this afternoon at 5:30 for a hayride and picnic, Charlie Idol, scribe, announced yesterday.

"Our destination is as yet unknown, but transportation will be provided by our four-footed friends and we will have our own program of music under the stars rendered by Tchaikowsky, Strauss, and Fish Worley," he said.

Nowell, Sadoff, Lalanne, Dunkle Are Outstanding In Close Contest

GWYNN NOWELL at right, played a stand-out game for Carolina yesterday while Paul Severin again proved himself All-American.

State Makes 83-Yard Gain In Fluke Play

By Leonard Lohred

A brilliant one-man 54-minute stand by Guard Gwynn Nowell, some fine ball-carrying by Sid Sadoff and Jim Lalanne and a stellar performance by Harry Dunkle combined to give Carolina a shady 13-7 lead over State college yesterday in Raleigh and offset a poor showing on pass defense and a failure to make breaks.

Playing his greatest game in his two-year varsity career before a home-town crowd, as Carolina players have been doing for the past two seasons, Nowell was in almost all tackles in the first half and continued in the second half to stand up under whatever line bucking the State eleven could contrive. The 198-pound six-footer played the entire first half and missed but six minutes of the third period, and throughout his 54-minute stay at left guard accounted for his share of brilliant line play on offense as well as defense.

Sadoff Sensational

Sadoff, always steady, played what was his most sensational game, not only contributing his usual three- and four-yard rushes at the line, but also breaking loose on several series of downs for long runs of 15 yards. Sadoff wasn't always stopped by the secondary yesterday, and once through he was hard to drag down. He and Lalanne accounted for almost all of the Tar Heels' yardage.

Lalanne, too, was at his usual peak of brilliance and contributed the defensive gem, dragging down Pat Fehley on the Carolina-16-yard marker when the Wolfpack fullback was on (Continued on page 3, column 5)

Turkey, Russia, Germany Mass Troops in Balkans

Greece Fears Axis Ultimatum

By United Press

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 19 — Reports received here tonight said hundreds of thousands of Turkish, Russian and German troops are moving up to strategic positions along Balkan frontiers and Greece was taking new security measures.

LONDON—Diplomatic sources predicted tonight that any Axis ultimatum to Greece would be countered by immediate British occupation of the strategic island of Crete and possibly other Grecian bases.

These sources indicated that British plans for counter-action in event of Axis attempts to extend their sway to Greece are complete.

ISTANBUL, Turkey—The possibility of far-reaching developments in Anglo-Turkish-Soviet relations was seen here tonight in connection with reports that Joseph Stalin held a secret consultation with the Turkish ambassador to Moscow, Hadar Aktay. The conference was said to have been held Wednesday.

They were believed to call for quick moves in case of threatened danger in that area.

NAPLES, Italy—Mount Vesuvius broke into violent eruption today pouring forth a cascade of stone and lava.

LONDON, Oct. 20 — (Sunday) — Germany's air bombers delivered one of the heaviest attacks of the war on London Saturday night but early this morning the assaults lightened a bit.

ROME—An official communique tonight revealed that Premier Benito Mussolini has gone by airplane to resume his inspection of Italian forces near the Yugoslav frontier.

Actor Earl Wynn Takes Wrestling

Earl Wynn, professor of speech in the dramatic arts department, is temporarily devoting part of his time to wrestling lessons with P. H. Quinlan, University coach. Wynn is not thinking of forsaking the intonations and exacting dictums of the spoken language for a more vigorous profession, however. It is all in the interest of art, and for the show which must go on next Wednesday night when the Playmakers open their season with "Love's Old Sweet Song."

When Wynn was cast in the role of Stylianos, a big-hearted Greek wrestler, he was nothing if not realistic in deciding to enroll in a special wrestling class. Now he will be able to take an authentic stomach scissor hold on his opponent and pin him down in convincing style.

Tickets for the production are now on sale at the Playmakers' business office in Swain hall or at Ledbetter-Pickard's in the village.

Sommers To Give Gallery Lecture

The fourth in a series of gallery talks being presented by the art department will be given this afternoon at 5 o'clock in Person hall when Dr. Clemens Sommers of the department will discuss the collection of original Old Masters currently showing in the Person hall gallery.

The exhibit, which typifies the formal tradition of landscape and portrait painting of the Flemish, English and French artists of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, includes the work of such masters as Raeburn, Van Dyck, Ruysdael, Greuze, and Lawrence. This is the first time that these works have been shown in the United States outside of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.
