Lippman Proposed For Lecture Series

Writer Invited By Institute of Human Relations

Walter Lippman, well-known American journalist and writer, has been proposed by the Weil Lecture committee to speak here as the leading lecturer during the Institute of Human Relations early in April, Dean R. B. House, chairman of the committee, announced yesterday. According to Melville Corbett and Ed Kantrowitz, co-chairman of the 1941 Institute, Mr. Lippman will, if he accepts, make three evening lectures on the subject of the present international crisis.

The Institute of Human Relations, started in 1927 and now sponsored biennially by the YMCA, consists of a week's program of lectures, forums, seminars, exhibits, classes, and meetings, designed to offer an extensive review and study of the leading social, economic, political, and educational problems in the region, nation, and world community. The Weil lecturer, formerly an independent speaker sponsored by the Weil committee, became a part of the Institute several years ago.

Although sponsored by the YMCA, the Institute is promoted by a joint committee of 17 students and an equal number of faculty, representing most of the campus organizations and departments of the University—a genuine "all-campus" affair. The campus organizations not only serve on the

Nazi Bombs Fire London

New Explosive Proves Deadly

By United Press

Germany poured a new and terrible kind of destruction on London Saturday night in the form of an explosive incendiary bomb, against which fire-fighters found themselves at a serious disadvantage.

The new bomb, designed to penetrate roof tops before exploding, spread fires over a wide area before spotters could douse them, lighting up brilliant targets for subsequent waves of bombers.

The raid, following a relative lull of several days, approached in fierceness that devastating fire raid on the city of London the night of Sunday, December 29, before the all-clear signal was sounded.

Royal Air Force fighters attempted to drive away the raiders, who were practically similar to those employed Friday night in the dusk-to-dawn raid at Portsmouth.

The attack, in which the Germans

Visitors Barred From Infirmary

No more visitors will be allowed in the infirmary until further notice, Miss Elizabeth Correll, secretary at the infirmary, announced yesterday. The infirmary is unusually full, the majority of the patients being sick with severe colds or influenza. Because colds and influenza are highly contagious and because patients should not be disturbed, it is requested that students do not visit the infirmary unless ill.

'Peeping Tom' Case Reviewed by Honor Council; Student Caught by Police, Placed on Probation

By Ernest Frankel

The shade was up, light streamed through the window, piece by piece, lingerie dropped to the floor, "Peeping Tom," someone shouted—and there began the Student Council's story-book tale of a search through dark alleys, a phantom runner, a conflicting evidence which still brings an ironical smile to everyone—even Tom, who peeped.

When the shadow beside the window heard the warning, he took off in the direction of town even more quickly than the now-undraped figure had taken off a few minutes before. A dozen yelling voices followed and the startled girl behind the window rushed to pull down the shade.

Gasping for breath, the student who had seen too much finally reached the comparative security of Franklin street. Meanwhile, the pursuers, righteously indignant, had reported the outrage to the police. The forlorn student, still running, was caught

All ten airplanes and the hangar at the University airport were completely demolished last night between 7 and 8 o'clock by a fire which resulted from a short circuit and caused an estimated damage of $10,000 to $11,000.

The blaze started in the cockpit of a plane on which Bill Sharkey, an assistant mechanic, was working, quickly spread to the other planes in the hangar, ignited gas tanks and two drums of fuel oil, and within 30 minutes reduced the hangar and airplanes to smoking, twisted steel.

Playmakers Make Merry With Revel

Celebrating the ending of the Christmas season with their 12th annual Twelfth Night Revel, the Carolina Playmakers made merry last night on the stage of The Playmakers theater in the manner of the old Elizabethan celebration of "Old Christmas."

Presided over by the Lord of Misrule and his Queen, elected for the occasion, they presented a program of foolery and nonsense, brought to life again the lusty carousers of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" and made good-natured fun at the expense of themselves.

Professor Frederick H. Koch, founder and director of The Carolina Playmakers, began the Revel by explaining the origin and meaning of "Old Christmas." He told how the people of Old England marked the coming of the Wisemen, twelve days after Christmas, with a holiday of revelry. He explained that it was also a holy day, celebrated in the church as Epiphany.

The program last night opened with the election of Irene Smart, member of the Playmakers' staff in charge of

Film Club Shows War Movie Today

"A Farewell to Arms," the movie based on Ernest Hemingway's World War novel of the same name, will open the Playmaker Film club's winter series this afternoon at 2:30 in the Playmakers theater.

Helen Hayes and Gary Cooper are starred in the film, playing the parts of a nurse and an American soldier in the Italian army whose brief and fateful romance has become one of the most famous love stories in modern American literature.

"A Farewell to Arms" has been acclaimed throughout the country as one of the finest of the many pictures made with the World War as background. It was considered a faithful and expert projection of Hemingway's incomparable story.

Next Sunday afternoon the Film club will show "Ruggles of Red Gap," starring Charles Laughton, Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles and Roland Young.

Others to be shown will probably include: "The Informer," "Viva Villa," "David Copperfield," "Sequoia," and "Amphytrion."

Admittance to the showings is by membership card, which may be secured for one dollar from the box office just prior to this afternoon's program.

Accepted applicants will get six weeks' training at the Marine barracks at Quantico, Virginia, this summer and again next summer. Those who complete these training periods will be eligible to apply for commissions as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps reserve.

Since members of the reserve are exempted from the draft, S. W. J. Welch, University vocational director, expects a large number of applicants.
