U. S. Should Fight To Save Britain, CPU Poll Reveals

Students Favor Vote to Decide War Entrance

By Paul Komisaruk
University students, by an overwhelming majority of almost 2 to 1, favor the United States' entry into the war as a last resort to save Britain, the final count of the Carolina Political union war poll revealed last night.

Figures showed a grand total of 1,606 votes cast, and of these, 1,003 favored America's entrance into the war, while 572 were against it, and 31 were undecided.

An even greater 3 to 1 majority said that labor employed in vital defense industries should not be allowed to strike. Three hundred and ninety-three persons were in favor of allowing labor the right to strike, as compared with the 1,191 who would deny them the right to strike. Twenty-three persons were undecided on this point.

Largest Undecided Vote
A 299 majority felt that the United States' present policy of all-out aid to Britain would lead this country to war. Eight hundred and eighty-two persons claimed that it would lead us to war, and 583 maintained that it would not embroil this country. One hundred and forty-one persons remained undecided on this point, the largest undecided vote that was cast on the ballot.

A slight 46 majority said that the United States' entrance into a war outside of this hemisphere should be decided by a national referendum. Eight hundred and seven favored the referendum, 761 opposed it, and 38 were undecided.

Opinion Split
Student opinion split wide open on the question of Germany's treatment after the war in the event that she is defeated. Seven hundred and seventy-three persons asserted that Germany should be treated more severely at the close of this war than at the close of the first World War, and 775, a majority of two, said she should be treated less severely in the event that she is defeated. Fifty-eight persons were undecided on this last question.

Answers to the first three questions, which were indirectly related, showed a definite consistency on the part of the student body to aid Britain to the limit, even in war if necessary; to all.

Dorm Residents May Get Dance Bids Saturday

Dormitory residents may secure their bids for the annual Inter-Dormitory dances starting Saturday, Piggie Briggs, chairman of the Inter-Dorm dance committee, announced yesterday.

Bids will be left with the presidents of each of the dormitories, and they will cost one dollar. This will admit the student to the entire set.

Both the Friday night and Saturday afternoon dance will be closed to the general campus. Anyone may attend the Saturday night dance by paying one dollar.

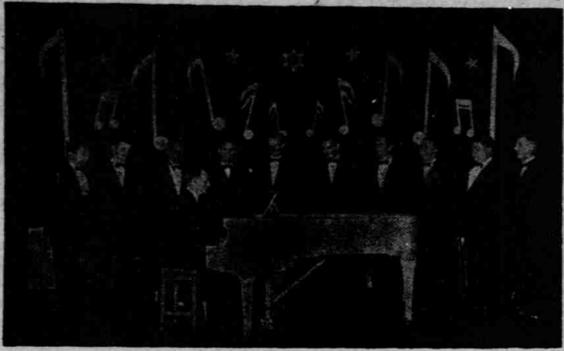

As has been the custom in the past the Order of the Grail and the Inter-Dormitory group will sponsor the Saturday night dance jointly.

The set includes a Friday night dance from 9 to 1, a tea dance Saturday afternoon from 4:30 to 6:30, and the Saturday night dance from 9 until 12.

Jimmie Cannon and his orchestra will play Friday night, and Jimmie Lunceford will play for the two Saturday dances.

Health Service Needs More Help

The Health Service still needs a few more volunteers for orderly service. Any students who would like to help with this work are requested to get in immediate touch with Fred Weaver, assistant dean of students at 206 South building.

DORMITORY MEN WILL DANCE to the music of Jimmie Cannon and his orchestra, above, at the Friday night Inter-dormitory dance on January 31, which will be held from 9 to 1 in the Tin Can. Cannon's band features talented Jean Alkinson, 14-year-old child singer.

Student-Faculty King, Queen Will Be Nominated Tuesday

Names To Be Secret Until February 5

Nominations for king and queen of Carolina's seventh annual Student-Faculty day celebration on February 5 will begin on Tuesday, January 23, it was announced yesterday by Ed Maner, chairman of the coronation committee.

Maner said that this year's election would be one of "interest and excitement" because of the fact that the names of the king and queen will not be announced until coronation morning.

Next Tuesday's nominations will be held in the YMCA from 9 to 4. Any coed may be nominated for queen, and any faculty member is eligible for the kingship. The first five coeds and the first three faculty members will meet in a run-off election Friday, January 31.

Coed Will Be Queen
The coed with the most votes will become "queen for the day," and the two coeds with the next largest number will become her attendants.

Preliminary election results will be announced in the DAILY TAR HEEL on Wednesday, January 29.

Ike Grainger and Sis Clinard, co-chairmen of the day said that final plans will be completed by next Tuesday, nomination day for the king and queen. Work on plans for the gala dance in the evening will be finished over this weekend. Tentative plans call for the dance to be held in the University Dining hall. The chairmen said that this move would eliminate elaborate decorations, and the general discomfort that would arise should the dance be held in the Tin Can.

Theme Still Undecided

The theme for the dance has not yet been decided, but committeemen are working on five main possibilities. They are: Carolina goes to a fire, or puts one out; Carolina shipwreck; come as you are; Carolina students as they might like to be; and, Carolina students' favorite character in literature. A South American theme was eliminated because costuming would be much too elaborate.

British Troops Surge Into Italian-Occupied Tobruk; McNary Splits With Willkie Over Lend-Lease Bill

By United Press
CAIRO, Jan. 22—Italy's Libyan base of Tobruk fell to the British army of the Nile shortly after noon today when Australian troops surged into the battered town after a whirlwind final assault of barely thirty hours and overpowered its 20,000 to 30,000 defenders, it was announced officially.

Italian prisoners by the thousands were reported to have been taken in the death-blow against Tobruk, boosting to perhaps 100,000 the number of Fascist troops snared in Britain's offensive.

(In London the capture of the headquarters of the 22nd Italian Army at Tobruk was reported.)

The capture of Tobruk, 80 miles deep into Libya, after 21 days' siege by land, sea, and air, was said to have knocked out of the war 185,000 Italian troops or two-thirds of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's army of Libya.

When the British blitzkrieg swept across the desert on December 1, overpowering Sidi Barrani, Sollum, Bardia, and wiping out the Italian invasion of Egypt, Graziani had about 280,000 troops, it was said.

The Australian troops surged into Tobruk behind a battering ram of

Wynn to Read Popular Play Sunday Night

Earl Wynn, assistant director of the Carolina Playmakers will read "The Male Animal," a comedy by James Thurber and Elliott Nugent, Sunday night, January 26 in the Playmakers theater as the fourth in the series of Sunday night play readings. The reading is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

"The Male Animal," a hit comedy produced on Broadway last year, is the story of the revolt of a mild-mannered English professor under pressure from the more athletic departments, when his wife is endangered. Written by James Thurber, one of America's best known humorists, it pictures the "Male Animal" breaking away from the domination of the so-called "weaker" sex.

Thurber is famous for his eccentric drawings which fill the pages of humor magazines, usually on the theme of the dominated male.

The reading is open to all those interested.

Patterson Will Be Principal Speaker

Reception Will Be Held In Library Before Formal Dinner In Cafeteria

A miniature league of nations tonight at a 400-plate formal banquet will officially welcome Carolina's 110 "summer school" students from South America. The affair, probably one of the greatest demonstrations of the "good neighbor" policy, boasts a guest list which reads like a "who's who" in the two Americas.

COMER IN SPANISH means "to eat." And that's what Secretary of the YMCA Harry Comer, above, will mean to the University's Latin American guests tonight. He's in charge of the super-banquet being given in their honor in the University Dining hall.

Scholar Sees Basic English In Wide Use

"Basic English," which requires only 850 words but can express almost any thought and can be learned rapidly, "may soon become the world language for business and everyday purposes," Dr. I. A. Richards, one of its developers, predicted here yesterday.

The noted British scholar was addressing the unique Inter-American Institute at the University, here he is putting his English-teaching methods into practice with 110 South American "good neighbors." To prove his point, the Cambridge professor and visiting lecturer at Harvard gave them a polished lecture on Democracy in "850-word Basic."

The main purposes of "Basic English," according to Dr. Richards, who pioneered the system jointly with C. K. Ogden in their 1920 book on "The Meaning of Meaning," are to provide a second or international language and a quick, smooth first step in learning normal English which will also make the range and power of English clearer.

"Basic is at its best," he declared and should find one of its most important uses today, in explaining simply and clearly our chief general ideas and in spreading a clearer understanding of fundamental political issues."
