Good Morning

By Orville Campbell

Jane McMaster and the Woman's association have had to hand out decisions on many vital problems over the past nine months.

Honor cases, new hours for coeds, and other important matters have kept the honor council so busy that it was not surprising to us to learn of the inefficiency of the recent voting in the coed elections.

Unless the new officers of the Woman's association make recommendations or changes that will improve the inefficiency of the present setup, they will again be faced with the same trouble. Under present circumstances the Woman's association has done a good job. The problem facing the new council is what course to follow. Certainly the new leaders should profit by past mistakes, and make an earnest effort to remedy them.

There are several vital coed problems on the campus at the present time. But before any action is taken, the new group should reorganize the present system under which the Woman's association is working.

We have no facts on which to base our claim, but we have been told that the Woman's honor council over the past year has handled more honor cases and problems than both the Men's student council and Student Legislature combined. If these facts are true, the most logical solution would be to divide women's student government into two groups. Let one of these groups handle all honor cases. Let the other make a thorough study of dating regulations and other such problems that might arise. Both groups would have time to hand down just decisions. But groups would know their duties and how to go about carrying them out. Where inefficiency has been a problem in the past, there will be no problems in the future.

More coeds would take part in their student government, and they would work to aid it instead of cuss it. A new setup would result in renewed interest on the part of all only advocate action by the men's council as a last resort. The present coed officers have no valid excuse for what happened at Monday's balloting. They must take the full blame for the slip-up, but, above all, they must seek to avoid carelessness the next time.—L. H.

students. Never has there been a better time for a change.

New officers in the Woman's association can put their government on sound basis for years to come if they will realize the need for changes and make them. Officers in the Woman's association have a thankless job. Such a change, at first, may not meet with the approval of the coeds. But if some change is made the coeds will realize that their student government is progressive. Progressive student government is the solution to all problems.

DECLARE WAR

not to glorify war for war's sake.

"While it is necessary to preserve democracy at all costs, it is equally important that we tone down the glory of war," he said.

"The dictators in Europe do not preach war for defense or for security," Sachar declared. "They tell their people that it is an ennobling experience . . . but in America the older folks know full well the tragedy of war, its dirt, its smut, its paralysis of decent and humane aspirations."

Summing up, the Hillel director declared, "Here is our largest responsibility as teachers. We must meet the cynicism from abroad with renewed faith in the sanctity of personality; the disillusionment from abroad with renewed faith in the dynamic quality of the democratic way; the belligerency from abroad by renewed faith in the creativity of peace."

Koo, addressing the morning session yesterday, pointed to the "spiritual qualities" of China's 4,000-year-old civilization as the materials with which the United States must gird itself to meet the "coming physical crisis."

"China has survived the terrific impact of war with Japan because of the spiritual qualities of her peoples," he said. "Our physical life is being shot away and yet China today is a greater nation than ever before."

Drawing from his personal observations of his native country at war for the past three years, Koo predicted flatly that Japan can "never conquer us."

Dartmouth's Masculinity Brings College $500,000

HANOVER, N. H.—(ACP)—A man who never went to Dartmouth has given the college $500,000 because he believes it a "wholly masculine institution."

Emil Brommer, Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturer, specified in his will that the funds may not be used for the "so-called dead languages" or for maintenance of competitive athletics.

STUDENT FEES

Another principal change would be moving the fiscal year to run concurrently with the calendar year. That is, budgets would be drawn for operation during the winter, spring, and fall quarters successively. At present the fiscal year begins in September with the opening of school, causing considerable confusion during the first months because the budgets have not yet been drafted or passed.

The amount of the proposed block fee has been set at approximately $13.85 for the first year, the same total being paid now. The legislature would have power to lower this sum but a student body vote would be required to raise it.

Student leaders felt last night that Administration sanction would follow if there was evidence of sincere student desire for this plan.

A decided advance in student government was foreseen, should the plan go into effect. It would give students direct supervision over their own finances.

Bill Allen, chairman of the student advisory committee, pointed out, "This is only a proposal. Once it is passed by the legislature and the student body, it would be necessary to draft a complete coordinated program with proper limitations."

Better Constitution

Speaker Cochrane's eight proposed amendments to the Student Legislature's constitution were passed unanimously at a special called session Wednesday night. There were no amendments to the proposed amendments. The amendments were introduced, the special session voted unanimously in favor of them, and now the eight proposals have only to receive ratification by the student body on general elections day before they go into effect.

The work done by the Student Legislature this year has proven the importance of this body on the campus. When, in the fall quarter, the bill was passed that abolished the Buccaneer, notice was served that the Legislature was no longer a child, and that in the future students could expect action when needed. The Legislators have worked to make this group one of the most important on the campus.

Last spring a new constitution was drawn up. It was felt then that by now some changes would have to be made. But those who wanted to see the legislature make progress, and those who wrote the constitution wanted one that would serve the governing body this year. The present constitution — with no amendments — has done a good job, but the time has come for changes. Cochrane's eight proposals will take all loop-holes out of the present constitution. They represent deep thought, and they help to make the Legislature even more democratic than before. They place the Legislature in a position to work for the betterment of conditions on the campus.

We are in favor of Cochrane's proposals. We feel that all of them should be added to the constitution. Still we wonder if the unanimous action of the Legislature in passing the amendments indicated that all are perfect, or that the Legislature felt it unnecessary to take the time to change the amendments. We hope the former is true, because if it is, the Student Legislature will in the future be the strongest organization on the campus working for the good of the students.—O. C.

Laxity at the Polls

The coed elections Tuesday ended in the naming of new officers of the Woman's Association for next year, and it was revealed yesterday, also marked a case of inefficiency on the part of WA officials in handling the balloting.

After the first count had been taken last Tuesday night, it was discovered that there were 20 votes cast which were not marked off by the elections officials, making the total number of votes in the ballot boxes greater than the number of coeds officially voting.

The whole catch, according to WA officials, came in the manner in which the actual voting was handled. When girls go up to vote, their names are marked off on a list of all coeds. This is to insure the impossibility of voting twice. What happened was that the 20 girls whose votes were extra simply did not have their names checked off the list. Here, inefficiency in handling the elections took place. The fault obviously does not lie with the students who voted, but with the officials of the Woman's Association who were in charge of the elections.

It is a case of laxity in attention to duty when the easy process of marking off names is not carried out. If the heads of coed government cannot even perform this simple procedure, then how can they be expected to deal with problems of a much more serious nature?

The answer, of course, lies with the officials themselves. Either through misunderstanding or negligence they slipped up. If they feel as though they cannot do a job right, they might just as well turn over the actual officiating to the men's Student Council which has done efficient work in the past.
