The scene was Philadelphia's Franklin field, the occasion was the annual Penn relay carnival and the time was last Friday afternoon when a number of the nation's better sprint men took their marks for the running of the American quarter-mile relay championship. Established favorites were the much-heralded quartets from North Texas State Teachers and from Xavier, Ohio, college for Negroes. Little note was made of the other finalists from Navy and from Duke, for the Texans and the team from the Middle West were expected to have things pretty much their own

From the crack of the starting gun it seemed evident that the experts were not far off center as the green of Texas and the purple of Xavier quickly moved to the fore. It was neck and neck up to the anchor leg and the large audience in the tiers of high-banked stands that rise sharply above the track rose to its feet for the customary neck-craning which invariably accompanies a close finish. And the crowd was not disappointed.

The two favorites were pounding down the final stretch, not an eyelash apart, when a blue streak, in the person of Duke's Moffat Storer, came from far back in third place, caught the two leaders five yards in front of the tape and whizzed on by in a blinding finish to take the race away from last year's championship club from Texas and the breath away from those staid Philadelphians who have a habit of sticking close to the prescribed order of things.

As expected, and as is quite customary, the eastern journals of the following morning carried the sickening "rave notices" that "the South has finally arrived," that "a Dixie athletic bombshell has broken over the sporting world," or that "the men from below the Mason-Dixon Line put on a surprising performance." The same tiresome "we are amazed stories" that must make such dull reading for southern fans, that went hand in hand with Tennessee's Rose Bowl in-See SPORT SCRIPTS, Page 4

Mahoney Aids Defense Work Of Indians

The Carolina lacrosse team further prepared yesterday for its coming match with Duke and this Saturday's warm-up battle against the Washington lacrosse club with a vigorous scrimmage and the acquisition of a new defense man.

The new man is Momo Mahoney. The big, congenial Irishman has never played lacrosse to any great extent, but seems to be picking up the game quickly and should prove a valuable asset to Coach Cornsweet's defense. Fans may remember Mahoney as the clown of the 1941 swimming team. The big boy stated, "I've been wasting all my time on street corners, and now I find that it's not only legal, but they give you sticks to do it with."

The defense was the shining light in yesterday's scrimmage. Time after time the offense was turned back from the goal by sparkling defensive play. The defensive play was the only redeeming feature of the whole afternoon, however. The attack was weak throughout and missing madly. The play was lackadaisical and failed to break through the defense at all.

The Indians were practicing several new plays which will be worked on trast to their game with Duke last across the platter. all this week as well as in the game at Washington Saturday in an effort to perfect them for the Duke game. It was apparent that the offense needed of vigor to perfect the plays. Yesterday's poor showing can be excused by the long period of inactivity that the men partly have had since their last real game.

Tony Remy was outstanding in the scrimmage, and the work of Mahoney in his first real taste of the game promised that his assistance can be helpful. Jun Gugert was on the sidelines on a pair of crutches, eager to see action once more, but Jun will not play until the Duke battle.

Linkmen Fall Before Duke,

Neese Sets Pace By Downing Poole, Carolinas' Champ

DURHAM, April 29 - Carolina's golf team came closer to beating Duke today than it has in the five past years, but the Blue Devils had just enough power to defeat the Tar Heels, 151/2-111/2, here on the Hillandale course.

The win all but assured the Blue Devils the Southern conference crown. The defeat was Carolina's third in nine starts.

Pace-setter in the Tar Heels' play was Shooky Neese, who defeated Poole, the Carolinas' champion, 2-1, after trailing Poole by two strokes on the out-nine.

home with the first run of the game. Rich gained third on a passed ball and scored when Chubby Myers grounded out, third to first. After that inning the Tar Heels did not threaten again until the eighth when they placed two men on base.

Howard Hit by Pitcher

Myers singled with one man out and moved to second on an infield out. Jimmy Howard, getting back into form after being out because of an injury to his finger, took first when he was hit by a pitched ball. A longrunning catch by Fred Eason in right field on Al Mathes' drive ended the on the bases in every inning and left 12 of them stranded. Deacons Threaten

The Deacons' most serious threat occurred in the second inning when they left the bags full. A single by Bob Reid and a walk to Gallovich set the stage for a sacrifice by John Polanski. With men on second and third and one man down, catcher Ray Everly fouled out to Charlie Rich on third, but Vivian worked Cheshire for Baby Tennis Team a walk, filling the bases. Bearing down with every pitch, Lefty worked John Fletcher, leadoff man, into a hole and then proceeded to fan him with a sharp-breaking curve ball.
