A man never shows his own character so plainly as by his manner of portraying another's.—Jean Paul Richter.

There has been considerable discussion since Sunday over the action of several Carolina students in connection with the May Frolics dance set over the past weekend. Criticisms that have reached us do not deal with action at the dances. Rather the actions of certain individuals and fraternities after the dances seems to be the big problem.

Dances and Dance Weekends

To make moralists out of ourselves and to preach is not our object; we simply believe that students at Carolina should have enough respect for themselves and the University not to make fools out of themselves when dances come around. Last weekend was noisy, but what weekend isn't, especially with dances on the Hill? So our saying "making fools of themselves" does not mean making vocal celebrities of themselves but becoming so disorderly as to draw the wrath and disdain of visitors and townspeople on the University's head.

We believe that no sort of administrative regulation is necessary to control student exuberance on weekends. We also believe that no editorial attack is necessary. Students have enough sense to realize that "corn whiskey" will sneak up on them. It is their responsibility to control the sneaking.

There will always be a certain element which gets out of control. And there will also always be a certain group of spectators which will holler at the slightest provocation about students "going to h— and the d—."

To the first element, no concession should be granted except in the form of setting an example which will curb their effervescence. To the latter element is due the consideration of a gentleman to his courteous society: an exhibition of manners which will prove better than apologies that students have enough self-respect and good manners to act decently if they want to.

It boils down to the question of wanting to act decently. Most of us do; those of us who don't can be set aright not by catching it in the neck about their actions, but by being made to want to maintain high standards of conduct. That is our job.

Concert Tickets on Sale

Tickets for the Tony Pastor concert were distributed last night to members of the Inter-Dormitory council and the DAILY TAR HEEL staff. They will go on sale throughout the campus today.

When this newspaper was given the opportunity to sponsor the concert for the benefit of dormitory social rooms it did so with the realization that a great deal of work would have to be done if any sizeable amount of money was raised. We plan to do that work, but we ask your cooperation. The concert will certainly be worth the twenty-five cents that is being charged.

Every dormitory should turn out 100 per cent. It was decided last night that dormitory residents may sell tickets any place on the campus, and that all money collected will be returned to the dormitories making the sale. This will give every dormitory an opportunity to raise between $25.00 and $50.00.

New dormitory presidents are asked to spend as much time as possible in advertising the concert. It will be to their advantage to have as large a crowd as possible present. If the concert is a success, this newspaper hopes to find other ways of raising money for the much needed social rooms. When we went in office we promised to work for the students, and that will be our aim throughout. But we do ask the students in turn to cooperate. By working together we can bring about many improvements on the campus.

Bemusings Before Breakfast

They say these are times of changes and unrest. For a long time we have been hearing this old phrase kicked back and forth across cups of coffee and in general boresess sessions. Until now we haven't thought much about it.

It must be conceded that such is the case, however. Now comes word that the United States Department of Treasury has authorized the use of rayon and nylon threads rather than imported silk in making paper money.

These must be trying days for counterfeiters.

In Passing

Finland and Sweden are still arguing over their respective neutrality. Now they are calling it a "duel in the dark." What they need is a few blitzful words from Adolf.

To throw some light on the situation.

Latest news in the show business is that Billy Rose plans to help bolster morale among U. S. service men in

BILLY ROSE

With a vaudeville circuit of the nation's leading entertainers, he plans to begin his tour May 15, and last through July 1. Such stars as Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Bill Robinson, George Jessel, Burns and Allen, Tony Martin, Ben Bernie, and others have volunteered their services. The shows will run one night in small encampments and two or more nights in some of the larger ones.

Which leads us to/believe Brother Rose had better have a good show at Fort Bragg. McGaughey will give him plenty of competition.

We hear the seniors are going to have a blanket party in the arboretum. Last year they had a blackout ball. Maybe they should call this a knockout ball . . .

Anyhow, the blanket party should cover the situation. How about a date, situation?

The federal government is completely willing to cooperate with individual students in order that the draft will not produce too drastic an effect on the student's life.

Several opportunities are offered the student to vary the time when he will enter training. He may (1) procure a reasonably accurate estimate of the date he will be called for induction;

(2) request advancement of his number so that he may complete his college training period without interrupting an academic year; (3) appeal the decision of the local board to obtain a decision more favorable to his particular case; (4) volunteer now, if his parents consent and he is under age, and serve his period of military training before he becomes 21.

The variety of these possible actions demonstrates the willingness of the government to allow for individual differences. In return, the student should cooperate with the national defense plan, for in this way the defense program will least interrupt the smoothness of the national life.

The Keyboard has been accused of isolationism. And the funny part about it is that the staff writer who turned in the items responsible for the accusation voted "yes" on all the questions in the CPU poll yesterday except the one about treating Germany more severely. We won't argue about whether the accusation was damning or not . . .

But we were only repeating what we thought were the cleverest cracks we had heard in the dorm store bull sessions on the war situation.

The Geology department loves nature in the rough. Even the bus they have hired for field trips this week has no springs, and from the sound of the motor we judge it runs almost entirely on the driver's will power.

The driver, incidentally, is too nice a guy and too good a driver to deserve being saddled with a hack like that. It was he on yesterday's trip who saved the day when the prof failed, after digging a ditch halfway across Wake county, to find a specimen of the fossil he wanted to show the class . . .

He pulled a couple out of his pocket that he had saved from the day before.

Letters To The Editor

(Letters must be typed. Those over 300 words long are subject to cutting or omission)

To the student body:

It has been the vogue lately for campus leaders, ignorant of the workings of the Interfraternity council, to cast aspersions on its efficiency. Its officers would like to let the campus know that although the Interfraternity council does not open its mouth and shout as loudly as some organizations, it is nevertheless doing its work efficiently.

Foremost is an achievement too often taken for granted: Carolina is one of the few campuses in the nation with organized rushing. The president and secretary of the council presented the plan to the National Interfraternity conference in New York this fall, and it was so enthusiastically received that several letters have already been received from universities wishing to use the system on their own campuses.

Every year the council gives two scholarships to boys in North Caroend, Tommy Dorsey commented that it was the best college band he had ever heard.

Satterfield Band

Satterfield last fall took over Charlie Wood's band, which won the swing fracas two years ago, and has gradually worked out a style of pure swing all his own. Composed of six brass, four saxes and three rhythm, the band plays its original arrangements in a slow blues style with plenty of brass and numerous riffs. Satterfield himself does the arranging and piano playing in a really negro style.

Vince Courtney leads and vocalizes the latest edition of the veteran Duke Ambassadors. Consisting of five brass, five saxes, and three rhythm, the Ambassadors play with the Miller-Dorsey style, emphasizing precision ensemble work.

Vanden Dries is known to the campus as an end on the Wake Forest football squad. He features another teammate, Tony Gallovitch, on the trombone. With smaller instrumentation—four saxes, three brass and three rhythm—the band is definitely sweet. Virginia Alderson does the vocals.
