

Hobbs Commends Ruffin Proposal

Emphasizes Need For Revision In Dorm Government

By Herman D. Lawson
"The boys of Ruffin dormitory who have taken on themselves the task of writing out a constitution have an opportunity to really do a service for the campus," Truman Hobbs, newly-elected president of the Student body, said in an interview last night.

Referring to the action taken last Wednesday night by residents of Ruffin in appointing a committee to draw up a constitution to eliminate the evils of unrepresentative elections of dormitory officers and the planning of social activities, Hobbs expressed the hope that "the other dormitory presidents and their councils would study the efforts of Ruffin, and then take the steps necessary to improve conditions within their own dormitories."

Constitution Proposal

The proposal of a constitution for Ruffin grew out of current dissension in the dormitory over a proposal hay-ride Sunday night and a controversy over past unrepresentative elections when a Ruffin student at the meeting Wednesday night voiced the opinion:

"No one has been pleased with the past activities of the dormitory, and a change is necessary to bring about the desired ideal dormitory life."

In explaining his stand on the constitution question, Hobbs pointed out: "At Carolina we have a complicated and intricate system of student government."

"There is an effective legislature and council set up to handle the campus problems; there is a very excellent framework for handling interdormitory problems; yet at the very foundation of our student government structure, interdormitory government, we have been guilty of almost criminal neglect."

Financial Arrangements

"All dorm residents are aware of the ignorance and mystery surrounding dormitory elections. Few boys know just who spends the money or by what authorization. The dormitory floor councilors charged with keeping the order on their halls are all too often unimpressed by any feeling of responsibility."

"I hope that this new constitution will shed some light on these dark spots in our student government."

Baseball Rally To Be Held Tuesday Night

Jones Leads Students In Emerson Stadium For Conference Game

Carolina's first baseball pep rally will be staged Tuesday night at 7:30 in Emerson Stadium as head Cheerleader Curry Jones takes over his new role. The event, sponsored by the University club, will be held on the eve of the last game in the series with Duke which will decide the Southern Conference championship.

Jones wishes to rouse up the student body to enthusiasm which will bolster the team for the game. In addition to Jones and the new cheering staff, Controller Billy Carmichael will be on hand to speak to the cheerios. Coach Bunn Hearn and Co-captain Charlie Rich and Ben Browning will represent the team at the rally.

Duke Game Today

The Tar Heels meet Duke today in Greensboro and again Monday at Carolina in addition to the Durham game Wednesday. Tickets for the Wednesday game will be sold for 25 cents rather than the usual 50 cents in an effort to insure large attendance. University club president Steve Peck requested that all persons taking cars fill them with students so Carolina will have a large cheering section for Jones to lead in backing the team.

Peck urged that all students attend the rally and show their spirit to the team. A pep rally before a baseball game has never been held at Carolina and with a team near the championship the students should rally to give the team the backing it deserves.

Johnny Satterfield

Battle of Swing To Star Janitor

Hargraves To Play For Satterfield

Pianist Johnny Satterfield, who will lead his band tomorrow afternoon in the "Battle of Swing," announced last night that janitor Willie Hargraves will be blowing a tenor sax in his section.

Hargraves, who has occasionally left his job in Old East and Old West for brief but hot performances for Memorial hall audiences, has been playing regularly with Satterfield's outfit for a month.

Tomorrow afternoon, he will take rides and play ensemble as Satterfield competes against Freddy Johnson-Vince Courtney and Bill Dries for the swing crown of the state.

Sponsored by the University band, the contest will open at 3:15 and last over two hours. Tickets for 35 cents go on sale at the Memorial hall booths half an hour before the contest begins. John Hammond of New York, the best swing music critic in the country, will come down tomorrow to judge the battle.

George Simon, editor of Metronome who judged the contest two years ago, heard Hargraves as a soloist on the program and called him one of the best tenor men he had ever heard. Some years ago the campus janitor played for a while in New York, but then decided to come back to Chapel Hill. Since then, he has had offers from practically every colored name band in the business.

Satterfield praised him yesterday as the "best sax man available for us or anybody else. His hot playing represents everything we're striving for. His style is smooth, melodic, perfectly phrased—and mean."

The sophomore bandleader, who took over Charlie Wood's orchestra last fall also disclosed that his band's performance would consist of a lot more solos than ensembles playing and that "since this will be a battle of swing, we're going to do away with all showmanship and sensationalism."

Hardy Daringly Challenges Juniors to Softball Duel

By Bob Hoke

"We don't attach much significance to this little squabble. It's just a tune-up match for the big league game with the Duke seniors Thursday afternoon," Herb Hardy senior class mentor, said yesterday in challenging the junior class to the annual softball game with the fourth year men.

If junior president Pinky Elliot accepts the scornful challenge, as he certainly will, the long-awaited battle will be waged on the coed athletic field Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Tough Fight

Although the junior prexy could not be reached last night, reports from the third year men's camp indicate that the contest will be anything but a "breather" for the seniors. Hardy announced yesterday that a brand new, unfrayed, softball would be awarded to the senior judged the most valuable player.

The seniors, no matter what the outcome of the clash, will meet a team of Duke seniors in another softball battle on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the coed field.

Opening event of the gala senior week, the "I dare you" game will be followed by the Saddle Shoe Stomp slated for the tennis courts and lighted by a beaming Carolina moon, especially ordered for the occasion.

"Somepin' big" is brewing for Wednesday in the fertile minds of Hardy and his senior week cohort, Fish Worley, impressario of Graham Memorial, to wipe the tears from the eyes of the eyes of the saddened seniors, in this, their last official fling at college. See SENIOR WEEK, Page 4

Administration Streamlines Defense Set-Up

By United Press

LONDON, May 9 — Destruction matching the Luftwaffe's worst "Total Destruction" raid on Britain was claimed tonight after a British armada of 300 to 400 bombers in a record breaking dusk to dawn assault smashed and set fire to the Great German ports of Hamburg and Bremen.

It was the Royal Air Force's biggest raid of the war on Germany, unleashed as the Nazi Air Force carried out costly widespread "blockade" attacks on Britain's port and cities.

Shortly before midnight the Berlin radio suddenly went silent and RAF bombers were believed to be sweeping across the channel again bent on spreading the havoc of the record breaking attack.

New American-built bombers and the biggest of all bombs were used in the attack that heaped nearly a thousand tons of explosives upon the North Sea naval and U-boat center as well as Berlin and Emden in " remorseless bombardment" it was stated.

WASHINGTON, May 9—The administration's national defense set-up rapidly is being "stripped for action" to meet whatever eventuality the future may hold, well qualified sources said tonight.

Complete liquidation of the old National Defense advisory commission, already going into gradual absorption by newer streamlined agencies, is contemplated to provide centralization of defense activities, control, and a general eclipse of many dollar-a-year executives.

These sources said the new organizational set-up could be best described as a series of interconnecting pyramids to cover all phases of the defense effort. The central and principal one See NEWS BRIEFS, page 4.
