Welcome Institute Visitors

Students at the University of North Carolina extend a cordial welcome to city, county and state officials who will be on the campus this Saturday attending the Institute of Government's fifth biennial program on Interpretation and Discussion of Laws. We feel that these officials are a definite part of the University, and that it is through their efforts that we are able to look with pride upon the oldest State University in America. Over the past 10 years, the University has made wonderful progress; progress that will in years to come increase the wealth and prosperity of the Old North State to unlimited amounts.

Carolina students consider it an honor to have John W. McCormack, majority leader of the House of Representatives, and Governor J. Melville Broughton, together with members of the North Carolina delegation in the House of Representatives, and other city, county, and state officials on the campus. During the past two weeks student body leaders have been working with Albert Coates, Institute director, in an effort to make their stay most pleasant. The Institute of Government and Carolina students are closely related. The Institute grew out of a University class room, and from the beginning its purpose was to bridge the gap between law and government as taught in the schools and as practiced in city halls, county court houses, state departments, and federal agencies within the state. It is the Institute's purpose to balance all governmental methods, techniques, and practices so that the poorest will be raised to the level of the best.

Ten years ago city, county and state officials recognized student government as actual government and placed them on the same level. Student leaders, more than ever, began to realize that college government was no longer child's play. With the help of the Institute, it has made wonderful strides. Today it is on par or better than the average city government in the state.

Present student body leaders realize that state officials have been a great aid. Their work has been invaluable. They are welcome to visit at any time, but this week-end they have a most cordial invitation to be present. Elaborate plans have been made for them, and Carolina students hope that their city, county, and state officials will come to Chapel Hill on Saturday.

Governor Notes Service Coates Has Rendered To State

By Paul Komisaruk
The $50,000 government building that opened on East Franklin street a year and a half ago didn't mark the "beginning."

Nine years before, Professor Albert Coates during the rockbottom depression years organized his "university for public officials," and as its significance grew, the Institute of Government moved into new quarters, and the lean years were over.

Organized to instruct law enforcement officers, and to discuss and work out common governmental problems, the Institute's recognition and popularity reached surprising heights.

Praised by Governor
Echoing popular sentiment, Governor J. Melville Broughton recently declared that the Institute has "rendered the state of North Carolina great service in respect to matters of law enforcement and to other essential governmental processes.

"Its usefulness," he explained, "has been demonstrated in a hundred different ways, and the state at large has acclaimed its constructive achievements in the public interest."

The Governor pointed out that "at

Golden Fleece Taps Tonight

To Induct Members In Memorial Hall

Black-shrouded figures stalk the aisles of Memorial hall tonight to perform the thirty-seventh annual tapping rites for the Order of the Golden Fleece, oldest and highest honorary organization on the campus, in a ceremony beginning at 8 o'clock.

An organ prelude will be played until 8:30 when all doors to the auditorium will be locked and the formal ritual begins. First part of the ceremony will be the reading of the story of the Golden Fleece by Jason, student leader of the Fleece for the past year whose identity will be disclosed for the first time.

To Pounce on Initiates

After a brief description of the aims and the history of the organization, black-hooded figures mantled in golden fleece will wander up and down the dimly-lighted hall to weird background music by the organ in search for the students to be tapped.

At irregular intervals the tappers will pounce abruptly on a man and escort him outside for the remainder

Lefty Cheshire Gives Six Hits, Fans 11 Cadets

Carolina Rallies In Seventh Frame To Take Contest

By Harry Hollingsworth

John Lewis "Lefty" Cheshire ended his second year as the star pitcher for the Tar Heels baseball team by hurling Carolina to the Southern conference baseball title here yesterday afternoon with a masterful six-hit, 3-2 pitching performance over Virginia Military institute.

The victory left the Tar Heels a half game in front of Duke in the conference standings and gave them their first loop title since 1933. Carolina won 11 games and lost three in the conference while Duke was winning 10 and losing three.

Giving one of his best pitching performances of the season, Lefty kept the Cadets well in hand until the seventh inning when a hit, two errors, a fielder's choice and a wild pitch let in all the VMI runs.

Cheshire fanned 11 men and had his best control of the season. He walked four batters. Pitching easily the early part of the game, he only bore down with his fast ball in the pinches. VMI collected six hits off his delivery, but each hit was in a different inning. The victory left Cheshire with a record of five wins and two losses for the season.

While Lefty was holding the Virginia team in check, Carolina was unable to do much with the hurling of Rufe Spessard, curve ball artist for the VMI team. Mike Bobbitt collected a hit in the first inning, but after that singleton, Carolina was held hitless until Bobbitt again singled home the first run in the sixth inning.

In the seventh and eighth innings the Tar Heels collected four more hits—two in each inning. The seventh inning rally produced the runs for the winning margin.

British Study Mystery Plane

RAF, Nazis Trade Blows In Africa

By United Press

LONDON, Sunday—British broadcasts to Germany tonight claimed that Rudolf Hess flew to Britain in a commandeered "mystery plane" while government leaders and other prominent speakers took the stump to denounce the number three Nazi as "a half-dozen kinds of a scoundrel."

The claims that Hess had flown here in a "mystery plane," the remains of which are now under the minute examination of British experts, was made in BBC programs beamed to Germany. These broadcasts claimed that the plane has not yet been put into service by the Luftwaffe and that it is a new type of long distance reconnaissance machine.

The Hess case seemed to be breeding more mysteries as it went along. A statement by "reliable sources" that the Duke of Hamilton was a victim of mistaken identity, that Hess actually confused him with someone else, possibly the Duke of Buccleach, was made.
