

Sandburg To Deliver Commencement Address Arrangements Announced for Awards Night Program

Dotson Palmer

Palmer Acts On Soph Pictures

Class Must Vote To Decide Issue

Taking immediate action on the sophomore Yackety Yack picture problem, Dotson Palmer, rising sophomore president, announced that the class will vote tomorrow to decide whether they want individual pictures in next year's Yackety Yack.

Carrying out his first campaign promise, Palmer has worked out a plan with Charlie Tillett, newly-elected editor of the yearbook, to include the pictures. The class has to vote on the question each year because the administration will not sanction a vote to decide the issue permanently since they do not want to raise any more fees than absolutely necessary.

Voting will be held in the Y lobby from 9:00 to 12:00 and 2:00 to 5:00, and in the UDH lobby from 12:00 to 2:00 and from 5:30 to 7:00.

For the past two years the sophomore classes have voted to include their pictures and Palmer and Tillett hope that this year's class of about 750 will cast the necessary number of votes for the simple majority needed to decide the measure.

The cost to each member of the class will be $2 which will be collected in three installments

'Seniors Gotta Get Measured'—Finkel

Now is the time, said Coleman Finkel, for all seniors who want to graduate to be measured for their caps and gowns. The last day of measuring is today, right now, ahora mismo, toot sweet, at the Y between 10:30 and 11 o'clock this morning and 2 and 5 o'clock this afternoon.

John Simms Wins Jackson Scholarship

Raleigh Senior Selected Over 24 Candidates

John Meredith Simms, 18-year-old senior in the Hugh Morson high school of Raleigh, who ranks high in studies and extra-curricular activities, was announced yesterday as the winner of the second Herbert Worth Jackson scholarship.

The scholarship is valued at $2,000 and covers a four-year tenure at the University. Simms will enter with next year's freshman class.

He was selected from 24 candidates from all sections of the State who came to the University yesterday for personal interviews by the committee charged with the responsibility of naming the winner.

A total of 125 high and preparatory schools had nominated candidates for the award this year, and of these 24 were asked to come to Chapel Hill for interviews.

The Jackson Scholarship awarded this year was made available through the gift of endowment funds by Herbert W. Jackson, Jr., of Richmond, Va., in whose father's memory the first Jackson Scholarship was established and awarded in the spring of 1938 to Ferebee Taylor of Oxford.

The committee on final selection was composed of Dean Dudley D. Carroll, commerce school, chairman of the University Scholarship committee; Dr. Clyde Erwin, State Superintendent, and Samuel S. Jackson and Herbert W. Jackson, Jr., of Richmond, Va., sons of Mrs. Annie Phillips Jackson of Richmond, who endowed the first Jackson scholarship in 1938 as a memorial to her husband, a University graduate of 1886

Exhibit Opens In Library Of Trophies

Plans for a resurrected, streamlined, Awards Night, lead by Governor J. M. Broughton and President Frank Graham, neared completion yesterday as final arrangements were announced and preliminary exhibits were opened as an overture to the traditional ceremonies Thursday night at 7:15 at Emerson field.

While Fred Weaver, chairman of arrangements, marshaled student and faculty support, appropriated medals, trophies, and awards from former winners, and prepared the program, special judging committees handed down decisions which decided prize-winners for the past year.

Graham To Speak

President Graham, back in Chapel Hill after work with the mediation board in Washington, follows Governor Broughton's address with a message concerning "college students and the draft." He will also preside as the 19 major awards—"covering all phases of campus activity," are presented.

Leaving duties in Raleigh for the annual event, Governor Broughton will inspect Carolina's NROTC and give the keynote speech of the evening. Dean of administration R. B. House will introduce President Graham, Governor Broughton and other officials who are to make presentations.

Emerson field will be transformed by a special seating arrangement and spotlights will pick up an exhibit of the athletic awards won by University teams in the past. Members of Phi Beta Kappa, Beta Gamma Sigma, the Monogram club, the University band and glee club will sit with winners.

Author-Poet To Speak Here June 10

Pulitzer Prize Winner Noted For Lincoln Biography

Carl Sandburg, famed author-poet, climaxes Carolina's 147th commencement exercises June 10 when he delivers the graduation address before 700 seniors and an estimated 4000 visitors.

The three-day ceremony, beginning June 8 with the baccalaureate sermon by Canon Chancellor Theodore Otto Wedel of Washington Cathedral, Washington, D. C., will be followed by Class day and Parents' day on June 9. Lincoln Biographer

Pulitzer prize winner, editor, foreign correspondent, editorialist, lecturer, Sandburg is best known for his recent biography of Abraham Lincoln. A native of Illinois, he attended Lombard college. Since his graduation he has received honorary degrees from Knox college and Northwestern university.

After serving as secretary to the mayor of Milwaukee, Wis., the author became associate editor of System magazine in Chicago and served as Stockholm correspondent for the Newspaper Enterprise association. In 1918 Sandburg became editorial writer for the Chicago Daily News.

Levinson Prize Winner

Awarded the Levinson prize by Poetry magazine and co-winner of the Poetry Society of America prize, Sandburg was also Phi Beta Kappa poet at Harvard and lecturer in the University of Hawaii.

A veteran of the Spanish American war, the author saw active service in Puerto Rico in 1898 as a member of the sixth division of the Illinois volunteers.

Sandburg is author of "Chicago Poems," "Corn Huskers," "The Chicago Race Riots," "Smoke and Steel," "Slabs of the Sunburnt West," "Rootabaga Stories," "Rootabaga Pigeons," "Abraham Lincoln—The Prairie Years," "The American Songbag," "Good Morning America," "Steichen the Photographer," "Potato Face," "Early Man," "The People, Yes," and co-author with Paul M. Angle of "Mary Lincoln, Wife and Widow."

Lefler Interviewed On Radio Today

Continuing its policy of giving journalism majors experience in radio work and offering the public educational features, the journalism department has scheduled an interview this afternoon between Herman D. Lawson, junior in the department, and Dr. Hugh T. Lefler, member of the history department.

The interview will originate in the radio studio in Caldwell hall and will be aired over WDNC in Durham from 3:15 to 3:30.

Dr. Lefler, one of the principals in the current state history textbook controversy, will discuss "Facts and Fiction in North Carolina History."

Levy Opens Exhibit of Modern French Art

Display Shows Development

By Vivian Gillespie

Modern French art was introduced to the campus yesterday by a suave and modern Freshman when George Levy, former banker and now a University "freshman," formally opened what is undoubtedly one of the superior exhibits to show in Person hall art gallery this year.

The savoir faire and polish which characterizes friendly Monsieur Levy also marks the exhibit which he made possible. The developments in the "School of Paris" painting, from 1840 until crushing 1940, are revealed in the wisely selected and smoothly arranged collection.

"On the left are the dead painters, and on the right are the alive ones," Levy told the 500 people who came to the opening. The modernists and semi-classical selections.
