

Harris Represents Carolina At ISS Leadership Institute

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Host to 29 Campus Leaders

By Elsie Lyon

Louis Harris, campus leader, recently returned from the Summer Student Leadership Institute held at the Roosevelt summer home in Campobello, New Brunswick, Canada, where he was impressed by the high acclaim political and educational leaders give to the progressive Carolina student government, Dr. Graham, and the Carolina Political Union.

"Dr. Graham is considered to be the foremost university president in the country, our student government, along with Antioch and Wellesly the most progressive, and the CPU, and the Yale Political Union the foremost student unions in the country," Harris said of the opinions expressed by such leaders as Mrs. Roosevelt, Archibald MacLeish, and Felix Frankfurter.

Twenty-nine campus leaders from colleges all over the country were invited by Mrs. Roosevelt to attend the five week's session of the first institute sponsored by the International Student Service.

The students listened to lectures by visiting celebrities and held bull sessions and discussions on political and economic questions of the day, as well as finding out how to be the liberal leaders of today's young people.

On one of the big week-ends when MacLeish, Frankfurter, James Wechsler, labor editor of PM, and Dr. William Allen Neilson, president emeritus of Smith college, visited the institute, eight photographers from picture magazines and newspapers came along "and gave us a taste of what it's like to be a celebrity" to use Harris' own words.

"The best feature of the institute was that in addition to the formal lectures, we had an opportunity to sit down and 'bull' with all these men," said Harris of the institute, "and we learned so much more in this way than we ever could have by lectures alone."

"It was a wonderful opportunity to get to know the First Lady, for she lived, ate, and chatted with us for two weeks, and we all felt that she is one of the most charming and brilliant women in the country," Harris commented.

FALLA, the President's pooch, seems to have lost interest in this discussion between Louis Harris and Mrs. Roosevelt at the Student Leadership Institute at Campobello, New Brunswick. Louis says Mrs. FDR was merely inviting him to join her in a swim.

about the reaction of the student leaders to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Serious discussions were only a part of the active five week's session, for Harris will enthusiastically tell you about the side trips to such points as the Quoddy NYA project at Eastport, Maine, the largest such project in the country, and the 200 pounds of fish the students caught in one afternoon. They were also given dances by the simple, reticent fishermen residents of Campobello Island.

"The men who stood out in our contact with them were Dr. Neilson, James Wechsler, MacLeish, Dr. Edwin Mims, professor of social science at Sarah Lawrence college, Roger Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, and Laughlin Currie, economic adviser to the President who had just returned from a special mission to China," Harris said of the many authorities who talked with the students, "but we were frankly disappointed in Justice Frankfurter."

"And although we met many leaders, people who are really running the government, we found without exception that they are all human beings with both faults and virtues," Harris said in describing his outstanding impression of the whole session.

Austin Captures Harper's Prize

Walking off with national honors for the second time in as many years, Carolina writers laid claim this summer to their second triumph in the Harper's Magazine essay contest, as Josephine Austin, of Hatteras, captured first prize over thousands of undergraduates in colleges, universities, normal schools, junior colleges and high schools all over the country.

Submitting, "Forgotten History," as her entry, Miss Austin was named winner, succeeding Ed Rankin, former Carolina student and PU board president, in the honor.

Before coming to Chapel Hill, as a journalism major, Miss Austin attended Woman's College in Greensboro. A member of the Philanthropic assembly, Sound and Fury, and Chi Delta Phi, she plans a career as a newspaper woman.

Leaflet Published Listing Efforts Here for Defense

By Carroll McGaughey

In an effort to show the University's relationship to the National Defense Program, the administration of the University of North Carolina has prepared a leaflet, "Relating the University to National Defense."

Departmental heads received printed forms on which to report the work of their department which is of value to the defense effort. The forms were divided into three specific heads, and upon them was indicated the new courses in each department having special relevance to the national defense, and courses or activities introduced directly as the result of the war; regular courses which have special significance because of the war and national defense; and the activities of members of the departments related to national defense such as special research, work outside the University, and representation on committees concerned with national defense.

The letter which accomplished the forms was signed by Dean of Administration, R. B. House, and explained the purposes of the questionnaire in part as follows: "The University is preparing a printed leaflet to show what is being done at Chapel Hill that relates the University to the National Defense Program. The leaflet will also describe changes in the curriculum and other adjustments which represent the University's suitability as a place to go to college in the present times. In order to have full information as a basis for this statement and in order to keep our Administrative Committee on National Defense well informed as to what is going on in the various departments, you are asked to fill out the attached form and return it to Dean Bradshaw, Chairman of the National Defense Committee."

"Although this information is needed for a specific purpose now; namely, the publication of the leaflet, it is important that our National Defense Committee receive information as to developments of this kind continuously."

The leaflet, which was edited by Dean Bradshaw, was published this summer.

New Coed Government Starts Rolling Friday With Senate Meeting

Revision of Point System, Hour Rule Reconsideration First on Calendar

The new coed student government will start rolling Friday when the Senate meets to organize the new training groups for junior coeds interested in holding office in the Women's Government association.

Also on the slate for quick action by the Senate is a revision of the point system, which regulates the amount of extra-curricular offices a coed may hold, and a reconsideration of hour rules, Jean Hahn, speaker of the Senate, said yesterday.

Other branches of the new coed government have already begun functioning as the Interdormitory council passed special closing hours for orientation week, and the honor council considered a hold-over case last week.

Senior coeds have been scurrying around the past week getting the new association, which was set up last May, in working order. And the junior coeds, who are still learning about Carolina gentlemen, will soon be asked to make this government really work.

Coed government, started here in 1918, was getting a little decrepit and last May the coeds voted in a new constitution. Instead of just one governmental agency, the honor council, as had existed in the past, the new constitution split coed government into three branches, the Senate, Interdormitory council, and honor council.

The Senate, of which Jean Hahn is speaker, deals with coed elections, rules, and finances, while the Interdormitory council, will strive to regulate and make dorm life more attractive and comfortable. Lib Campbell is president of the Interdorm council.

The Honor Council, which is presided over by Mary Caldwell, president of the WGA, will, as in the past, deal with violations of the honor and campus codes.
