

Radio Contest Announced

Prizes Offered For Scripts

First plans for a contest to select the best dramatic radio script commemorating the 150th anniversary in April of Raleigh's incorporation as the capital of North Carolina were drafted by Fred Fletcher, station director of WRAL, and Josephina Niggli, script director of the campus radio studios, yesterday.

Sponsored by the Anniversary Committee, through the cooperation of Josephina Niggli, and Charles Parker, state director of publicity, the contest calls for dramatic scripts dealing with some phase of the theme "Victory through unified effort and the cooperation of free men."

Script Broadcast

The contest is open only to amateur playwrights and the script which is selected as best will be broadcast over station WRAL during the week of celebration in honor of Raleigh's 150th birthday as the state capital. The sesquicentennial celebration will begin on April and last until May 2.

First prize for the best script submitted will be a $50 Defense Bond. The prize for the second best script will be a $25 Defense bond, and third prize will be $10 in defense stamps. The plays must be 30 minutes in length and are expected to be pertinent to the occasion. The plays must not be farces, comedies, or deep tragedies, but should strike a note of optimism.

The best plays submitted to Mr. Fletcher of WRAL, chairman of the radio contest committee, will be returned to the authors who are to select their own production groups. District contests will decide the winners of the three districts, Asheville, Charlotte, and Raleigh. From these winners the play to be produced from Raleigh during anniversary week will be selected.

There will also be a cash award of $50 for the best production group which will be brought to the capital to produce the winning show during anniversary week.

Entry blanks may be secured from Fred Fletcher or any radio station in North Carolina. Scripts must be in by 12 midnight of March 25. Production finals must be held in the districts by April 22.

rarely in terms of Fascism. Two factors are apparent he charged. These agencies seem desirous of keeping the status quo, of fighting Fascism abroad, and Communism at home.

As a sixth danger, Baldwin pointed to the treatment of pacifists, pointing out that dealings with conscientious objectors is an "entirely separate problem," explaining that treatment of some groups "... the half million members of Jehovah's Witnesses all zealous opponents of war" is already marked by lawlessness which began long before the United States entered the war.

Baldwin continued that the "entirely desirable truce declared between employers and labor in resorting to strikes and lockouts in defense industries may be unfairly extended to other industries as well ... on the plea that all production in war-time is defense industry."

He pointed to the lack of opposition to the war, and the "markedly improved administration of civil liberties issues" as the causes civil liberties have not been curtailed in America.

Minority groups, he pleaded, must be kept in the open, "so that we can combat them, and check on them."

In England, Baldwin declared, "civil liberties are still intact." Referring to Sir Stafford Cripps' appointment to a responsible English cabinet position, Baldwin hailed it together with meeting between Chinese and Indian leaders, as "more important than the fall of Singapore, or the Battle for Java."

Cripps' anti-imperialist views, his beliefs in Civil liberties, are answers to the greatest "challenge that civil liberties have ever faced," Baldwin said.

"There is everywhere," he concluded, "a new vision, and a new eagerness on the part of the people to meet the new challenges that are arising."

from right under his nose. On any other night Cathey would have breezed home in front, but Fate turned viciously on him Saturday night.

And the Coaches

And last, but far from least, there are track coaches Bob Fetzer, Dale Ranson and Johnny Morriss. Broad are the smiles on the faces of these three worthy gentlemen this week, for their men came through with flying colors—the finished product of a polished coaching job. As Coach Bob expressed it prior to the meet, "What we need to win this meet is pure guts," and who now will question the intestinal fortitude of the team that raced to a smashing triumph Saturday.

But that's a thing of the past. Spring is coming and there's a little matter about an outdoor conference track championship that has to be settled with Duke in the near future.

tie" dropped five field goals for ten points. This winter, after an erratic start, he has come into his own. "Off-nights" are infrequent now and Smith occasionally gets up into the double figures as he did this year against both VMI and Washington and Lee—dropping eight field goals for 16 points against the latter. In Friday's game at Durham, it was Smith's and Gersten's hustle and drive that kept the Phantoms in the ball game.

Little need be said about Captain Bob Rose. Leading Tar Heel scorer, Smithfield Robert is in addition one of Lange's best floor men. In the last seven games Rose has cracked the hoop for a better than 12 point per game average and should add to his season's total this week-end in Raleigh.

Dragons came from behind to wallop the Eastern champions for the second straight year. It was the third straight loss for the Cary team in the Class B finals.

Lanky Bill Sheets, Hanes' fine forward, led the last half rally and put the game on ice when Cary threatened to tie it up in the last minutes. Hanes trailing 15-12 at the half completely dominated the game in the third period to take a 24-16 lead.

A last minute rally for Cary was led by Gordon Sauls but it fell short by two points.

Bill Sheets was the high scorer for the game with 12 points on six field goals. Gordon Sauls with 11 points was top man for Cary.

Coxhead or Lees as anchor man in the event. There's little to choose between them. Both are fast swimmers and give Carolina adequate strength at the anchor spot.

The record the favored Tar Heel trio will be trying to break is their own Conference long course mark of 3:34 set recently against Virginia Tech.

While Carolina is favored to win, the Blue Dolphins are expected to meet stiff opposition from Duke, N. C. State, Virginia Tech, and Washington and Lee. Swimming for State will be Emil Hilker, Jim Park, and Bob Reynolds. Duke's strong team consists of Forrest Ingalls, Andy Johnson, and Allen Shephard. Washington and Lee's team will be composed of Webster, Murdock, and Garretson and Virginia Tech will have C. T. McCurdy, B. L. Dow, and W. L. Saunders.

In the medley relay all three swimming styles are included. The lead-off man swims 100 meters in the backstroke, the No. 2 man the same distance in the breaststroke, and the No. 3 or anchor man 100-meters free or the regular overhand style.
