

Graham Speaks At Student Convocation Today

Initial Pep Rally, Parade Will Be Held Tonight

Tatum, Hammond Alspaugh Head Speakers List

Ushering in the 1942 Carolina football season, the first pep rally of the year will be held at the old well tonight, Denny Hammond, president of the University club, the organization which is sponsoring the rally, announced.

The purpose of the rally will be to put the students into tip-top yelling form and to give them a chance to demonstrate the true Carolina spirit which they will show at the Wake Forest game tomorrow in Kenan stadium.

To open the rally, a parade will be formed in front of Swain Hall between 6:30 and 6:45. The University band will play until 7 o'clock when the cheerleaders start the parade down Cameron avenue.

During the parade, members of the University club will go from fraternity houses to dormitories to get more students to join the parade.

The parade will go from Cameron down Columbia street, down Franklin street to Spencer dorm, where girl members of the club will arouse more girl students to join in the fun. The group will then march back up Cameron street to the old well where the rally will get under way at 7:30.

President Hammond will first introduce Frank Alspaugh, head cheerleader, who will in turn introduce the members of this year's cheering squad to the students.

After several yells, Hammond will introduce Coach Jim Tatum who will give a short talk and present the newly elected football captain.

The final talk of the rally will be made by Roland Parker, dean of men, who will represent the administration.

President Hammond has assured the students that the rally will be over in time for all who wish to attend the Co-ed ball. He stated that it would be over by 8:15.

Students, from seniors to freshmen are urged to attend the rally to show the team and coaching staff they are solidly united behind them.

Coeds Wield Lip Rouge For Debut at Annual Ball

Carolina's galaxy of 300 new coeds are busily powdering, primping and prettifying themselves for their debut at the annual Coed Ball tonight in Woolen gymnasium from 9 until 1 o'clock.

Social committee heads are confident that this year's ball will not only be the most successful but that it will start the baby Carolina weekend programs off to a colorful fall quarter.

Over 600 bids were distributed to the campus male population yesterday but Hobbie McKeever, committee head, asked all boys who have not received their bids to call at Graham Memorial immediately.

Last minute instructions call for all Marshals to come unescorted to Woolen gymnasium at 8 o'clock. Formal dress is required for coeds and informal for boys.

McKeever urged all girls to call Graham Memorial after 1 o'clock today if they have not been contacted by their blind dates. Addresses are being changed everyday as the rooming situation clears with the result that bids are still left at the office.

Music for the ball will be played by Johnny Satterfield and his orchestra and optimism runs rampant through male circles today in preparation for meeting the queens of the campus.

Freshmen will not be allowed to attend the dance because of rushing regulations laid down by the Interfraternity council, and old coeds acting as marshals will not be permitted to dance. The ball is reserved for the special entertainment of new coeds and introduces them into the social life at Carolina.

New Course In Psychology Is Still Open

The Psychology Department announces that there is room for additional students in the new course in personnel psychology, Psychology 181.

The course is the only course of its kind in the country. It differs from conventional courses in personnel psychology in that it is primarily a laboratory course. Most other courses depend chiefly on lectures and text-books.

The students will learn a clerical job. Then on the basis of their readings and their knowledge of the job they will do a job analysis. They will

Entertainment Series Plans Classical Program

Carolina students may again look forward to a star-studded program of good entertainment sponsored by the Student Entertainment Series. This organization, which was originated during the 1928-29 academic year by President Chase and Dean Hibbard, has continued to bring entertainment to this campus which would otherwise be impossible.

The organization has in the past brought to Chapel Hill concerts under the direction of famous orchestra leaders, singers of the Metropolitan Opera, dance groups and plays. Glancing back at last year's series we can recall Charles Wagner's opera group in "The Barber of Seville"; Elise Huston, Brazilian soprano; Lowe and Whitmore, dual pianists; "The Pirates of Penzance" sponsored by the Carolina Playmakers and the Student Entertainment series; The National Symphony orchestra under the direction of Hans Kinder; The North Carolina State Symphony with Ruggerio Ricci as violin soloist; and Elizabeth Waters' "Dancers en Route".

Four undergraduate students and three faculty members serve on the committee to choose the entertainment. Dr. Haydon of the music department, Prof Koch of the Carolina Playmakers and Dr. J. P. Harland, professor of archaeology and chairman of the group, are the faculty members. Student members on the committee, chosen by the President of the Student body, consist of two seniors and two juniors: William Melaffy, Tom Baden and Joe Leslie are serving on the committee now.

Funds are provided by the students and the $1.00 assessment is placed on the bill for tuition each quarter. During its first year, the program was subsidized by the state with a grant of $1,000 but since the depression, that has been abandoned.

The idea for a Student Entertainment series was voted for by the students of the Liberal Arts department at the outset and then those in the Commerce department asked to be admitted. Since then, all students except for graduate and Pharmacy students are admitted.

The program for this year's entertainment has not yet definitely been decided upon. Two programs have been scheduled thus far. Around November, Albert Morini will present "La Traviata" and on March 5, the Ballet Russe comes to Chapel Hill.

The organization tries to present two attractions each quarter and it is working now to complete the schedule for this year.

Three Applications Already Made; Others Expected

Due to other urgent matters, the Publications Union Board will not select, at their meeting this afternoon, the editor of the 1943 Yackety-Yack.

However, the PU Board will consider each application for the position vacated by Hugh Morton, who went into the army, and give the applicants a personal interview. The selection of the editor will be made by the middle of next week, Ben Snyder, president of the Board said.

Thus far Carl Bishopric, Jim Loeb, and Walter Klein have handed in applications to Snyder. Hunt Hobbs and John Robinson are dark horses, as they most probably will hand in applications, also. The PU Board president said that he expects several other applicants, but doesn't know definitely. Hobbs has done a great deal of work on the Y-Y, and he is the likely candidate, it was learned yesterday.

At today's meeting, the Board will discuss ways of arranging distribution of The Daily Tar Heel. Together with the Circulation Department, it is considering every plan to get the Daily Tar Heel to the students. However, as nothing much can be done until a census is taken of the town students, the Board has recommended that central points be established for the distribution. These points are the Y and Graham Memorial.

Snyder urged "The student body to have patience and bear with the Board and the Circulation Department." "The problem is a great one," he continued, "and we are doing our utmost to straighten it out."

Next week the PU Board will take under consideration the plan of making the Daily Tar Heel a tabloid paper. During the summer session this style was used experimentally, with the PU Board's approval, for the last two issues. If approved by the Board, it will be the first time that the Daily Tar Heel will have a style other than the present one during the regular school session.

All Freshmen Must Obtain Bids Tomorrow

IRC Opens Fall Schedule With Mahmoud Hassan Bey

International Relations club's fall schedule of famous guest speakers has been completed, Grady Morgan, IRC president reported yesterday.

The slate of ambassadors, ministers and analysts of international affairs will start with an address by Mahmoud Hassan Bey, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of Egypt. The speech will take place Sunday afternoon, October 4, at 3:30 in Memorial hall. Broadcast coverage has not yet been announced.

Morgan said that the IRC is preparing an intensified program of campus forums for the fall quarter. The forums, including faculty members and guest experts on foreign affairs, are devoted to informal round-table and open forum discussion of current news topics.

First IRC session is slated Monday night in the Institute of Government building, regular meeting place. A policy of rotating business, discussion and social meetings each Monday night will be continued, Morgan said.

Speech Looms As Most Vital Of Career

Students Excused From 11 O'Clocks

Significant and martial, the address of President Frank Porter Graham at the general student convocation today at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall looms as the most important address to students in the president's career.

No information has been released by administrative heads as to the subject of Graham's address, but all indications point to the fact that he will deal with the part the University is playing and will play in the nation's war effort.

Students will be excused from all 11 o'clock classes, and it is assumed that Dr. Graham will employ the entire period for his address. His speech will officially open the 149th academic year of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Graham, who is at present serving on the War Labor Board in Washington, will fly to the campus in order to make his heralded address. In an interview Monday Graham stated that his address would be composed between meetings of the Labor Board and in what spare time he could obtain between official federal duties in Washington. Amid "the longest ovation ever received from a Carolina audience," Graham last year deviated from his prepared address to demand the abolition of the American Neutrality act.

With the University now aligning its curriculum, facilities, and research with the nation's war effort, it is anticipated that Graham will devote his entire address to outlining the University's present and future war plans.

Only a quarter century has passed since the University last opened its doors in the face of war. Closed during the Civil War and actively pro-

Grail Holds First Dance

Initial Frolic Set for Saturday

The Grail initiates its 1942 program of dances with a Football Frolic in Woolen Gym Saturday evening from 9 to 12 o'clock, Sam Gambill, exchequer of the Grail, announced yesterday. The entire campus is invited with the exception of freshmen who cannot attend because of rushing regulations.

Cleared through the new social committee set up by Bert Bennett, president of the student body, and chair-manned by Hobart McKeever, the dance will be held in Woolen through cooperation with Navy officials and the administration. Script was set at $1.10 per couple or per stag.

A dance of firsts, it will be the first Grail dance of the year, the first time all coeds and all upperclassmen may attend a '42 Carolina dance, and the first campus-wide dance to clear through the social committee.

Resuming its annual custom, the Grail will present a script dance after all Carolina home games with the exception of the weekend of Fall Germans. During winter and spring quarters the Grail usually presents three dances to which the campus is invited.

Freshmen will be allowed to attend all Grail dances after the completion of rush week. The policy of a period of silence in which upperclassmen have no conversations with freshmen was instituted to prevent unfair rushing competition and tactics.
