Stettinius could not be reached for confirmation, and the White House issued a terse "no comment" when asked if President Truman had accepted the resignation. No one in authority would offer a definite reason for his reported move, but Stettinius was said to have been resentful of the relatively minor role assigned to him in UN councils by the State Department.

UVA Seeks Able Manager For Clubhouse

Fountain Facilities
Being Installed Now

Applications are being received for managership of the Veterans' clubhouse, according to UVA officials. The clubhouse is now closed for repairs and reorganization. New equipment, including fountain and sandwich facilities, are being installed.

The position will be offered on a profit-percentage basis, and the manager will be given free reign in the operation of the club, subject to policy changes and removal supervision by the Board of Governors.

The association feels that it can offer employment to an able person and at the same time build its clubhouse into an attractive gathering place for veterans.

Jimmy Chesnutt, president of the UVA, 203 Graham, and John Temple, UVA treasurer, 302 Aycock should be contacted by those interested in the position.

The Board decided to operate the Tar Heel during the Summer term as a semi-weekly, funds for which will be derived from the regular Summer School fee.

It was decided that the business management of the Yack and Carolina Mag has been subject to some negligence on the part of the business managers, and the Board decided to subtract from the salary of Mag Business Manager, Margaret Carmichael to compensate for the loss of money which the Mag has suffered. Action in the case of Yack Business Manager Boots Walker was postponed.

The editors of the three publications have been requested to submit budgets for consideration when the Board meets again this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Recommendations for salaried staff positions must also be before the Board at this time. A recommendation of faculty members of the Board will be made at the meeting today and Chancellor House will be notified of the choices.

Retiring student members of the Publications Board are Fred Flagler, Linda Nobles, and Carroll Poplin. The new members and officers became official yesterday.

Also on the agenda for today is a review of circulation, against which many complaints have been registered. The Board will consider the recommendation of Bill Woestendiek, newly elected editor of the Daily Tar Heel, for circulation manager of the student newspaper next year.
