Foundation Chooses Carolina As Center

Will Co-operate with Duke in Carnegie Plan To 'Vitalize Teaching by Creative Activity'

By Jo Pugh

Carolina is one of the four southern university centers chosen by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching to serve as a focal point in conducting a project to "vitalize instruction," President Graham announced today. Carolina will serve jointly with Duke university.

The project proposes to improve instruction by stimulating creative activity and research among teachers. It will provide $15,000 annually for five years to each university center. The Carolina-Duke center will serve the College of Charleston, Davidson, Furman university, Wake Forest, Wofford and Converse colleges.

Graham's Statement

"The University of North Carolina rejoices in the opportunity to cooperate with Duke university as one of the four intercollegiate centers," Dr. Graham said. "President O. C. Carmichael and the foundation are to be congratulated on the long-range vision and immediate practical values of this program."

The project, financed by a special grant of $700,000 from the Carnegie corporation of New York plus $200,000 from the cooperating institutions, is designed to lower the barriers of heavy teaching loads, low salaries, and inadequate research facilities.

Each center will have a faculty committee which will select individual participants in the plan. A co-ordinator will arrange visits of college instructors to the campus, contact members of the faculty, and visit colleges in that regional group.

Five-Year Program

Dr. O. C. Carmichael, president of the foundation, said when he recently announced the five-year program, "the surest way to improve instruction is to stimulate creative activity and research among teachers."

'Kiss and Tell' Try-outs Set

Try-outs for "Kiss and Tell," Carolina Playmakers' second production of the summer season, will be held Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Playmaker Theatre.

John Parker, of the dramatic arts department, who will direct the play, urged that everyone is invited to audition for parts, regardless of previous experience. Those who want to work on the stage crew or other technical phases are asked to see either Mr. Parker or Harry Davis, who is in charge of the staging.

Copies of "Kiss and Tell" will be on reserve in the library from Wednesday through Friday for those who wish to prepare for the try-outs. Tentative presentation dates chosen by the dramatic arts department are August 14 and 15. The play will be given in the Playmakers' Theatre.

"Kiss and Tell" is a comedy of adolescent problems written by Hugh Herbert, and originally produced on Broadway in 1940. It was recently adapted into a movie under the same title, starring Shirley Temple.

Talent for this Playmaker production is expected to come chiefly from a course in acting offered during this term, according to Mr. Davis. However there is an excellent part for a young boy about 13 which may cause some casting difficulties.

University May Get 80 Individual Units For Housing Project

Bennett Attempting Purchase Of New Four-Room Dwellings

By Jane Hutson

Mr. J. S. Bennett, University engineer, left Chapel Hill last night to confer with the Federal Public Housing Authority officials in Atlanta today about plots for 80 individual houses which will be constructed for married veterans on the Mason Farm road. The Atlanta office had first offered the University 167 of these

Adviser Posts Now Available

Salary, Room Rent Offered With Jobs

Students interested in occupying positions as dormitory advisers should apply at 206 South building before August 10, Fred Weaver, Dean of Students, announced yesterday.

Heretofore known as counsellors, dormitory advisers are responsible for knowing freshmen who live in the advisor's dormitory, and helping the new students with problems that may arise with regard to campus life in general.

Quarterly Salary
Compensation, at present, is $50 per quarter plus room, unless the advisor is a G.I. student or has a scholarship in which case he receives his room only.

"There is a slight possibility of a change in the present salary," Weaver indicated.

Students now serving as advisers will receive their applications through the mail, and will be given preferential consideration for their experience. "Mature men are particularly desired for the jobs since it entails a houses, but, due to the small construction space available, it was expected that the plans would be dropped entirely.

However, University authorities revealed yesterday that they would be willing to accept almost half of the houses "in spite of the additional work that can be expected to result in the spacing of so many new plots."

Will Submit Maps
Mr. Bennett will submit four separate maps to the Federal Public Housing Authority with plans for water, sewage, and power lines along with a proposal for three new roads. As soon as the plans are approved, contracts will be drawn up.

Built with lend-lease money for Great Britain, the houses are brand new. At present, they are already packed in crates and available for immediate shipment to Chapel Hill. Measuring 24 feet by 24 feet, larger than previously expected, they contain four rooms and have a small outside porch. They are equipped with new oil stoves and heaters.

Discard Ten Barracks
Ten of the barrack type apartment houses will be discarded in favor of the new individual homes. Three new roads will be constructed for easy entrance to the houses.

Sites for the 80 houses are expected to be cleared as soon as Mr. Bennett's maps have received the approval of the Atlanta office.

Four-year Medical School Proposed for University

Five Past Presidents of Carolina Society Will Consider Plan to Increase Facilities

By Jack Abernathy

Establishment of a four-year school of medicine on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill received a strong initial impetus from the recent favorable report of the National Committee for Medical School Survey.

Further consideration of the project will be given by five past presidents of the North Carolina Medical Society, according to an announcement Saturday by Dr. Clement C. Clay, executive secretary of the North Carolina Medical Care Commission. This commission is charged with making the final recommendations for action to the Board of Trustees of the University.

Report to Gov. Cherry

The seven-man national committee was appointed last year by the state commission to study the need for and location of a four-year university medical school, and delivered its report last Friday to a meeting of the commission in Governor R. Gregg Cherry's office.

Five members of the seven-man committee voted for the approval of the four-year school at Chapel Hill, provided "that a hospital and health center program to provide greatly enlarged facilities be carried forward, and that a practicable plan for financing medical and hospital care be established." Two members disapproved the majority report.

Past presidents of the North Carolina Medical Society who will review the first report are: Dr. Hubert B. Haywood, of Raleigh; Dr. F. Webb Griffith, of Asheville; Dr. James W. Vernon, of Morganton; Dr. Donnell B. Cobb, of Goldsboro; and Dr. Oren Moore, of Charlotte. Their findings are to be reported to the state commission by August 8. Further study and consideration of the project will then be conducted by the North Carolina Medical Care Commission itself.

Several bills concerning current affairs will be introduced and discussed together with a resolution on student government.

Cherry Promises No Hike In Dormitory Room Rent

Says Material, Not Finance Is Bottleneck; Legislative Session Is Deemed Unnecessary

By Roy C. Moose

In an interview Saturday morning with the presidents of veterans associations from Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest, and State, to discuss veterans' problems in regard to education, Governor Cherry promised that the additional dormitories now being planned for State College and the University of North Carolina would not entail a raise in room rent by their construction through a self-liquidating plan.

Previously Chancellor House had announced to the student body that the construction of three new dormitories here would raise the rent of dormitory rooms approximately 50%.

No Rent Hike Seen
However, Governor Cherry remarked that "the dormitories at State are already under construction under the self-liquidating plan and are being built without any intention of additional room rent."

In response to a request by James Chesnut, representing the University of North Carolina's Veterans Association, to call a special session of the state legislature to appropriate additional funds to relieve the housing situation here, Governor Cherry said that there was no need for a special session of the Legislature inasmuch as the problem of providing additional educational and housing facilities did not consist of financing, but a shortage of building materials.

The regular session of the Legislature is scheduled next January.

Similar Resolution
At a mass meeting of the student body last Wednesday a similar resolution demanding a special session of the Legislature was drawn up. The resolution is now in the hands of Dewey Dorsett, president of the student body.

Governor Cherry further pointed out that the educational centers now being set up throughout the state in which students may take college freshman and sophomore subjects will help relieve the congestion in North Carolina colleges for the present.

In Central Locations
The centers to be placed in centrally located towns will permit the student to receive college credits for all courses successfully completed. Therefore, it would not be necessary to enter the colleges until the junior
