Daring Rescue Saves Airmen In Greenland

Young Pilot Employs Rockets in Takeoff

New York, Feb. 24—(UP)—Eleven American airmen were snatched today from the icy wastes of Greenland by a daring 22-year-old air transport pilot.

The pilot, First Lieutenant Bobbie Joe Cavnar, dropped his big transport plane beside their wrecked B-29 superfort, loaded the men aboard, and took off with the aid of rockets.

Off Its Course

Air force experts are unable to explain how the plane got so far off its course as to be forced down in Greenland. There is some speculation that the magnetic pole threw the plane's navigational instruments out of order.

All 11 men were uninjured. They were flown first to Thule, Greenland, and are to be brought on to Westover Field, Massachusetts.

SP Is Divided On Procedure

Executive Committee To Probe Candidates

A split on the question of executive committee recommendations on nominations punctuated the Student party meeting Sunday. After sharp discussion of the original policy of initiating all action on nominations in regular meetings of the party, members voted to put responsibility for preliminary investigation of potential candidates on the executive committee.

The committee would then report its findings to the regular meetings of the party, where final action on candidates will be taken.

The executive committee consists of the officers of the party, four members elected at large, and the publicity chairman appointed by the party chairman.

Violated Tradition

One group opposed the new procedure on the grounds that it violated the party's tradition of "open decisions openly arrived at." One opponent, Ed Walker, declared that "the Student Party was organized to allow independent students a voice in campus politics." Walker said, "This new idea is incompatible with that tradition."

Proponents of the measure, however, pointed out that under the motion, presented by presidential candidate Tom Eller, the executive group would merely seek out possible nominees, study their qualifications, and find out whether they would run. The committee's reports would be in no way binding, and said party chairman Bill Mockie, "Nominations from the floor would be as in order as ever."

Place in Effect

On assurance from the chairman that there would be no restriction on open consideration of candidates, the students at the meeting voted to place the procedure in effect immediately.

Following slow discussion of candidates for the post of secretary-treasurer of the student body, it was determined to defer a decision until further consideration had been completed by the executive committee. Similar action was taken on candidates for editor of the Magazine and Yackety-Yack.

Groups Must Submit Fiscal Year Budgets

All organizations which have received funds from student fees in the past must submit their budgets for the fiscal year 1947-48 to the Budget committee on or before March 1, 1947, as the Budget committee will submit the campus budget for the fiscal year 1947-48 to the Student Legislature on or before March 5.

The constitution requires that the campus budget must be prepared and adopted by April 1 of the preceding school year.

HENDERSON CLUB

There will be a meeting of the Henderson club tonight at 7 o'clock in the Baby lounge of Graham Memorial. All members are urged to attend.

Celebrated Author To Give Address In Memorial Hall

The celebrated American poet, Robert Frost, arrives in Chapel Hill this afternoon as the special guest of the English department. The highlight of Frost's visit to the University campus will be an informal talk, given by him in Memorial hall this evening at 8:30. Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, head of the English department, will introduce the poet, and the public is cordially invited to attend the lecture.

Frost will also hold several discussions with creative writing and comparative literature classes during his short stay here.

Dr. Lyman Cotten, teacher of modern poetry in the University, said of the noted New Englander: "No poet writing in English today has been so widely and warmly admired. He is unique in this time of irreconcilable attitudes and judgments in having won praise of all types of readers, from the most hypercritical reviewer to the simplest and least demanding reader."

Retired from a long and varied career as farmer, newspaperman, and English teacher since 1938, Frost has spent much of his time in recent years speaking to various schools that are favorites of his, discussing his poetry and letting his mind dwell on any number of subjects that interest him.

Officials to Discuss New Registration In Phi Hall Tonight

New light will be shed on the registration problem when administration officials present their side of the case before the Philanthropic assembly tonight at 7 o'clock in Phi hall. The bill to be introduced by John Giles, chairman of the Ways and Means committee, will condemn the new system as unfair and unjust to the students.

Dean D. D. Carroll and Dr. E. C. Markham have been invited to speak, and several other prominent members of the administration staff who worked out the new system of registration are expected to be on hand. A South building official stated, "This will be the first opportunity that the administration has had to outline its side of the highly controversial issue, and administration authorities on registration welcome this opportunity to give their views to the student body."

The new registration system, violently opposed by most student leaders and by over 90 per cent of the student body according to a Daily Tar Heel poll, is expected to be hotly debated before the Assembly.

A number of campus leaders have been invited to speak on the issue and present the student view including Jack Booraem, Dan MacFarland, Al Lowenstein, and Dewey Dorsett, student body president.

By Darley Lochner

"Can I Get Away With It?" will be the question Dr. W. R. Barnhart, head of the department of religion at Hood college, will attempt to answer at the Religion in Life meeting tonight at 7:30 in Hill hall.

"Are there any unimpeachable moral laws in terms of which life must be lived?" is the second question Dr. Barnhart will discuss in his address. In addition to his activities at Hood college, Dr. Barnhart is a member of many important religious research groups. He was executive secretary of the Federation of Churches in 1941.

Idaho Senator Will Appear As CPU Speaker on March 6

Glen Taylor Introduced Anti-Bilbo Measure; Morse, Kennedy to Come Here this Spring

By Sam Whitehall

Senator Glen H. Taylor, progressive Democratic solon from Idaho, will speak from the Carolina Political Union's non-partisan platform in Memorial hall on March 6, Jerry Davidoff, CPU chairman, announced yesterday afternoon. The senator, who crooned and clowned his way into a seat in the nation's highest lawmaking body, thoroughly amazed observers when, after playing his banjo on the Capitol steps upon his arrival, emphasizing the housing shortage with his own version of "Home on the Range," he settled down to become one of Washington's hardest working leaders. He has been in constant demand as a dinner and mass meeting speaker since shortly after his arrival in Washington in January 1945.

Bilbo Resolution

It was Senator Taylor who introduced the resolution which would have denied Mississippi's T. G. Bilbo's claim to a seat in the Senate. The Idaho senator's speech on the issue was straight to the point and much applauded throughout liberal circles.

Davidoff announced that indications were that the senator would make monopolies his subject, but that the final decision had not as yet been reached.

Senator Wayne Morse, Republican from Oregon, who has twice been postponed in his scheduled speaking engagements here, should appear here in early April, and Representative John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts will be here shortly after spring vacation. No word was forthcoming as to the possibilities of Elizabeth Gurley Flynn's speaking here. Miss Flynn, one of the leaders of the U. S. Communist party, was to be here in January, when illness cancelled her trip at the last minute.

Buildings Set To Reach Here By Week's End

Surplus Structures Delayed by Weather

By Ed Joynor

Thirty-seven army surplus buildings, the first of which was to arrive here last Friday, are weather-bound at their point of departure in Camp Forrest, Tullahoma, Tenn., and will not begin arriving here before the end of this week. J. C. Stone, superintendent here in charge of construction for the J. A. Jones construction company, said yesterday.

In a long distance telephone conversation between Stone and S. E. Black, who is supervising demolition of the buildings in Tullahoma, Black reported that snow in the Tennessee area had slowed demolition work last week. Although snow was falling again yesterday, work loading the dismantled buildings on trucks for transportation here was in progress.

Standstill Since Wednesday

Bad weather in Chapel Hill also has been holding up preparatory work for the buildings, and operations have been at a stand still since last Wednesday. Extreme cold has prevented the laying of foundation blocks, but excavation for the footings is going on.

Excavation work has been completed for six buildings so far. These include two public health buildings near the medical school, one of the library additions on the west side of the main library, the law library back of Manning, and two buildings behind Caldwell and Bynum Halls—one for history and one for the English and romance language departments.

Stone estimated that the first building should be finished within ten days after its arrival.
