NEWS BRIEFS

No Progress Made to End Phone Strike

Union, AT & T Heads Confer at Capital

Washington, April 8—(UP)—Joseph Beirne, the head of the striking telephone workers, told the nation yesterday evening that federal peace-makers have gotten nowhere in their efforts to end the nationwide walkout.

In his denunciation of the expressed hope of Conciliator Peter Mano that long distance lines operators might reach an agreement by today, Beirne asserted that he himself had seen no proposal from the phone company and therefore saw no reason for optimism since no separate peace with the Bell system will be reached without the approval of the policy committee governing the strike as a whole.

Good Progress

Once again government conciliators announced good progress in their attempt to send $25,000 phone workers back to their jobs. The government's first team of labor experts are determined to keep negotiations going. In the nation's capital long lines of union and company delegations spent the day in conference at the labor department.

The President is said to be watching and waiting.

Senate Begins Debate On Aid to Greece Plan

Washington, April 8—(UP)—

The Senate yesterday began debate on what may well be the most important foreign policy decision to come before the current session of Congress—aid to Greece. Senate president Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan opened the discussion with an hour-long speech in which he called for immediate aid for both Greece and Turkey, warning that Congress will endanger the welfare of the nation if it refuses assistance in the Middle East.

Vandenberg admitted that the aid bill is a "calculated risk" to head off a third world war and named Russia specifically when he warned that other countries have expansionist ideas in Greece and Turkey. He added that he believed it is wiser for the United States to step into the Middle East now even if it means an open break with Russia. Vandenberg stated: "If we were to reject the plan, we would give the green light to aggression everywhere. Our moral authority and leadership would die on the spot. We would multiply our own hazards."

Ford Rites to Be Held At 2:30 This Afternoon

Detroit, April 8—(UP)—According to a company spokesman, funeral services for Henry Ford, 83-year-old motor industrialist, will be at 2:30 tomorrow in St. Paul's Cathedral in Detroit. There will be no pallbearers. The public will be admitted to services; however, the burial at Addison Ford cemetery near Greenville will be private. The body will lie in state today at the huge reception hall of Greenfield village, Ford's famous showplace museum.

Lewis Holds Meeting With District Leaders

Washington, April 8—(UP)—John L. Lewis appears to be relenting a bit in his safety shut-down of the nation's coal mines.

Lewis held a meeting of his district leaders in Washington today, then telegraphed a new set of instructions to his local unions. There has been no complete report on what went on at the meeting, and newsmen haven't seen the telegram Lewis sent out. But reports from leaders who did attend the meeting indicate that Lewis has decided to relax his requirements for thorough federal inspection before any mine can be re-opened.

WEATHER TODAY

Considerable cloudiness and showers. Little change in temperatures.

Frank Alspaugh and his tumbling troupe will perform at the UVA open house tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Debate Team Goes Before Di Tonight

Members of the Debate team that participated in the Grand National Forensic tournament at Fredricksburg last week will take part in the Dialectic senate debate tonight at 9 o'clock in the Di hall.

The bill for discussion at the meeting proposes that legislation be enacted by the government "requiring that persons advocating the overthrow of the government be expelled and excluded from employment in labor unions, public utilities and the U. S. Federal government—except the armed forces; and that such persons be expelled and excluded from positions of authority in all branches of the armed forces."

Nine new members will be considered for acceptance into the Senate. All students are invited to participate in the discussion.

Kenan Will Be Feted At UVA Club Tonight

The coeds of Kenan dormitory will be the guests of the University Veterans association tonight at the organization's weekly open house. UVA President stated that the clubhouse doors will be open at 8:30.

Featured will be Frank Alspaugh and his Carolina tumbling team. Just as last week, the best dressed man and coed will be chosen, and free cigarettes will be furnished. All veterans are urged to attend this function.

DAV CONVENES

The Chapel Hill branch of the Disabled American Veterans will meet this evening at 7:30 in the Horace Williams lounge of Graham Memorial, announced Victor Kelly, commander. All disabled veterans are cordially invited to attend.

Light Coed Election Results Show Barbara Cashion Speaker Of Senate

UP Names Jacobson For Mag Editorship

Present Chief Unanimously Endorsed To Run for Second Term this Spring

By Sam Whitehall

A University party unanimous nomination yesterday put the name of Fred Jacobson in the running for Editorship of the Carolina Magazine. Without a dissenting voice, the men who represent UP endorsed Jacobson, successful candidate last year and current editor of the Magazine.

Renomination of Jacobson for a second term is a move unprecedented in recent campus publication history. "We feel that Fred has done a tremendous job in reviving a Magazine which hit rock-bottom during war years," explained a University party spokesman. "Recent issues of the Carolina Magazine have been generally accepted as the best since 1942. We feel that, if re-elected, Jacobson will bring to the editor's post the experience needed to stabilize the publication at its best."

Long Record of Service

A rising Senior, Jacobson has a long record of scholastic, service and professional writing and editing behind him. Before joining the Army, he worked for two years in the New York Sun's sports department.

In the service, he was in intelligence and was also battalion publications chief. His heroism under fire was recognized by the award of the Silver Star for "valor far beyond the call of duty."

Returned Winter, 1946

Jacobson returned to Chapel Hill and the University in the winter quarter of 1946, immediately resuming work on student publications. Campus experience includes night editorship and associate editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, and columnist for the same paper.

Jacobson is probably the first candidate to have edited the publication before being elected to the post. That came about when he was invited to edit the February, 1946, issue of the Carolina Magazine. The talent he showed in this job led to his nomination and greatly aided in his election by an overwhelming majority in last year's election.

Fred Jacobson, editor of the Carolina Magazine, received the nomination of the University Party for reelection.

Police Discover Langley Collyer

New York, April 8—(UP)—New York police tonight closed the books on the mystery of the rich, eccentric Fifth avenue hermits, the Collyer brothers.

The brothers, Langley and Homer—one a musician, the other an admiralty lawyer—had lived as hermits in their Fifth avenue mansion for nearly 40 years.

Three weeks ago, Homer, blind and paralyzed, was found dead in the trash-filled mansion. Since that time, police have been going through the home and searching through the city for Langley.

Seldom had a case so stirred the imagination of the big town. Everyone reported seeing long-haired Langley but the police.

Today, shortly before 4 o'clock, police found Langley. He was dead, apparently crushed to death in one of the tunnels of refuse which ran like a maze through the mansion.

Marshall Spears Unanimously Chosen Head of Coed Athletic Association

By Bettie Washburn

In the lightest vote recorded in coed elections, Barbara Cashion, rising senior from Chapel Hill, defeated Audry Bryson and Ben Beale for the speakership of the Coed Senate.

The new Senate speaker has attended the University throughout her college career and has been outstanding in student government. At present she is a member of the Student council and served as president of the Town Girls' association this past year.

WAA President

Marshall Spears of Rocky Mount went into the presidency of the Woman's Athletic association unopposed by other candidates. Spears transferred to the University from Stephens college this fall. While here she has been active in woman's athletics and also served on the Woman's council and the WAA council.

Bill Lloyd of Chapel Hill defeated K. D. Durham of Hendersonville for the vice-presidency of WAA. Miss Lloyd is a member of the YWCA cabinet, the Student legislature, Town Girls' association, and the Woman's council.

Barbee Elected

Betsy Ann Barbee, also of Chapel Hill and recently elected president of the Town Girls' association for the coming year, was elected secretary of WAA over Mary Ellen Wellons of Raleigh. Miss Barbee has served as president of CICA, president and vice-president of the WAA Council.

Janet Crinkley of Warrenton defeated Nina Moseley of Chapel Hill for the treasurership of WAA by a small margin. Crinkley is a transfer from Peace college.

Mary (Butch) Goodwin of Edenton and a transfer from Louisburg college, went into the office of awards chairman of WAA unopposed.

The 284 ballots of the special election were cast as follows: Senate Speaker—Barbara Cashion, 130; Audry Bryson, 99; Ben Beale, 50; Vice president of WAA—Bill Lloyd, 160; K. D. Durham, 112; Secretary of WAA—Betsy Ann Barbee, 148; Mary

Gauss to Speak On 'City of Man' This Morning

With "The City of Man" as his topic, Christian Gauss, dean emeritus of Princeton university, will address the first Convocation of the spring quarter this morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Gauss' talk will center around the revolutionary nature of the modern era and the need of bringing political and social thinking into line with the fundamental concepts of the "humane tradition."

All classes at 11 o'clock will be suspended so that all students and faculty members may attend.

Currently the president of the United chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, Gauss, before his retirement from active service, was for many years Dean of the College and professor of romance languages at Princeton.

Awarded Legion of Honor

Today's speaker has been fervently interested in the problems of international and intercultural relations. He was awarded a knighthood in the French Legion of Honor in recognition of his achievements both as scholar and teacher.

In addition to numerous books in the field of literature and the romance languages, Dean Gauss is the author of "Why We Went to War," (1918), and "A Primer for Tomorrow." He also has been a frequent contributor to magazines and collaborative works of national interest.

Ellen Wellons, 119; Treasurer of WAA—Janet Crinkley, 133; Nina Moseley, 128.

Rush Says Library Additions Are Part of Indefinite Future

The long-needed additions to the University library must stay in the class of things to come for an indefinite period, Charles E. Rush, University librarian, said yesterday. The advisory building committees of the library administration board and the statewide Friends of the Library will hold planning sessions throughout the spring and summer to make recommendations to the main University building committee, but actual construction cannot begin until the governor and his advisers decide that building costs have come down enough for the state to get the greatest benefit from money expended.

Paring First Job

"The first job of the planning committees will be a paring one," said Rush, pointing out that the University's original request for $1,500,000 had been cut to $1,215,000. "And then construction details must be based on building costs that will be one-half or three-quarters of what they are today."

If the library started building now, he explained, only one-half the absolutely required space could be completed under present conditions. And the needs of the Library are constantly growing.

Daily Tar Heel Staffs Meet this Afternoon

All members of the news, sports, and editorial staffs of the Daily Tar Heel will convene this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the DTH news offices.

All staff members must be present on time, as several very important matters will be considered. No excuses will be accepted unless cleared in advance through the editor or managing editor.

Little Symphony Completes Series of 63 Concerts

Swalin Directed State Orchestra

A total of 63 concerts, including 30 adult evening concerts and 33 free concerts for 28,550 children, were played by the North Carolina Little Symphony orchestra which has just completed its annual spring tour.

The Little Symphony, composed of 20 of the 60 to 65 members of the Orchestra's personnel, gave concerts in every section of the State, from Murphy to Manteo, during the last month and a half, and also gave a highly successful performance before the General Assembly in Raleigh.

The full Symphony, composed of some 65 players under the direction of Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, launched the most ambitious tour in its history, today in Reidsville, with appearances scheduled in 23 different communities from Asheville to Wilmington.

Two concerts, one for adults and one for children, will be given, in repeat appearances, adding five new towns to the schedule.

Following the Reidsville concerts today, the Symphony will appear in Leaksville April 10, Kannapolis April 11 (private concert), Greenville April 14 (private concert). Washington See SYMPHONY Page 4
