The famous circular amphitheater of the Sorbonne, where he spoke, rang with cheers. Wallace's audience knew instantly whom he was talking about.

The Student party yesterday afternoon completed nominations for most of the positions left unfilled, thus almost completing its slate of candidates.

Bill Moffit, already the University and Campus parties' candidate, drew the nomination for editor of the Yackety-Yack. In making this move the party explained that it considered Moffit the only candidate with sufficient qualifications to fill the office, and in line with its policy of selecting candidates best fitted for positions had no choice but to endorse the already twice-nominated Moffit.

Barbara Cashion of Chapel Hill received the nomination for town co-ed representative in the student legislature along with Jo Fishel as women's dormitory representative.

Herman Baker, rising junior from Nashville, was nominated as Men's dormitory representative to the student legislature.

Charles Robinson, from Mooresboro, and also a rising junior, was nominated as men's representative to the student council.

Town representatives to the student legislature will be nominated at four o'clock Sunday afternoon when the Student party meets at that time in Graham Memorial.

Truman vs. Wallace Will Be Debate Topic In IRC Meet Tonight

"Truman versus Wallace" is the provocative topic which will provide the spark for an informal debate by the International Relations club on Monday evening at 7:30 in the Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. William Armstrong will lead the IRC discussion on the divergent foreign policy viewpoints of Henry Wallace and President Truman. It is expected that several leading campus followers of Wallace will be present at Monday's meeting to argue the case against Truman's so-called "tough" policy toward Russia.

Henry Wallace is expected back from his European speaking tour in which he attacked the Greek-Turkish aid bill to halt communism. Congressional support for the Truman doctrine has been strong. However, some observers feel that if the policy does not bear immediate fruits the pendulum of public sentiment will swing toward Wallace's doctrine.

Meanwhile, the organization went ahead with preparations for a special International Relations club picnic and social to be held next Tuesday afternoon.

Two motions were passed that the dance be semi-formal and that one dollar invitations in the form of class membership cards be sold to freshmen and sophomores soon.

Elections Bill Gains Passage In Legislature

After the tumult and confusion died, the Student Legislature last night discovered that it had passed Johnny Clappitt's election bill with the exception of the article providing for the location of polling places.

The assembly first heard a letter from Student Body President Dewey Dorsett recommending the passage of the entire measure. Dorsett emphasized that his vote of last quarter's polling place bill had created "considerable confusion on the campus."

Following the reading of the letter, the assembly got to work on the elections bill, article by article. Legislators jumped to their feet all over the hall suggesting amendments to the proposal which in essence merely redefines the regulations in accordance with the campus constitution.

Chiefly important among the changes was the raising of campaign expenditures. The expenses allowed under the new laws are: president, $25.00; vice-president, $20.00; Tar Heel, Mag, and Yackety Yack editors, $20.00; secretary-treasurer, $20.00; all other offices, $8.00.

Buying Club Checks For UNC Veterans Will Soon Increase

Veterans who are members of the Chapel Hill buying club will soon receive an unexpected addition to their subsistence checks in the form of a patronage dividend, co-op officials announced yesterday.

It was explained that a patronage dividend consists of a rebate on the total value of all grocery purchases made through the organization. The checks that are now in the process of being mailed are based on 6 per cent of the total value of a member's orders since January.

"Besides authorizing this first patronage dividend we have also established a reserve fund from which we hope to pay our stock-holders a 5 per cent dividend within the year," said co-op chairman Tom McDade.

Incorporated in January of this year as the Chapel Hill Mutual Distributors Inc., the co-op has been temporarily operating as a buying club until such time as a regular store could be established.
