Experts Give Highest Honor To Newspaper

Editorial Column Gets Most Praise

By Earl Heffner

Vest buttons popped in the offices of the Daily Tar Heel yesterday when the twice-ringing postman brought a registered communication from Minneapolis, Minnesota that the newspaper has been honored with an All-American-Superior honor rating by the Associated Collegiate press.

Scrutinized by professional journalists, the intelligentsia of judgment societies for collegiate publications, the DTH went through the Purgatorio of Criticism, emerged with the highest of honors in the field where competition was keenest.

For the class wherein the DTH was judged included all papers emanating from four-year universities with an enrollment of 5,000 or more as a daily publication. The service rendered by the A.C.P. was the regular critical service with the rating to be published.

Over Perfect

In one field, that of the editorial column, the Daily Tar Heel received a grade of 55, five points higher than the nominally perfect mark of 50, gained a written compliment from the judges who remarked, "An excellent editorial column."

Perfect scores were made in the fields of vitality, creativeness, excellence of leads (first paragraphs) of news stories, editing (copyreading and proofreading, typography, and sports coverage and writing.

Excellent gradings also were awarded for news coverage and balance, content and organization of news stories, inside news pages, and sports display.

Very Good

Judgments of "very good" were awarded for treatment of news values, newspaper style, news and editorial features, headline schedule, front page makeup, printing, and editorial page makeup.

Final total score of the Daily Tar Heel was 925 points in giving the newspaper the highest of possible ratings in the opinion of men who know collegiate newspapers best.

To Burn Sin...

Rig Veda Hymn to Feature Glee Club's Home Concert

By Doris Newburn

Gustav Holst wanted to "burn up our sin fierce flaming Agni" in his exciting hymn from Rig Veda. Agni is the God of Fire and it is fire when the Women's Glee club sings it in its alternating rhythm. This will be one of the highlight numbers on their concert program Monday night, which will be presented at Hill hall.

Another Gustav Holst number, "Tears, Idle Tears," reflects an acquiescent temperament but at the same time it is the type of piece that sends chills down your spine. Under the direction of Paul Young, the Glee Club will also sing modern selections such as Roy Harris' "I Hear America Singing."

Nina Thomas and Augusta Harper will do specialty numbers.

Dr. Arthur Shepard, internationally known composer and performer who is now a member of the faculty at Western Reserve university in Cleveland, Ohio, is coming to Chapel Hill for the concert Monday night to conduct two of his own numbers, "He Came all so Still" and "Song of the Sea Winds."

DR. SHEPARD

Dr. Shepard has a reputation of being one of the most outstanding American musicians of today and is well-known in Europe as well as America.

The six coeds pictured above were sponsors for the annual Spring Pharmacy dance held last night in the Women's gym.
