Still-Missing 'Lynching Party' Victim May Not Be Dead, Authorities Believe

Negro Woman Saw Prisoner Escape From Armed Mob

By Chuck Hauser and Bill Sexton

Jackson, N. C., May 24.—An unexpected eyewitness, a 32 slug, a mysterious footprint, and several intriguing coincidences have come to the fore to prove that Godwin "Buddy" Rush, 23-year-old Negro who was spirited from the Northampton county jail here by three masked men, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning supposedly to be lynched, is alive at the present time.

Eye Witness

The eye-witness, Rosa Howard, a Negro woman who lives directly across Jackson's Depot Street from the two-story brick jail, swears she saw Rush break away from his captors, dodge a single shot fired toward him by his would-be captors, and disappear into the woods behind her home.

The footprint, found between the witness's home and an adjoining house, was apparently pressed in the soft earth by Rush's foot, although F.B.I. agents, called in to assist state and local officers in scientific investigation of the weird "lynch" case, made a plaster cast of the print at noon today to definitely establish identity of the foot.

A strange coincidence in the case was revealed by Chief Frank Outland, one-man police department of Rich Square, who said he had been summoned late last night to a home six miles north of the small agricultural community to investigate an attempted break-in at the home of R. E. Shackelford. Shackelford had left his wife and young son at home alone at the time.

Outland and his two bloodhounds followed the trail of the attempted burglars "at least eight miles" toward Murfreesboro before dogs and officers were exhausted.

Newspapermen figured importantly in investigation of the case in its most exciting and unusual stage this morning. United Press correspondent Herbert Foster uncovered the witness of the prisoner's escape from the lynchers. Woodrow Price, Raleigh News and Observer reporter, discovered the bullet fired by one of the would-be lynchers imbedded in the roof of a shed belonging to Rosa Howard.

The bullet has been rushed to the See LYNCH, page 4.

Hard to Get at Last Minute

Travelers Warned to Make Reservations at Agency

By Dave Owens

"Students and faculty who intend making a homeward jaunt in June should make their reservations right away," warns genial Bob Watson, director of the Graham Memorial travel agency, offering free service to anyone connected with the University. "There have been several changes in both trains and schedules, and times familiar to most travelers are now passe."

Watson urges all potential travelers to secure reservations as soon as possible so that the final week's rush will not interfere with plans. "Reservations have the habit of being very hard to get at the last minute," says Watson, "and due to final exams of my own, I'll have to close the office on Friday, May 30. It will be impossible to obtain reservations after that date through the Graham Memorial travel agency."

Watson disclosed the fact that he now has a book showing all hotels and their rates in the United States. Information may be obtained from this new book during his office hours, 1 to 5 o'clock daily except Saturday and Sunday.

Departmental Efficiency Poll Set for Wednesday

Faculty Committee Sponsoring Voting

By Merrily Brooks

The student body will have a chance on Wednesday to express objective opinions on the effectiveness of department instruction here at Carolina through a campus-wide vote.

Members of a faculty committee on instruction have expressed "deep concern" as to the quality of instruction on campus and in accordance with this, a poll is being set up to get the student's "honest and fair" judgment on the efficiency of the various departments.

These polling places will be set up in three central spots around campus, the "Y," Graham Memorial, and Lenoir hall, and will remain open all day.

Unsigned Ballots

Ballots must not be signed by the student, nor will they contain the name of any specific course or instructor.

"This is to keep the opinion strictly an objective one, and it is, therefore, very important that all students consider the ballot seriously and that everyone vote," stated a member of the faculty group in charge of the polls.

Canvass Nets Much Clothing; Drive Extended

Climaxed by a big day of collection Thursday, the campus clothing drive sponsored by CRIL netted several hundred pounds of old clothes to be shipped overseas. A part of the nation-wide drive being staged by the American Council of Churches, the campus collection to form Chapel Hill's contribution.

The canvass Thursday was made by representatives from fraternities, sororities, and major campus organizations, and was in the form of a pick-up campaign for clothes collected in each dormitory and house by members of the Interfraternity and Interdormitory Councils.

Had Not Heard

Reports from the pick-up committees indicated that a great many of the men in dormitories had not heard of the drive. It is asked that these people collect their old clothes and bring them to the Town Girl's room in the Y building. Here the clothes will be sorted and packed tomorrow afternoon, and all students and organizations are asked to give volunteer help.

Although the drive officially lasted one day, present plans call for an extension of the campaign. Clothes will be accepted all next week, and it is hoped that a method can be worked out whereby a collection can be made after most people have completed their packing at the end of the quarter.

When questions of the success of the drive, representatives of CRIL said "We got clothes, and good clothes, but there just weren't enough of them. We hope to reach many more people this week, and double the collection made Thursday."
