Compact Campus March Of Dimes Drive To Open Tomorrow

State Covered With Blanket Of Snow, Sleet

From United Press Wire Reports

It looks like some Tar Heels who took off for home Friday afternoon might not be around for 8 o'clock classes tomorrow morning.

According to latest weather information from the wires of United Press, the deluge of snow and sleet which has struck the state may stay around for a while yet, if temperature predictions ring true.

Weathermen say that the thermometer may drop to as low as 10 degrees sometime early this morning, and stay low until late in the afternoon, when they see a little relief, but no warm weather, at any rate.

Chapel Hill's record low is 16 degrees, recorded early yesterday morning, but today's forecast drop may top that yet. A steady temperature of about 13 degrees prevailed throughout most of the day and early yesterday evening.

Seven-tenths of an inch of snow had fallen in the 24 hours tabulated from 3 o'clock last night, but with the mercury hanging low, it remained dry and powdery, paralyzing most traffic here as well as over the rest of North Carolina. The state highway patrol has warned motorists to stay off the roads unless travel is absolutely necessary, since almost all highways are covered with snow and ice. They add that there is little chance that they will be cleared this weekend.

In Charlotte, where 'snow flurries' were the weather prediction for yesterday, the weatherman apologetically stated that he hadn't made a mistake, it had just "flurried a little more than he had expected—enough more to bury the entire Charlotte area in a four to six-inch blanket by early yesterday afternoon, with the snow still sifting down when nightfall came.

The rest of the state is having approximately the same trouble, with light snow and sleet still being received in the interior up to midnight, and the coast getting the full brunt of a freezing rain. A possible low temperature of eight degrees was expected in some regions.

Asheville was recording 13 degrees yesterday, and suffering under a six-inch blanket of snow, while the mercury tumbled to 12 degrees in Winston-Salem.

Polio Fighters Seeking Double Last Year's Total

By Donald MacDonald

"Twice the money in half the time" is the slogan of the 1948 March of Dimes canvass which begins on the Carolina campus tomorrow. Shorter than any one of the four campaigns which the Daily Tar Heel has sponsored in the past years, the drive ending Friday is designed to double the $1,600 gained from student donations in two weeks' time last year.

Prizes of theater tickets to the individuals of the dormitory, sorority and fraternity house which has the highest percentage of donations, will be given by E. Carrington Smith, chairman of the Orange county drive and manager of the Carolina theater. Barron Mills, DTH editor and chairman of the campus campaign, made the announcement yesterday.

Date for which the theater tickets will be honored will be disclosed with the announcement of winners.

"Each of the above residences which comes closest to a 100-per cent participation will be awarded the prizes," said Mills. "In addition, several divisions have been made in Victory Village and the division there attaining the highest participation will also be given a 'theater party.'" Dan Sapp is the chairman who will supervise the soliciting of funds in the Victory Village area.

Soliciting of student residences will begin tomorrow, said Mills, and will last for a five-day period. In addition, coin containers will be placed in the "Y" soda fountain, Lenoir hall, the Scuttlebutt and the Army store.

Coed Miriam Evans, president of Smith dormitory, is the chairman of the women's division of the campaign, and will supervise the soliciting of all women's residences, including sorority houses off campus.

"We had hoped to have a President's ball at the close of the drive," said Mills, "but the plans were cancelled because several of the fraternities have scheduled next weekend as pledge weekend."

The Dance committee also decided at the meeting to tighten up the enforcement of the dance rules. Although this stricter enforcement will apply to all of the regulations, one committee member stated that it would apply particularly to the regulations pertaining to alcohol consumption.

Large Schooner Secured For the shrimp survey the Institute has been fortunate in securing rent free a large seagoing schooner, the "Reliance", a Navy vessel on lease to the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. Several expert oceanographers and a highly valuable lot of specialized oceanographic equipment have also been included in the deal through the cooperation of the Hydrographic Office of the Navy and the Woods Hole Institution.

William Wells of Southport, chairman of the State Shrimp Survey Commission, who was largely instrumental in securing the $50,000 appropriation, and Louis Hardee of Southport, a member of the Commission, recently went to Woods Hole to examine the 85-foot craft which is expected to arrive in Morehead by the middle of February. They reported the Navy boat is equipped with scientific equipment needed for the survey, valued at several hundred thousand dollars.

Sleeping facilities of the boat will be expanded to accommodate 18 persons. The craft will operate on a 24-hour schedule, making it necessary for three shifts to be used.

Barron Mills, DTH editor, is chairman of the 1948 March of Dimes campaign which begins for five days on campus tomorrow. The canvass will attempt to double last year's donation to the infantile paralysis charity in half the time.

Dance Committee Talks Trimmings

Plans for a set of permanent decorations to be available to all legitimate dance sponsoring organizations at Carolina were considered by the University Dance committee at a meeting held Thursday night.

No final decision was reached during the discussion, although representatives of the administration were present to offer their cooperation in the purchase of the decorations. Also present were representatives of the dance sponsoring organizations who were called in for their opinions of the advisability of the move.

According to Gus Johnston, chairman of the committee, under the plan decorations for both the men's and women's gymnasiums would be purchased and retained for re-use. This would save money for all of the organizations concerned, he said.

If the plans are carried through, the gyms will be permanently wired, and the necessity for making new arrangements for each dance would be obviated. The equipment would, Johnston pointed out, not be kept in the gym, but could be stored here ready for use when needed.

The only apparent drawback would be the similarity between the decorations used at various dances.

The Dance committee also decided at the meeting to tighten up the enforcement of the dance rules. Although this stricter enforcement will apply to all of the regulations, one committee member stated that it would apply particularly to the regulations pertaining to alcohol consumption.

ADPi Initiation The following coeds were initiated into the Alpha Delta Pi sorority on Saturday morning: Rita Adams, Iris Bost, Frances Angas, Doris Beasley, Mary Lloyd Craddock, Sara Jane Farlow, Betsy Fountain, Gayle Hancock, Martha Manning, Katherine McMillan, Edie Knight, Helen Phillips, Carolyn Roper, Shellen Roper, Nancy Shields, Helen Stephenson, Ann Wheeler, Mary Lou Williams and Merrily Brooks.

Marilyn Strohkorb of Richmond, Virginia, was pledged to Alpha Delta Pi on Wednesday, January 21. A costume party was held at the sorority house Wednesday night for the actives and pledges.

Friday night the ADPi's held their pledge dance in the Carolina Inn ballroom. "Hearts and Flowers" was the theme for the occasion.

Faults of South Will Be Argued By Coed Jurists

Negligence in upholding its duty to the remainder of the country is the charge on which the South as a region will be put on trial at tomorrow afternoon's Coed Get-Together. Court will convene at 5 o'clock in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, and all coeds are invited.

Presiding justice Jo Fischel is chairman of the YWCA Public Affairs committee, sponsors of the program. The jury will be impaneled from coeds attending the trial.

Prosecuting attorney Edie Knight will attempt to prove that the negligence of the South has served to pull down the standards of the country in education, political integrity, and economic well-being. Defense attorney Pat Carruthers will attempt to show that the causes of low standards in the South can be traced to events over which the South had little control, such as the plantation system established by early English settlers, and the Civil War and the reconstruction period following it. The defense will also point out ways in which these conditions can be and are being remedied.

Witnesses will be members of the Public Affairs committee, who have been studying the problems during the last quarter. Mary Anne Daniel will discuss economic problems; Patsy McNutt, education; Barbara Dalton, political demagogues; Jean McKeithan, housing; and Anne Wells, fascist tendencies.

Mikado Will Open Two-Day Run Friday; Cast of Fifty Students Will Take Stage

When "The Mikado", Gilbert and Sullivan's comic opera, opens for a two-day run Friday, a cast of 50 will take the stage. The group includes students from nearly every section of North Carolina and from many southern states.

"The Mikado", which is being staged jointly by the Playmakers and the Music department, is generally considered the masterpiece of the famous Gilbert and Sullivan comic opera team. When it opened in London, it played for 672 performances, which was practically unheard of in the 1880 period. It was recently revived in New York by the D'Oyly Carte company from London. The production here is being directed by Lynn Gault, playwright scene designer, who served with the Army in Korea during and shortly after the war. Gault also designed the setting for the comic opera. He says "it is authentic as we can make it."

'Little Turk' Puzzled by Political Query

"Are you a Republican?" the voice demanded over the phone.

"Yes, sir," came the slightly startled reply.

"Well, this is Dean Weaver, and it's as hard to find a Republican around here as it is to find a Communist!"

Al Moore, sophomore from Doylestown, Pennsylvania, puzzled over the situation for a minute, but it was soon explained to him that one Mr. MacDonald, an instrumental figure in the establishment of the Republican club at Duke university, was interested in founding one at Carolina.

The object is to pick some student to speak at a GOP dinner to be held in honor of Abraham Lincoln's birthday on February 12.

Al, better known around the ATO house as "Little Turk," still can't figure out how Dean Weaver knew he was a Republican.

'University Of Sea' Delves Into Life Of Shrimp

By R. W. Madry

Since shrimp swim easily and there are no fences in the ocean, you might think they would be wandering widely over the seven seas.

But they don't. They are not everywhere. Like human beings, they have their favorite haunts.

Down in Louisiana several years ago, shellfish experts discovered after much investigation, that the shrimp in that area, once they had passed the breeding stage, retired to a certain area where they spent the rest of their lives. These shrimp were found to be bigger and fatter than the others and consequently more desirable.

Shrimp seem to be in certain regions at certain times, but where? That's the $64 question that the recently organized Institute for Fisheries Research and Development of the University, in cooperation with the State Department of Conservation and Development, is going to attempt to answer in the near future, as far as the North Carolina coast is concerned.

The project will be the first major job of the Institute, which was established last September by the Trustees of the University, with Dr. R. E. Coker as director.

rector, although a Survey of Marine Fisheries of North Carolina, conducted by the University, has been in progress for the last two years, with a number of authorities participating, and a comprehensive report of its work is expected this spring.

This Marine Fisheries Survey was made possible by gifts of $12,000 each from the General Education Board and George Lurey, an alumnus of New York City.

Million $ Project

The Shrimp Survey will actually mark the launching of a million-dollar project, for the Institute, if you take into consideration the aggregate value of appropriations made by the State and the Knapp Foundation, and the land, buildings, and equipment donated by the State and Federal governments.

For another immediate project of the Institute and the Department of Conservation and Development is "to manage, restore, develop, cultivate, conserve, and rehabilitate the oyster, clam, scallop, and other bivalve resources of Eastern North Carolina by qualified, specialized personnel."

The big idea, of course, is to make available to North Carolinians an additional source of
