UVA Blitzkrieged By Weather, Short Fuel

The weather and the fuel shortage combined yesterday to blitzkrieg the University Veterans association clubhouse, freezing the pipes and giving a refrigerator-like atmosphere to the entire building.

"But we'll be open again for a big evening tomorrow night, I'm sure," said UVA President Johnny Clappitt yesterday.

Some Relief

H. D. Bennett, of Bennett and Blockidge, reported that a little relief for the fuel shortage came into Chapel Hill yesterday afternoon in the form of a carload of run-of-the-mine lump coal and a carload of stoker coal. The cars total approximately 55 tons each.

"We're only giving customers a ton at a time though," said Bennett, "and sometimes only half a ton. A lot of people are temporarily shifting from fuel oil to coal because the oil shortage is even worse. It's hitting hard in the trailer camps and Victory Village where they can't make any change-over."

"We have promises of several more carloads this week and several next week, but with strikes in the coal fields and the weather tie-up, we never know," he concluded.

Mercury Low

Meanwhile, the mercury was still hanging a little low in Chapel Hill. The local weather bureau reported yesterday's high as being 32 degrees and the low at 22 degrees. The thermometer remained around 30 most of the afternoon and began sinking as darkness came on.

The expected snow never fell yesterday, but in its place came some light rain and sleet early in the morning followed by a repeat performance late in the afternoon.

According to United Press weather reports, the state is not due for any storms tomorrow, but the day certainly won't be sunny. The forecast is cloudy with slightly higher temperatures, rain in the southeastern sector, and light freezing rain in the west and north changing to ordinary rain this afternoon. Exactly what weather conditions would hit Chapel Hill was not made clear last night.

Quonset Huts Cold

One thing was clear yesterday evening, however. The fuel oil situation was very clear in the minds of many quonset hut dwellers. With no fuel delivery yesterday afternoon, half the huts were already out of oil by around 8:30, and the others were running quite low, according to a resident of the area.

Siphoning of oil from the few huts with any left was apparently going on again last night. The answer was "Naturally" when a hut resident was asked if pilfering was occurring.

Snow, Ice Cause Injuries In Falls

Snowy walks and icy steps are taking their customary toll in injuries to University community residents, infirmary authorities said yesterday. Eight or ten broken ankles and arms were reported, and one student in Victory Village suffered a spine injury in an ice-caused fall, but Dr. Ed Hedgpeth, University physician, said this injury was not believed to be serious.

Alumni Secretary J. Maryon Saunders chipped his elbow yesterday morning when he slipped on the steps of the Carolina Inn. "We advise all students to keep inside as much as possible," Dr. Hedgpeth said, "not only because of accident hazards, but also because of the chance of colds and influenza developing with constant exposure to the damp, cold weather we are experiencing."

Big Freeze Hits Miller-Nash Men

"It's sorta chilly out here," a resident of Miller dormitory wailed yesterday as he explained the predicament of his dorm-mates living and shivering in Miller and Nash dormitories with around 30 window panes broken out.

The situation was created during Monday's snow-storm of a week ago, when a bunch of the lads staged a Miller vs. Nash snowball contest, and the window glass caught the worst of it.

University authorities took a "now you must pay for your fun" attitude before they would authorize repairs, and the current snowfall and freezing winds found the Miller-Nashites still wrangling over the collection of the necessary money to pay the University for the replacements.

University Building Supervisor J. S. Bennett said yesterday that an agreement had been worked out with dorm representatives, though, whereby each resident would be assessed a certain guaranteed amount, and the glass repairs should be started today.

Thomas Declares None Believe In Free Enterprise; Hits UMT

By Chuck Hauser

"The organizing ideal in America lives in the 'free enterprise' which none of us believe in," declared Norman Thomas during an address on "Forces at Work in the World Today" given in Gerrard hall at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The keynote of the Socialist leader's talk was the expression of a desire to see a passionate fight by people for the things they believe in, instead of their mere acceptance of those things as the lesser of two evils.

"An American may love his wife," Thomas said, "because Mr. Jones' wife is worse looking. In the same way, we love democracy because dictatorship is a worse system."

"Men must make their own histories within a given era, not accept slogans for philosophy," he said, asking for a concerted drive for new ideals and goals.

That, Thomas explained, is his reason for wanting a third party. "The third party may aid in strengthening and adding to a good two-party system in the United States," he said.

World Government

Touching on world government, the five-time Socialist candidate for president of the United States mused that he could not quite see anyone "dying for the good of United Nations."

"One World" would be very much like a bunch of alley cats all bound up in a sack," Thomas declared. "Proximity does not mean love or even cooperation."

On the race question, the elderly Socialist quipped, "Neither Miami nor Elizabeth Arden would be half so prosperous if the color white were really worshipped like it supposedly is."

"Unless men go into the fight against racial discrimination with the passion with which they hate war—and the same thing goes for the fight for disarmament—it will not work out."

"The times cry out for cooperation," the white-haired Thomas stormily declared.

TRYOUTS TODAY

Tryouts for the musical-comedy "Sweep It Clean" will be held this afternoon at 4:30 in Memorial hall. The 38 speaking parts, chorus, and many technical positions in the original musical are open to students, faculty and townspeople. Singers are requested to bring their own music.

Sound And Fury Releases Plans For New Show

"Roll 'Em Over" plans have been released by Sound and Fury president, director, Tommy Thomas.

Thomas says the show will be a two act musical satire on the history of "the theater's other illegitimate offspring, the movies."

"Roll 'Em Over" will begin with Cecil B. DeMille's silent comedies and "Girly" spectacles and work its way through varied types of productions including a composer's fictitious life, a plague of monsters, vampires and werewolves, a "certain lady known as Lil," and a "sweet suffering child star."

Musical Side

Individual singers, a male chorus and a large dancing cast will comprise the musical side of the review. The dancers will do their stuff in three numbers, the most prominent of those being a first act waltz finale linked with the "glorious cause of the South during the war between the states."

Included in the show's music will be three Frank Matthews original songs that Thomas calls "top drawer Matthews."

Sound and Fury writers Pete Strader, Ken Gammage, Colbert Leonard and Tommy Thomas have provided the revue's comedy. The authors have written skits and individual acts on all phases of the Hollywood industry.

"Roll 'Em Over" is scheduled to go on the boards Tuesday and Wednesday, February 24 and 25.

New Student Welfare Group Names Released

By Raney Stanford

The composition of the newly-organized Student Welfare board was announced yesterday by Chancellor Robert B. House, and Board Chairman Fred Weaver said the group should begin functioning within two or three weeks.

This group is designed to plan and formulate action on any University matters not directly associated with classroom work. The main board is composed of 27 University administrators while students are represented by a 15-man advisory committee of student office-holders.

Chancellor House pointed out that with all the school's administrators conferring together on this board, concentrated and well-coordinated action could be brought to the multitudinous problems that fall into the welfare classification. The student committee will keep the board members constantly informed as to student reaction on proposals, and will bring student complaints and recommendations to the group's attention. The group has no overall administrative authority, but Dean of Men Fred Weaver commented that any action asked for by a group of such composition would necessarily be a "strong recommendation" to the University's heads.

Lionel Weil Dies; Goldsboro Trustee Was Active Alumnus

Lionel Weil, 70, a trustee and benefactor of the University, died yesterday in Baltimore's John Hopkins hospital after a short illness.

Long active in state-wide agriculture and in business in his Wayne county home, Mr. Weil was one of five partner-owners of the Weil brothers department store in Goldsboro, which burned on Monday. He was also president of the Wayne Corporation, and, according to Jack Riley of the Raleigh News and Observer, was associated with every activity in Wayne county.

Gave to University

Mr. Weil was graduated magna cum laude, taking a Ph. B. degree, with the University class of 1897. He was appointed to fill the vacancy on the University board of trustees caused by the death of his cousin Leslie Weil in June 1943. In 1943, he made a substantial gift to the University to enable it to "cooperate with the Southern Council on International Relations . . . and the co-ordinator of Inter-American affairs."

One of the nation's foremost authorities on agricultural science, he long supported the state's free soil-testing service as a member of the state Board of Agriculture. He was widely known for his work on scientific agriculture and conducted considerable research on plant hormones in the South and Midwest.

His first wife, the late Ruth Heyn Weil, died in December 1941. He was remarried in 1944 to the former Mrs. May Shalleck of Baltimore, who survives. Three children, all by his first marriage, survive. They are Lionel S., a partner in Weil brothers, of Goldsboro; Mrs. David Young of Shreveport, La., and Miss Ruth Weil, at home.

During the first war, he was State chairman of the American Jewish relief campaign. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the B.P.O.E., the Rotary, and B'nai B'rith.

Two Sports

Pritchard, who is now president of the Monogram club, has two football letters and also lettered in swimming. He is a member of the University club and the Orientation committee.

Last fall's Orientation athletic meeting in Kenan stadium for new men was conducted by Pritchard who also originated the Monogram club's annual Blue-White spring football game.

Party, Not Poetry

Dr. A. R. Newsome admits he likes poetry, but he said yesterday he knows very little about its history and development.

The misunderstanding came after a misprint in yesterday's paper announced the history department head would speak on "the history of poetry and its development" to (of all people) the Young Republicans club!

Dr. Newsome will speak to the club at its 7:30 meeting tonight in Roland Parker lounge. But his subject will be as originally intended, the history of the party—Republican, that is—and its development. The public is invited.
