UP Names Bob Smith, Tom Wharton For Tarnation Co-Editors

SNAPPED BY THE photographer just before they left by plane for Tulane university where they participated in the National Centennial Forensic championships last weekend were the nine University debaters above.
Four entered in the regular debates, competing with students from many states and from South America; two entered in the extemporaneous speech division, and two in the oratorical contests.

Culbreth Attributes Telephone Difficulties To Lack of Equipment, Overtaxed Facilities

By Raney Stanford
"Insufficient equipment and overtaxed facilities," is the explanation for the telephone service difficulties that Chapel Hill callers are continually experiencing, says Grey Culbreth, University supervisor of the light, water, and telephone utilities.

"I believe Chapel Hill has more telephones in use than any other town its size in the country," Culbreth explained. "And our equipment is worn, outmoded, and has not been expanded in several years."

The telephone exchange here is set up to handle 15 per cent of its total number of subscribers at one time, but Culbreth said the full 15 per cent seems to be in use continually, with scarcely any let up. The University and town authorities have been trying to increase the switchboard's facilities for some time, he noted, but the needed and expensive selector switches are tied up in the current nation-wide production bottlenecks.

"Patience and Fortitude"
In advising how users of the town's system could get lines, through despite crowded lines, Culbreth could only recommend "patience and fortitude."

"For instance, when you hear a ticking when you pick up the receiver, it means all the trunk outlets, to the phone series you are connected with are in use. Many mishaps occur when two or more people continue to dial despite the ticking, and then one of the outlets opens up. The first one to finish dialing gets his number, but the others are on the circuit too, and they all find themselves in conversation together."

Chance Increased
"This ordinarily happens very seldom," Culbreth noted, "but when the phones are in constant use the way ours are, the chances of such tangles are greatly increased. All the callers can do is just wait until the wires clear."

Turning from the local situation to out-of-town calls, Culbreth said he thought most long-distance calls were clearing Chapel Hill and encountering only a minimum of delay.

North-South Good
"There is sometimes trouble in East-West calls, but the service North and South seems to be pretty good," he commented.

If all goes according to schedule, he said, the long-distance facilities here should be doubled by June, when seven more outgoing toll trunk lines will be connected to the local switchboard.

SP MEETING
SP officials announced yesterday that a meeting of the party will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon in Roland Parker lounge of Graham Memorial. At 4:30, following the meeting, a caucus of SP legislators will convene.

RADIO CLUB
There will be a meeting of the University radio club Thursday evening in Swain hall at 7:15. A discussion of elementary theory will be held after a short business meeting.

Seven University Students to Attend Planning Session for State Assembly

Seven students; Charlie Long, Pete Gerns, Chet Zum Brunen, Al Lowenstein, Ruth Evans, Sally Woodhull and Sam McGill were elected yesterday afternoon as delegates from the University to the meeting of the executive committee of the North Carolina Student Legislature. Alternate delegates, all of whom were chosen by a group of executives or representatives of the many campus organizations which are sponsoring the annual student assembly, are Bill Mackie, Roland Giduz and Patsy McNutt.

These delegates will meet with those of fifteen other state schools at Meredith college at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon to plan the activities of this year's legislature and to elect its officers.

The legislature itself is scheduled to assemble in the State Capital building on April 16.

In regards to last fall's extensive pro and con discussion about the meet's bi-racial quality, Pete Gerns, member of the Debate Council here who is in charge of the University's arrangements for the assembly, said that "both Governor Cherry and Secretary of State Eure have assured us of the use of the state building for the meet."

At the same time Carter said that the flight of Air Reserve officers going to Marietta, Ga., for flight training will leave from the armory annex at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. All reserve officers interested in making the flight should contact Captain Stuart at the armory.

Air Reserve Body Plans First Meet

The local Air Reserve association will hold its initial meeting next Tuesday, March 9, at 7:30 in 103 Bingham hall, Dr. Clyde C. Carter, president of the chapter, announced yesterday. The main feature of the meeting will be the showing of a film which will be of particular interest to Air Reserve personnel. Several films have been ordered and Carter expressed the hope that "Operations Crossroad," the color film of the atomic bombing of Bikini will be available.

In addition to the movies, the meeting will include a presentation of the charter which arrived this week from the national headquarters and a business meeting. There will be a discussion of plans for further flight training and of active duty training during the summer months.

Carter pointed out that the meeting is of greatest interest to Air Reserve personnel, but that the general public is invited to attend.

Thompson Chosen IFC President

Jack Thompson, Sigma Chi president from Graham was elected president of the Interfraternity council at a meeting of the council held Monday night. The new president, a member of Elections committee of the Student Legislature succeeds Leon Todd of Phi Gamma Delta.

Thompson assumed office immediately after his election, and his first official act was to join the membership of the council in giving a rising round of applause to Todd for his work with the council during the past year.

Other officers selected Monday are Bill White of Lenoir a Sigma Nu, vice president; John Stump of Clarksburg, W. Va., a Kappa Alpha, secretary, and Ted Young of Florence, South Carolina, a Phi Gamma Delta, treasurer.

NROTC GIVES PHYSICAL

Physical examinations reminiscent of Army days have been the order of the day during the past week for the 125 members of the local NROTC establishment as a group of Navy doctors checked the old members of the unit and checked and shot the new men in preparation for the NROTC crews this summer.

Student Party Names Publication Slate

Woodhull, Hauser, Gerns, Buchan Are Up for Board Jobs

Sally Woodhull, Pete Gerns, Chuck Hauser and Bill Buchan are in the race for seats on the Publications board on the Student party ticket, SP spokesmen announced yesterday.

Miss Woodhull was nominated earlier by the University party for the senior position on the board. A transfer from Woman's college in Greensboro, the Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, native is at present working as a reporter on the Daily Tar Heel staff and in the business department of the Carolina Magazine.

She did makeup and news work for the "Carolinian" while at WC, and is now working with the committee for the establishment of a literary quarterly on campus.

Three Publications
Gerns, from Canton, Ohio, is business manager of Tarnation, and also an assistant editor of the Yackety Yack and a columnist for the DTH. He has been nominated also by the Campus party.

He did newspaper work while overseas during the war, and served as business manager of the "Spartan," magazine of Michigan State college, where he is a member of the publications board.

DTH News Editor
Chuck Hauser, from Newton, is present news editor of the Daily Tar Heel, and has a year and one half's work on that publication behind him, acting as reporter and night editor.

A journalism major, he is the United Press representative for Chapel Hill, and has done correspondence work with various state newspapers. In high school he served as art editor of a monthly magazine. He is seeking the post of junior member to the board.

Top Army Editor
Bill Buchan, aspirant to the at-large seat on the board, is a sophomore who is now performing typewriter chores with the editorial staff of the DTH. He has chalked up a long list of experience with publications, including work as editor of one of the top army newspapers overseas during the war.

A native of Aberdeen, he served also overseas as public relations press chief of the Bremerhaven port of embarkation, while he was editing "The 17th Port Reporter," rated one of the three best weekly newspapers out of 85 in Germany. Buchan has been with the DTH editorial staff since last summer.

Daniels Proclaims Democrats Defend True Liberalism

By Jack Brown

"We do not need the reactionaries; the Claghorns are out of date. We do not need the Communists either. We raised hell before Karl Marx was ever born and are still able to do so at any time we feel like it!" spoke Jonathan Daniels, editor of the News and Observer, at an assembly last night sponsored by the Young Democrats club.

Daniels stated, "We are democracy at its best."

He went on to say that the Democratic party has been and still is the true liberal party in America, that the Democratic party defends the liberal central way which is founded on the rights and freedom of men—all men.

Speaking on the current Southern revolution in the Democratic party, Daniels, said there has been a revolution every four years, just before the presidential election. Truman himself, according to Daniels, is the successful product of Southern revolution, and he has every reason "not necessarily to be agreed with but to be treated with respect and honor."

It also seemed strange to Daniels that North Carolina was represented at Jackson, Miss., at a meeting of revolting Southern Democrats, yet the State party officials knew nothing of it. It so happened, said Daniels, that the North Carolina representative was David Clark of Charlotte, who was not only against the Civil Rights program but was also opposed to the abolition of child labor and to Franklin Roosevelt's program in general.

As for Henry Wallace, Daniels was of the hope that he would return to the Democratic party. "I do not question the honor of Henry Wallace," he said, "but I (See DANIELS, Page 4)

Redistricting Bills Are Hashed Over In Open Elections Committee Meeting

Voices were raised and undertones of political intrigue circulated yesterday afternoon, as several controversial solutions to town redistricting legislation were discussed in an open meeting of Jess Dedmond's Elections committee of the Student Legislature.

Four proposed methods of dissecting the town voting district were brought up, but the final vote of the committee concerned only two. The one which triumphed by a five-four vote of the group was devised by Bill Mackie and Basil Sherrill, and will be presented by the committee to the Student Legislature session tomorrow night.

Five Districts
The Mackie-Sherrill plan would split the town men's area into five districts, as follows: (1) Victory Village and trailer courts, (2) West from Columbia street and south from Cameron avenue, (3) West from Columbia street between Cameron avenue and Franklin street, including Carrboro, (4) North of Franklin street, (5) South of Franklin, east of Columbia, and all other areas.

The reapportionment decided on by the committee will give the town men's district 23 representatives, dorm men's district 21 representatives, town women one and dorm women five.

Under this set-up, the districts in the Mackie-Sherrill bill will be entitled to representation as follows: District 1: three, district 2: five, district 3: either seven or eight, district 4: six, and district 5: two.

Leary Proposal
In the Legislature tomorrow night, Dedmond will also discuss the runner up in the committee's voting, a proposal by Joe Leary which would cut the town into four districts, as follows: (1) Victory Village and trailer courts, (2) The area south of Cameron and west of Columbia, (3) The area north of Franklin street, (4) All other areas including out of town.

Other bills discussed yesterday were to cut the town into only two districts and one to cut it into four districts. The former was presented by Miles Smith and the latter by Tag Montague and Ernie House.

Tickets On Sale For Play's Debut

The sale of reserved seat tickets for the twenty-second premiere production of a new play by the Carolina Playmakers will start today, according to John W. Parker, staff business manager. The play, "Call Back Yesterday," was written by Gene A. McLain, a graduate student, and it is being directed by Harry Davis.

Tickets will be available at Ledbetter-Pickard's on Franklin street, or at the Playmaker business office in Swain hall. Seats may be reserved in advance, but no reservations can be held at the box office later than 8:15 on night of performance.

"Call Back Yesterday" will be staged in the Playmaker theater on March 10, 11, 12, and 13. It tells the story of a small town political ring, as expressed in the life of one member, Judge Ralph Gentry.

Staffmen To Support Policy: 'Keep Humor Mag Humorous'

Bob Smith and Tom Wharton, associate editors of Tarnation, will run for co-editorship of the humor magazine on the University party ticket, party officials announced yesterday.

Both Smith and Wharton have been members of the Tarnation staff since it was organized. Wharton is primarily a cartoonist while Smith has done mostly editorial work.

Speaks For Both
Pertaining to the question of their policy under the co-editorship, Smith spoke for Wharton and himself.

"Wharton and I are in favor of a policy of progressively testing the reactions of the student body to various experiments in the line of college humor."

"The student body will have the final approval of anything we do. In other words, student body support is our platform."

"Will Remain Humor"
"Tarnation was commissioned as a humor magazine and was upheld in the recent referendum as a humor magazine. It will be our policy that it will remain primarily a humor magazine."

"We feel that together we would work very smoothly in an editorial capacity since we are in complete accord on matters of policy."

Hodgson Comments
In commenting on the nomination, Tarnation editor Tookie Hodgson had this to say, "Bob and Tom have done excellent work as associate editors of Tarnation since it was organized."

"I think both have a great deal of ability along humorous lines. I'm very happy to see that they received the UP nomination."

Smith's Work
Smith, a journalism major from Greensboro, is noted for his "Hey-How U?" story in the first issue of Tarnation, "New Years Eve" and "Flashback," a satire on modern prose, in the past issue.

While overseas in the Army, Smith did feature work for the Stars and Stripes. He entered Carolina in January of 1947 and is now, as he phrases it, a "sinking" Senior.

Commercial Art Major
Wharton is a rising junior from Winston-Salem. He entered Carolina in the spring of 1947 and did work on the trial issue of Tarnation which came out at that time. He has also done illustration work on the Yack and is a commercial art major.

He has done cartooning for the Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel and did illustrations for the Daily Target on Saipan while in the Army. He is a member of Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Absent Minded
Cambridge, Mass., March 2—(UP)—Here is a story of an absent-minded professor that just about tops them all.
Seventy-two-year-old W. J. Cunningham is the professor, a retired professor in the Harvard graduate school. He was on his way to Cambridge, Massachusetts, after a six thousand mile automobile trip to the west coast. Professor Cunningham stopped at Greenfield, Indiana, to look at a road map. Then he drove on. Thirty miles away, he realized that he had forgotten something at Greenfield.
He had forgotten—his wife. He went back for her.

WOMEN'S GLEE CLUB
Members of the Women's Glee club are requested to meet this afternoon at 4:45 o'clock, since Mr. Young will be away on Thursday.

Celebrated Poet Robert Lee Frost To Speak Tonight

By Sally Woodhull

In a return visit to Carolina, Robert Frost, distinguished American poet, will appear tonight in public lecture at 8 o'clock in Hill hall under the sponsorship of the English department. Well received during his campus visit last year, the New England poet will discuss poetry and its relation to world affairs, and will read some of his poetry and comment upon it. Dr. Clifford P. Lyons, head of the English department, and personal friend of the poet, will introduce him.

Frost will stay in Chapel Hill for the remainder of the week, and while here will speak informally to several classes in contemporary poetry, American literature, and creative writing, answering questions of students and discussing his ideas.

At Other Schools
Following his stay here, Frost will go to the University of Florida at Gainesville, Florida State University at Tallahassee, and Richmond. Since his resignation from the Amherst English department in 1938, Frost has spent a great deal of time lecturing in an informal way at various colleges throughout the country.

Teaching Posts
Recipient of numerous honors for his poetry since the publication of his first volume, "A Boy's Will" in 1913, Frost has been associated with many colleges in his long career as teacher and poet. In addition to Amherst, he has taught at University of Michigan, Harvard, Middlebury college's Breadloaf School of English, and Dartmouth.

His most recently published works are "Masque of Reason" and "Masque of Mercy," two book length poems designed to complement one another, and dealing with the import and interrelations of justice and mercy. Based on the books of Job and Jonah, respectively, the works are longer and more extended than others Frost has done. He has called them "two New England biblicals."

Di Officer Election To Be Held Tonight

The Dialectic Senate will meet tonight in a closed business session to elect its officers for the next term. All Senators are required to be in the Di hall promptly at 8 o'clock unless they submit valid excuses in writing to Charles O. Long, speaker of the Senate at present.

All those who applied for Di membership recently are also asked to be present at 8 o'clock in order that their applications might be acted upon in time for those accepted to participate in the election of officers.

Charlotte Club Bids To Be Sold Today

Bids for the Charlotte-Carolina club's spring semi-formal dance will be on sale at the YMCA this morning from nine until one o'clock.

The dance will be held on Friday, March 19, at Morris Field Officers' club from nine until one o'clock. Music will be furnished by Billy Knauff.

There will be only one bid available to each member. Any bids left will be sold to alumni on March 9. No bids will be sold in Charlotte.
