Kay Kyser Will Deliver Address To Golden Fleece

Private Meeting Will Hear 1927 Fleece Initiate Talk

KAY KYSER

By Charlie Gibson
Kay Kyser will return to Carolina next Monday night. His trip this time will be to speak before an undisclosed number of men who are to be tapped into the Order of the Golden Fleece, highest men's honorary organization on campus, in public ceremonies beginning at 8 o'clock in Memorial hall.

The same James Kerne Kyser who was initiated into the Fleece in 1927 will speak privately at a post-tapping banquet in honor of those this year whose leadership, service, and character meet the qualifications for Fleece membership.

7:50 Deadline

What some people consider to be the University's most impressive ritual, the tapping will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. Because of the suspense of the ceremony, the doors to Memorial hall will be locked the minute the tapping starts. It is advisable that anyone who wishes to see the services or to attend the Valkyrie Sing which follows the program immediately should be in his seat before 7:50.

After the reading of the myth of Jason and his quest for the Golden Fleece to symbolize heroic achievement, black robed figures will stalk the darkened auditorium, seeking those who are to be honored. After this procedure the order will disclose the names of its officers for the first time this year.

There will be no limit to the (See KYSER, page 4)

Little Girl Melts Police Hearts; Keeps Crying, 'I Want My Mommy'

Newark, N. J., April 13—(UP)—You may think police of Newark, New Jersey, are hard men, but their hearts are not that hard that a child cannot melt them.

Today, the Newark police are sending out appeals to the little girl's mother. They say they will get the child's father a job if only he or the mother will come for little Georgianna. They say she keeps crying over and over again, "I want my mommy."

Here is how Georgianna first started to break the hearts of the policemen in Newark.

There were two traffic violators waiting their turn in court. They looked down and saw a little girl staring up at them. She had big blue eyes.

She was barely knee high, and from under her maroon bonnet peeked a cluster of blonde curls. On the lapel of her snow suit was pinned a note. It began, "To whom it may concern."

The traffic law violators called police. An official of the Missing Persons bureau, Herman Cohen, began to read it. The note said, "You may think I'm a mother without a heart, but I have no choice but to do what I am doing."

The note was hard to read. Tears had stained the ink.

The note went on to say, "If you could only take care of her a month until my husband and I can get some money and a place for my baby to stay, I will call for her or my husband will . . ."

The note also said, "We cannot (See GIRL, page 4)

New Rent Controls Call for 60-Day Notice On Evictions, May Effect Student Families

According to an announcement by rent control officials yesterday landlords must give tenants 60-day notices before eviction under normal circumstances.

It was further stated that housing accommodations termed "non-housekeeping furnished rooms in private homes where there are no more than two paying guests" are no longer subject to rent control.

The rent control office recently released the following information: "Under a new law, rent controls are continued in effect through March 31, 1949, under the administration of the Housing Expediter. The new law makes no automatic change in rent ceilings and for most tenants their maximum rents under the law are the same as those which were in effect on June 30, 1947, with the following three types of exceptions: (1) Where a landlord and tenant had voluntarily entered into a written lease increasing the rent up to 15 per cent. (2) Where the local rent office had issued an individual adjustment order changing the rent. (3) Where the Housing Expediter had approved a general increase in the rent level in a rent area or portion of an area in response to a recommendation of a local rent advisory board.

"Tenants who have not signed voluntary lease increases are protected for the life of the Housing and Rent Act of 1948, through March 31, 1949.

"Tenants who signed leases on or before last December 31 agreeing to an increase in rent up to 15 per cent are protected by those leases which must run at least through December 31, 1948, and if they expire before March 31,

Sam Magill of Shanghai, China was re-elected vice-president. Ed Strain of Rome, Georgia, will serve as secretary-treasurer.

They will succeed Charlie Foley, president, and Charlie Britt, secretary-treasurer.

These officers will be installed at a ceremony to be held next Tuesday. Within the next few weeks the incoming president will select his cabinet, made up of committee chairmen.

Charles Britt, secretary, gave a report on this year's activities of the Y.M.C.A. The "Y" publishes the Student Directory, the Freshman handbook, and is in charge of lost and found articles. It also looks after the bulletin board in the "Y". The Y.M.C.A. was co-sponsor of the W. S. S. F. drive, the clothing drive, and the Friends Institute on Applied Religion. A pre-college retreat and social activities were held for the freshmen.

The Natural Bridge winter conference was one of the highlights of the year. This was attended by about 65 students from here and other schools.

Delegates were sent to the Southern Area Student Council at Atlanta and to the United Nations seminar. Work has also been done in the Chapel Hill Hi-Y.

Eaton Presents Bill Giving Group Power Over Export of Arms

Washington, April 13—(UP)—Chairman Charles Eaton of the House Foreign Affairs committee introduced a bill today to give the National Munitions Control board authority over the export of arms. The bill by the New Jersey Republican would accomplish just about what President Truman asked for a year ago.

At that time, the president told Congress that the only control over the export of arms and ammunition came under the Neutrality act of 1939. He described that act as "particularly ineffective" in dealing with current problems.

Under the 1939 act, said Truman, the secretary of state has to treat peaceful and trouble-making nations alike by licensing the export of arms to both—so long as no treaty is violated.

The bill sponsored by Eaton would give the Munitions Control board authority to screen the shipment of arms overseas and register the makers and exporters of the arms. The board could also check more fully into international arms traffic. In addition, export controls could also be placed on machinery normally used to manufacture arms.

Delegates to State Student Legislature Draw Up Eleven Resolutions for Assembly

Eleven resolutions to be presented at the State Student Legislative assembly by the Carolina delegation were drawn up yesterday at a meeting of delegates headed by Pete Gerns. The bills will be submitted to the Committee on Legislation of the Legislature's Executive Council, which will draw up the calendar for the assembly.

Registration for the Legislature will take place at 11 o'clock Friday morning in the capital building, and the body will convene in joint session at 1:30 Friday afternoon. Other sessions of the group will be held Friday evening and Saturday morning and afternoon.

Resolutions to be submitted by the Carolina delegation propose the following: Enactment of a selective service law; establishment of universal military training; the strengthening of the United Nations into a workable world government; favoring federal aid to education on the basis of need and population; abolishing of the electoral college in presidential elections.

A bill recommending that the North Carolina General Assembly fail to ratify the constitutional amendment limiting the number of terms a president may serve will be submitted by the group. The strengthening of the power of North Carolina governor is the purpose of a resolution calling for the use of the short ballot and for the addition of the veto to the governor's powers.

Other resolutions include one calling for a state planning commission; one favoring North Carolina tax reform, specifying central assessment of property values; the abolishment of the Umstead law; and state responsibility for the building of schools.

A resolution calling for the abolition of county option on the liquor question was tabled because it was felt that student opinion would be overwhelming in favor of such a measure's being introduced. Aid to highways will not be submitted because of the group's feeling that aid to education was more important.

Annie Ben Surprised Again to Find Herself In the Show Instead of Being a Spectator

Annie Ben Beale got cheated again Monday night.

The first time was Monday a week ago, when Ben put on her best new-look duds and sauntered over to catch a glimpse of Mr. Franz Polgar, hypnotist extraordinary.

And, just for kicks, Ben decided that she'd like to be one of Polgar's subjects. No hypnotist ever had it so good. The perfect subject, Annie Ben went out like a light without even half trying.

So Ben went back to see Polgar again Monday evening, determined this time that she would watch the show—not be a part of it.

The first hypnotism stunt the master mentalist performed was the mass hypnosis of a large group of students who had volunteered to come up on the stage.

"I'm going to count to 10," Polgar explained. "As I count you will begin to grow very sleepy. Your arms will get heavy . . . so heavy that you cannot lift your hands . . . your eyelids will close and you will not be able to open them."

And so it went. From one to ten the great Polgar counted. Most of the subjects on the stage quietly passed into a deep sleep. The commotion in the audience behind them did not wake them up. Laughter, craning necks and general confusion shook Memorial hall.

One lone, red-headed figure in the audience was slumped over in her seat. Annie Ben had gone to sleep again.

She was led up on the stage and seated. When Polgar awakened her a few minutes later, a look of amazement came over her face. It quickly turned to one of anger as she glared back into the audience.

"Jim . . ." was all she could say.

She explained later that her date, Jim Blount, had promised not to let her go up on the stage if anything happened. And look where she wound up!

The most confusing part of the whole thing, Ben explained, was when, at the end of the show, she tried to get up out of her chair to leave.

"It was the funniest thing you could imagine," she pointed out. "I was stuck to the chair."

Graham Memorial Director Bill Shuford who was handling the business end of the Polgar show, walked up to Annie yesterday with a crisp one dollar bill.

"What's that for?" asked the hypnotist red-head.

"Just giving you your money back," Bill explained, "seeing as how you bought tickets for each of the Polgar shows and then missed seeing them."
