

HOURS AFTER THE BIRTH of the new Jewish state, Israel, fighting men of Haganah were reported in combat with Arabs from Dan to Beersheba, the biblical limits of the Holy Land. Meanwhile, Egyptian troops were said to be advancing inside Palestine on a 50-mile front. A report from Cairo stated that 122,000 Arab troops would take the field: 50,000 Egyptians, 50,000 Iraqis, 12,000 Trans-Jordanians and 10,000 warriors from Syria and Lebanon. The map shows how Arab countries surround the newly-formed Jewish nation. (International)

Class of 1937 Establishes Library Memorial Fund

By Margaret Gaston

In remembering the University and its dedication to the causes of humanity in war and in peace, the class of 1937 charged a 12-man committee last June to devise something which would be a fitting memorial to its classmates who died in World War II, and at the same time serve a useful purpose in the University.

After discussing various projects the committee proposed that its class establish the Class of 1937 memorial fund, the initial installment of which they would present to Chancellor House at the alumni luncheon to be held at its 11th anniversary reunion at commencement this year. The money contributed by the members of the 1937 class would be available to the University library for use in the purchase of books for which appropriated funds cannot be spent.

The library staff and department heads told the committee that certain volumes and collections essential to the library were not available on the open market and were obtainable only by constant searching and prompt action when they were discovered for sale.

Since books by themselves may be lacking in the symbolic qualities desired in a memorial, the committee designed a bookplate for insertion in the books which will be acquired through the fund. The bookplate shows the names of the 16 members of the class of 1937 who were killed in the last war.

Those listed on the bookplate are Jacob Waldo Bond, Winchester, Mass.; John Calhoun Bower, Jr., Lexington; Arnold Breckenridge, Chapel Hill; Bunyan Randolph Cooner, Asheville; George Loris Dover, Shelby; Joseph David Feldman, New York; John Coltrane Fuller, Jr., Lambert; William Perry Kephart, Greensboro; John Graydon Klingman, Greensboro; Thomas Joseph O'Flaherty, Waterbury, Conn.; Benjamin Franklin Royal, Jr., Morehead City; Sidney Sitoroff, New York; Emmet Robinson Spicer, Goldsboro; Edward Vassar Stephenson, Seaboard; Edward William Tankersley, Greensboro; and Henry McGillbert Wagstaff, Jr., Chapel Hill.

With the exception of O'Flaherty, who was a volunteer in the Abraham Lincoln Brigade in the Spanish Civil war, all these men were killed while in service with the American forces.

The Class of '37 is the first University class to establish a memorial to classmates who died in World War II. Officers of the class are Fred H. Weaver, president, Niles Woodbridge Bond, vice-president, and Thomas Eli Joyner, Jr., secretary.

The committee which drew up the memorial to classmates is Ernest Marvin Allen, Jr., Julian Daniel Bobbitt, John vanGaasbeek Elmendorf, Joseph W. Grier, Jr., John Lewis Gouger, Mary Lindsay Elmendorf, James E. Poindexter, Robert Varley, Henry Wilkins Lewis, who is memorial fund treasurer, and officers of the class.

Beauty Here ...

the place was deader than a history lecture. So, McCumber sent Bill Sontag, his student guide and handyman, into one of the dorms to recruit a few fems to grace the picture with their presence.

Imagine his amazement when a mere five or six gals finally emerged from their studies to appear in the picture. Campus cynics will be delighted to know that the local institution has so many serious girls.

According to McCumber, he and his assistant, Ted Ramo, will be in the "village" for another two weeks. If the weather is disagreeable, it may be an even longer time before they conclude the shooting.

The result of all their efforts will be a 30-minute feature on the town and the University slow his work. He had much praise for the cooperation of both the students and townspeople.

"Usually there's a bunch of wise guys trying to ham up the show," he commented. "It hasn't been that way here, though," he added. McCumber mentioned that cloud formations have been excellent and will show up well in the film.

Carolina's canines, apparently fatigued by the heat of the week will make few appearances in the film. The noisy and numerous mongrels got into the act for the first time on Sunday afternoon when McCumber photographed the outdoor band concert.

The film is produced by Don Parrish and the dialogue is written by Mabel Lawrence.

Publications To Be Sliced $3,000 Amount

By Herb Nachman

The Finance committee of the Student Legislature has recommended a cut of $8,197 in the general campus budget to allow for the present deficit.

Major item in the cut is the amendment which would knock $3,000 off the total $65,717 publications budget. The committee's action removes the entire $2,000 appropriated for the new Carolina Quarterly and cuts $2,000 from the Debate council's original $4,125.

Four other cuts were approved by the committee. They are: Class organizations, $500; Men's council, $375; student entertainment, $250; and Student Legislature, $72.

Tomorrow night, the Legislature will have its second opportunity to do something about the current $4,667.85 deficit in the budget when the committee's recommendation will be introduced under the Montague bill.

The bill was introduced at last Thursday's meeting by Tag Montague, speaker pro tem, and was referred to committee. The bill gave the Finance group authority to recommend such legislation necessary to relieve the deficit.

Montague's bill was introduced following the closed meeting of the Legislature in which the original bill, providing for an increase in the block fee structure in order to relieve the deficit, was defeated.

Yesterday, Jack Girard, chairman of the Finance committee and speaker of the Legislature, announced that the committee had reached its decision.

Girard's report of the committee's findings is as follows: "In view of the fact that students have the right to administer student fees and stand to lose this privilege if a deficit is incurred, the Finance committee of the Student Legislature feels that a cut if necessary to be able to operate on a sound financial basis.

"We regret that it is necessary to curtail student activities but since no increase in the fee structure has been decided in the Student Legislature there will be no additional funds out of which these activities can be operated."

PRIZE GIVEN

William Siemon, graduate student in philosophy, has been awarded the $25 Buchan prize in philosophy for his paper "An Outline of Ethics."

Daylight, That Is ...

Daylight Kissing on Drake Campus Is Halted by Dormitory Counselor

Des Moines, Ia., May 18—(UP)—Drake university coeds have agreed to stop kissing on the campus—in daylight, that is.

Most of the girls believe the women's dormitory counselor, Leona Anderson, was right in calling a halt to kissing the boys on the dormitory front steps in daylight. Miss Anderson called sorority officers together and asked them to cooperate in stopping what she called the "over-affectation" conduct of some sorority members.

The girls insist that only a few of the more amorous girls were too public in their necking. Barbara Boreman of Des Moines, president of one sorority, said, "We took it up in a chapter meeting, and all of us agreed that it doesn't look very nice to be clinching on the campus in daylight."

A spokesman for the men, basketball letterman Tom Biemann, said, "It's no fun necking in daylight, anyway."

The student newspaper took notice of the situation with this verse:

Breathes there the man with soul so dead,
"Who never to date has said,
"Hang the ban and tilt your head."
