Tar Heel Vanguard Finds Athens Quiet

By Chuck Hauser

ATHENS, Ga., Sept. 30—The University of Georgia campus was quiet tonight as the vanguard of the Tar Heel caravan rolled in.

But if the campus was quiet, the town was seemingly wide awake as possible. There was no Jeff's, no Harry's, no Max's, but the center of town was reminiscent of Chapel Hill on an average evening.

The "Varsity" was doing a thriving liquid business, and the upstairs poolroom where former Georgia halfback Charlie Trippi used to spend his spare time echoed to the click click of the billiard balls.

Athens is a typical college town. And tonight a typical pre-game college atmosphere hung over it. Conversations and bets centered on the Carolina-Georgia contest slated here Saturday.

In less than 35 hours the Tar Heel train will roll into the Athens station, and players and fans alike will step into a friendly, familiar atmosphere that one may find in any college town of this type.

Across the main street was the big gateway leading into the campus. Georgia freshmen studiously avoided passing through the "hallowed portals" restricted to upperclassmen.

On the dimly-lit campus, familiar titles appeared on more familiar-looking university buildings—the library, "School of Pharmacy" and the well-known Henry Grady school of journalism overlooking the stadium.

Sanford stadium lay like an immense black vacuum in the dark. In the background the huge Alumni Memorial building sat, silent but not dark. Inside, Georgia coaches worked late into the night, planning strategy for Saturday when the terrible Tar Heels are to descend on the Bulldogs.

This is Athens at night. A tense, waiting Athens.

Raise in Rent Is Announced In Dormitories

An increase of 19 per cent in all university housing rents was announced yesterday afternoon by university officials. The increase, according to South building officials, was necessitated by the upward spiraling of prices for maintenance material, supplies, utilities and labor. Many manufacturers had warned the University purchasing department in advance of the price changes, therefore rent adjustments had to be made to meet the rise.

J. A. Branch, head of the University Purchasing department said yesterday that prices for repair supplies such as nails, lumber, paint and panes have increased over 33 percent since 1945.

Mr. Branch added that although coal prices are expected to drop as a result of increased production in the mines and a heavy stockpile, the University will still spend approximately $35,000 more this year to heat the dormitories. In discussing the situation, Branch said, "I'm pessimistic, there's not much chance of prices going down."

With the price difficulty to meet, University officials voted to raise the room rents after deliberating since January. This is the first rent increase since before the war.

The University maintenance program for dormitories has no appropriation and is budgeted to be self-supporting. Wages for janitor service was raised recently also to conform to the increased cost of living.

First UP Meet To Be Wednesday

The University party will have its first meeting at 4 o'clock next Wednesday in the Horace Williams Lounge of Graham Memorial, according to Thurston Williams, chairman of the party.

Any group on campus having a minimum of 25 members is cordially invited to send a representative to the UP meeting. This includes men and women's dormitory groups, social and fraternal organizations and any other groups sincerely interested in working for better student government.

"Freshmen and transfer students are especially urged to attend in order to become familiar with our party policies and organization," declared Thurston Williams. Meetings are customarily open to all.

The main order of business will be the setting up of the party organization for the coming year and consideration of the By-Laws drawn up during the summer. Attendance of all is desired and the representatives are reminded to bring alternates.

There has been no meeting this week due to the party's desire not to exclude co-eds engaged in rushing activities.

Princess, Sharman Douglas Compete For Marquess' Hand

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(UP)—Romanic Londoners wondered today whether the young and beautiful daughter of U. S. Ambassador Lewis Douglas is beating Princess Margaret's time with the handsome eligible Marquess of Blandford.

Princess Margaret and the young Marquess have been linked by Mayfair gossip for some time, but the other day, photographers and autograph hunters found Sharman Douglas, lovely blonde daughter of the American ambassador, sitting with the Marquess in a movie theater.

Tongues have wagged ever since. Since the young Marquess is definitely a gentleman, and Princess Margaret is definitely a brunette, some observers have

DECLARING THAT U. S. relations with the Soviet Union had never been more "critical" than now, Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, Ambassador to Russia, makes a personal report to President Truman. Gen. Smith flew from Washington to board the Presidential train en route to Bonham, Tex., to report the European crisis. (International)

Editors Seek Material For Initial Mag Issue

Editor Bill Sessions of the new Carolina Quarterly announced last night that the literary editors are ready to consider material for its first issue. The disclosure followed the successful opening of the campus wide subscription campaign yesterday.

Sessions said, "We are looking for fiction, both humorous and serious, for poetry, and for articles. The department editors are extremely interested in working with new student writers as well as with the more experienced ones."

"There are many student writers who have never submitted work to the campus publications," Sessions said, "and we cordially invite them to give us a try."

Sessions went on to explain that the main requirement demanded in the writing to appear in the Quarterly was that it be truly representative of the campus writers best efforts.

He said, "We intend to keep the Quarterly out of the clouds and to make it a clear hard-hitting magazine that the students will like."

The Carolina Quarterly, which is making its debut this year, was formed after the 104 year old Carolina Magazine was voted out last winter by a student referendum. Nearly 1500 students signed a petition asking that a new campus literary magazine be formed, and the Carolina Quarterly was the result.

A permanent advisory committee, consisting of Walter Spearman and Phillips Russell of the journalism department, and Charles Eaton, H. K. Russell, and Lyman A. Gotten of the English department, was set up. All of the members of the advisory board are successful authors or critics.

GM Stages Fall Revue Tonight

The Rendezvous room will present the first in a series of Friday night floor shows tonight at 10 o'clock in Graham Memorial.

Featuring comedian Andy Griffith, the show will be mc'd by Jim Geiger. Griffith, who appeared at the Nags Head Beach Club this summer and also understudied a lead role in "The Lost Colony", will present a revival meeting sketch.

According to Lib Stoney, program director of the Rendezvous room, other entertainers presented will be dancer Mary Jo Cain and Barbara Young, vocalist. Miss Cain, who appeared in the campus musical, "Sweep it Clean" last year has been playing in summer stock at Rabeth Beach, Delaware.

Wallacites Hold Forum Tonight

For the benefit of those who have any questions about the Progressive Party the UNC Students for Wallace Club are presenting a forum tonight in Gerard hall at 8 o'clock.

The platform of the new political party will be presented by three speakers who will outline the three sections of the party slogan, "Peace, Security, and Abundance."

States Rights Organization Will Be Formed On Campus

Tar Heels Will Stage Huge Rally In Athens

Head cheerleader Norman Sper announced plans yesterday for a pre-game pep rally and parade in Athens, Georgia tomorrow for all students going to the Carolina-Georgia football game. Sper requests all students to meet at the Georgian Hotel in Athens at 12 noon.

A special train carrying the Tar Heels will leave Raleigh tonight at 9:30 and will arrive in Athens tomorrow at 7:30.

Sper said he will meet a special train carrying over 300 Carolina alumni which will also arrive in Athens tomorrow morning, and will conduct them to the Georgian hotel. From there the entire body will parade to the stadium on the University of Georgia campus.

Commenting on the pictures of the card stunts staged at the Carolina-Texas game last Saturday which are now being shown at the Carolina theater Sper said, "the photographer who took the pictures completely missed the beauty of the stunts when he failed to take the students coming up into the stunts and finishing them."

Sper added that more film will be used during the Carolina-State game which will be played here October 16 so that no stunts will be left out. "The best stunts Saturday were not taken because there was not enough film," he explained.

The head cheerleader, apologizing for the failure of the bucking bronco stunt, said he rushed the students too much in trying to keep up with the band.

New Group Plans To Aid Thurmond In Hot Campaign

By Jim Dickinson

Campus States' Rights Democrats will gather at 7:30 Monday evening in the main lounge of Graham Memorial for the purpose of forming a new organization, the Young States Rights Democrats Club.

Spokesmen for the group said yesterday the immediate purpose of the club is to insure a proper reception for J. Strom Thurmond, the States' Rights presidential candidate, in his appearance here for a speech in Hill hall on Tuesday night.

The group also announced its intention of spreading throughout the campus the principles and ideals laid down by the States' Rights Democratic party. The club's founders wish to extend an invitation to all students interested in the States Rights party in order that a good turnout will be seen on Monday night.

One spokesman said the new club intends to go "all out" as a campaign group for Gov. Thurmond and the States Righters—win or lose.

He added, "Our group believes it is the duty of every loyal Southerner who believes in the Southern way of life to aid Gov. Thurmond in every way at his command. The South has never had a better opportunity to teach the Democratic Party a much-needed lesson."

"Unfortunately the Democratic Party in the past few years has fallen into the hands of a few power-mad politicians of the North whose only interest in the party is to elect their 'yes' men by stirring racial strife among minority groups and by 'rabble rousing.'"

Another local States Righter said that at the recent Democratic Convention "with smug self-assurance the Democratic National Committee gambled the Southern white vote in an effort to gain the Northern minority vote."

"One has only to ask anyone who attended the convention to find out that our Southern delegates were treated as poor relations and their rights trampled at every move."

A member of the new club expressed his belief that only through solidly backing Gov. Thurmond can the South hope to regain its political bargaining power and the respect of the nation.

"Only by bargaining the National Democrats away from minority rule," he asserted, "can we return the Democratic Party to the party founded by Jefferson, and party based on states rights which will respect and protect our way of life."

Freshmen Hear Talks On Campus Activities

By Charles Pritchard

Following an introduction to University extra curricular activities by eight speakers, Bill Miller, orientation committee chairman, presented a challenge to the new students in the second freshman assembly yesterday in Memorial Hall.

"The rest is up to you," the presiding officer said. He urged the new students to put into the activities of the campus "what you bring to Carolina."

A bit of humor was inserted in the program by Bob Coulter by putting up a two and one-half-minute argument for the time allowed to speak and by being "shot" by Miller after the three-minute-period. Coulter "got rid of the book" and told the students about the dramatic organizations of the University.

Dean Mackie enlightened the students on the honor organizations, pointing out the qualifications of scholastic ability required for membership.

"All three parties lead to better student government," Ernie House said of the Campus, Student and University political parties. He added that the political parties help students only if they participate.

Forensic organizations, including the Spanish, French and German clubs, the Carolina Forum and the Debate council, were reviewed by Charlie Long.

Freshman students were told that the continued success of the political activities depends upon the interest and support given them by the student body. Representing the Carolina Political Union, the International Relations club, the Collegiate Council of the United Nations, and the United World Federalists was Nat Williams.

Editor Ed Joyner of the Daily Tar Heel, explained the campus publication facilities including the Daily Tar Heel, the Yackety Yack, Carolina Quarterly and Tarnation.

It was pointed out by Pete Burkes, speaking on the place for religion on the campus, that religion holds a very important position in college life.

Fraternity rush period rules were outlined by Jack Thompson.

Faculty Meeting

The office of Chancellor announced yesterday that there will be a faculty meeting Friday October 8, at 4 o'clock in Howell hall.

Business will include the introduction of new members, information, and order of business for the year.

Carolina Girls Chosen to Enter Durham Jubilee

Miss Elizabeth Loyns and Miss Rebekah Huggins, two University students will represent Chapel Hill in the Tobaccolina Jubilee to be held in Durham this weekend it was announced by Mayor R. W. Madry yesterday.

The girls will compete in the contest for selection of Queen of Tobaccolina Jubilee Fashion Show at the Durham City Armory. Identity of the Queen, however, will not be revealed until the Coronation Ball tonight.

At the Fashion Show, Miss Huggins, a former student at Salem college, will be escorted by John Bippert, and Miss Loyns formerly of WCUNC will be escorted by John W. Ross. Judges for the contest in which 19 other girls will compete, will be Norman Cordon, former Metropolitan Opera star; Sam Selden, head of the Carolina Playmakers, and Mrs. A. T. West of Duke University.

Last year a Chapel Hill girl, Miss Elizabeth Hazlett now Mrs. Richard Scott was chosen beauty Queen at the celebration.

Democrats Say Dewey Prefers Abolishment of Civil Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(UP)—The Democratic National Committee today accused Republican Presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey of having said he would like to "abolish the civil service system."

A release from Democratic headquarters charged that the New York Governor attacked civil service employees during a private conference with Veterans Of Foreign Wars officials in his Albany office last February.

But Lyall Beggs, national commander in chief of the VFW who attended the conference, said in reply to questions that he "does not recall" hearing Dewey make the statements the Democrats attributed to the GOP nominee.

The Democratic release said

Dewey "became enraged" when the VFW delegation recommended passage of a bill for automatic promotion of State civil service employees after 10 years service.

The release quoted Dewey as saying that "anyone who cannot advance himself in 10 years should be fired. . . if I had my way, I'd abolish the civil service."

Beggs said he "didn't get the impression that the Governor was at all angry."

"He was just carrying on a conversation," the VFW chief said. "I got the impression he was strongly in favor of promotions based on merit, and against advancing people just on length of service alone."

Democratic headquarters did not say where it obtained its account of the conversation.
