

BECKY HUGGINS AND LEN HOBBS, both of Chapel Hill, are shown following their coronation Friday night as King and Queen of Tobaccoland. Miss Huggins was winner of the contest involving 22 attractive girls for the title of Queen of the Durham Merchants' association Tobaccoland Jubilee. Hobbs was her escort.

WC Alumnae Slate Meeting On Chancellor

GREENSBORO, Oct. 4—(UP)—A committee of Woman's college alumnae today scheduled a meeting here Wednesday to consider candidates for recommendation as successor to Woman's college Chancellor W. C. Jackson.

The recommendations of the committee would go to Frank P. Graham, president of the Greater University of North Carolina. A spokesman said the recommendations probably would not be forwarded for several months.

Jackson asked recently that he be relieved of his job at the end of the present academic year.

Mrs. Charles W. Tillett of Charlotte, chairman of alumnae, headed the group which would meet here. Other members included Mrs. Albert Lathrop of Asheville, Mrs. Thomas Brafford, Jr., of Raleigh, and Mrs. Julius Cone of Greensboro.

CPU Discusses 'Why Inflation' At First Meet

"Why Inflation?" was the topic discussed at the first roundtable session of the Carolina Political Union Sunday evening in the Grail room of Graham Memorial.

Several specific governmental policies, removal of price controls, tax reduction, loans to foreign countries, the European recovery program, and relaxing of consumer credit controls, were mentioned as contributing to the present high level of prices.

A partisan note was injected into the discussion with the declaration that the Republican party should be held responsible for the present state of affairs. Another opinion expressed asserted that there was little difference in what either of the major political parties could accomplish, and that our present trouble is basic and fundamental to the capitalist system.

The union will continue discussion of inflation next Sunday evening at 8 o'clock when the topic "What Is the Cure for Inflation?" will be presented.

Comedian Fred Allen Says He'll Guarantee Quiz Calls

NEW YORK, Oct. 4—(UP)—Comedian Fred Allen, in a battle to protect his radio popularity from the quiz shows, has insured his listeners against the loss of any prizes they may miss while tuning in his program.

Allen said he has arranged with the National Surety corporation to guarantee the payment of up to $5,000 to any listener who can prove he has missed winning a prize or prize money by listening in on the Allen show.

"There are so many programs giving away things that people have stopped tuning in comedians," Allen said. "They're afraid while they are listening some giveaway show will call them on the telephone and they will lose at least once each day; the kennel must be kept clean and orderly, and a veterinarian must be notified if either or both of the dogs gets sick or injured.

Alexander said the kennel master must also perform any other duties "necessary for the well-being and health of the animals."

Alexander added that the Student Association would furnish all feed, necessary supplies and veterinary fees. He did not say anything about medical expenses for the master in case he shouldn't get along too well with his charges.

Dixiecrat Candidate Strom Thurmond To Speak Tonight In Memorial Hall

ED JOYNER, DTH editor, is shown above giving instructions to the staff of some 35 journalism students who will work with him to put out this afternoon's issue of the Durham Sun. The group met last week with E. T. Rollins, Dante Germino and C. H. Cooper of the Sun staff, and made arrangements to take over the management of the paper today, in observance of National Newspaper week, Oct. 1 to 8. The students, specialists in sports, news, society, advertising, administrative, and composing techniques, left for Durham at 7:30 and 8:30 this morning, and will return this afternoon when the paper has come out. They will be guests at luncheon of the Cooperative club and the American Business men's club of Durham, and will hear John Park, editor of the Raleigh Times, discuss various aspects of the profession. The stunt was arranged by faculty of the journalism department in cooperation with the Sun staff.

Third Assembly

Dean C. P. Spruill, Jr., dean of the General College, will address freshmen students in the third in a series of freshmen assemblies this morning at 11 o'clock in Memorial hall.

Giving a description and interpretation of the General College, Dean Spruill will also explain the various courses offered, and at the same time point out the adjustments freshmen students must make during these first two years of college.

The speaker, a graduate of the University and professor of economics, is the first dean of the general college.

Legislature Delegates Slashed From 32 to 19

University representation in the House of Representatives at this year's State Student Legislature was cut from 32 to 19 delegates at a meeting of the Interim council Sunday, Council Member Dortch Warriner reported yesterday.

Presiding at the meeting, which was held at Guilford college, was Secretary-Treasurer Gran Childress, in the absence of President Charles Cooper of Duke university.

The representation cut was the result of a reapportionment of seats which allows three delegates to any school with an enrollment of 1,000 or less, and an additional delegate for every 400 students over 1,000.

The previous rule allowed two delegates for any school with an enrollment of 500 or less, and one additional delegate for every additional 250 students.

The new ruling, supported by all council members except Warriner, will, in effect, increase the representation in the House of smaller schools and decrease the representation of larger schools. The council is made up of one voting delegate from each school participating in the legislature.

The motion to change the apportionment rule was made by Catawba college.

The council discussed the possibility of meeting this fall, but decided to leave the decision up to Cooper and Childress.

Papers Delivered In Rural Sections

Students living in certain rural areas near Chapel Hill will now be able to pick up their Daily Tar Heels at boxes in their neighborhood, and thus will get delivery before 7:30 each morning.

New boxes have been installed at the following locations: at the corner of Justice street and Airport road, at the west entrance to Davie circle from East Franklin street extension (Durham road) and at the corner of Oakwood drive and Raleigh road. The last-named box will serve the residents of Rogerson drive and Pines Trailer court, as well as those who live on Oakwood drive.

A new metal box has replaced the wooden one at the intersection of Country Club road and Raleigh road.

Ackland Hearing

Dr. Frank Graham left last night by train to be present today in Washington for another hearing over the much disputed Ackland endowment case.

He and state Atty.-Gen. Harry McMullan will appear at the proceedings in behalf of the University. The legal battle over a $1,000,000 endowment for an art building has gone on over a period of several years after an early refusal by Duke. The present case involves the University and Rollins college of Florida.

On Wednesday, Dr. Graham will return to North Carolina to attend a meeting in Asheville of the Southern Joint Land-grant college and will also confer with officials of the T.V.A.

Duncan Says Keep Photo Appointments

All students who have not yet been photographed for the Yackety-Yack are urged to complete the appointments they made during registration, Editor Bill Duncan said yesterday.

If a student has missed his appointment he is requested to come to the Yack office in Graham Memorial immediately.

By completing his appointment now, a student can decide which of the poses he would like to appear in the '49 Yack. The photographer's time is limited, so all students who haven't made their appointments as yet are urged to come to the Yack office as soon as possible.

Cleveland-Boston Game Stirs Campus As Geology Students Whisper Score

By Wink Locklair

A breathless geology student slipped into his seat three minutes late. The roll was taken, 61 whispered to 62, "It's one-all. Lou Boudreau belted a homer in the first inning and the Sox came back to tie it up in their half."

In the lounge at Graham Memorial, a good-sized group of pro-Boston fans (and two dogs) sat tensely around a large console, listening to Mel Allen's voice floating in from Fenway park. Nothing since the Carolina-Georgia hair-raiser last Saturday held students closer to their radios than the Cleveland-Boston play-off game for the American league pennant yesterday afternoon.

The unprecedented game was a life-saver for a dull, cold, dreary afternoon. Portable radios were seen alongside coffee cups in a number of Chapel Hill cafes, and word had it that patrons of the Village theater were in touch with the game through word-of-mouth from the ushers.

Although Cleveland held the upper hand throughout, local Boston fans never gave up hope. But the special attraction did serve one very useful purpose: Boston Brave rooters could size up the foe for the opening game in the 1948 World Series Wednesday afternoon.

Motorcade Will Arrive For 6:45 Talk

By Sam McKeel
Governor J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States Rights Democratic presidential candidate, will bring his motorcade to Chapel Hill tonight in his whirlwind attempt to capture North Carolina's 14 electoral votes.

Thurmond, co-sponsored by the Carolina Forum and the Carolina Political Union, non-partisan campus political organization, will speak in Hill hall at 6:45.

Nominated for the presidency by the state Democratic parties of Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina, Thurmond has blasted both the national Democratic and Republican parties.

He has predicted that he will carry the Tar Heel state and said that if his States Rights party had not won a place on the state ballot, Republican candidate Thomas E. Dewey would have carried the state.

For all of his confidence, Thurmond will face a mixed reaction in the Old North State. Retiring Governor R. Gregg Cherry and Democratic Nominee W. Kerr Scott asked that differences over civil rights be settled "within the family."

Thurmond has blasted the civil rights proposals of his opponents in the presidential race by saying that "the federal government is going to make every business a semi-government business . . . this Fair Employment Practice commission is an ideal bill for the Communists of America."

Thurmond, in his tour of the state, will follow very much the same pattern of two other presidential candidates, Dewey and Wallace.

Herb Mitchell, publicity director of the Forum, said that due to the lack of time in the tour there will be no question and answer period after the speech. Thurmond speaks in Durham at 5:30, here at 6:45 and Raleigh at 8:00 o'clock. He leaves the Raleigh-Durham airport at 9:45 for New York.

Thurmond Says 'Reds and Rakes' At Convention

EN ROUTE WITH THURMOND, Oct. 4—(UP)—Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, States Rights presidential candidate, charged today that the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia "was anything but a convention of the real party."

"It was a convention of reds and rakes and subversives and people who jump from one party to another," he told an applauding courthouse crowd at Charlotte, N. C.

Opening a two-day campaign for North Carolina's 14 electoral votes, Thurmond repeated point by point his blasts against the civil rights proposals of his opponents in the presidential race.

The South Carolina governor said he was "boiled and hissed until I had to stop" when he seconded the nomination of Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia for president at the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia.

"Is that a convention of the Democratic party we know?" he asked.

Rain forced the scheduled outdoor rally to move indoors. The crowd of more than 500 took over the courtroom where civil court was in session, and there heard Thurmond shout his speech. It applauded frequently as he attacked "Northern interference."
