Kerr Scott Will Make Talk Here

By Sam McKeel

W. Kerr Scott, Democratic candidate for governor of North Carolina, will end his campaign Monday night with a speech in Gerrard hall at 8 o'clock.

Scott, who won the second primary over Charles M. Johnson, has been touring the state for the past 11 weeks. He will speak here under the auspices of the Young Democrats club.

Scott entered the 1948 campaign for governor against two strong candidates, Johnson, and Mayne Albright. He came in second in the first primary, but was close enough to Johnson to force a two man run-off.

Born in Hawfields community in Alamance county, Scott began his political career as county farm agent. In 1936 he was elected state commissioner of agriculture. At the start of the primary campaign, Scott resigned as commissioner, saying that no man should try to hold down two jobs at once. While commissioner, he sponsored the diversification of farm products, the doing away with the one-crop system. He also set up such an efficient administration in the Agriculture department that other states sent representatives to study the system.

Scott will be entertained at a banquet in the Carolina inn at 6:30.

Registrars' Books Stay Padlocked

By Herb Nachman

Local registration books for Tuesday's general election remained tightly closed last night despite a student's charge that an elections official promised that books would reopen if voters could prove they were unable to register between the hours of 5:30 and 6 o'clock last Saturday.

R. J. Smith of Hillsboro, chairman of the Orange county Board of Elections said flatly last night that the books were closed as of 5:29 Saturday evening and as far as he was concerned would remain closed.

Smith said the state election laws specify that the books must close at sundown on the last night of registration. "It doesn't make any difference if there are 100 people waiting, they won't get to register after 5:29," he pointed out.

J. B. Johns, member of the Chapel Hill Elections board, last night denied a statement he made two days ago that registrars had been instructed to remain at their posts until 6 o'clock Saturday evening.

Johns also retracted a promise that qualified would-be voters who could prove they were at town hall with the intention of registering between 5:30 and 6 o'clock Saturday evening would be given another chance to register.

Smith explained that the south precinct in Chapel Hill had remained open the first two Saturdays of registration until 6 o'clock but he said the law specifies that on the last night, the books must close at sundown.

"They can stay open all night if they want to, until the last night, then they must close at sundown," he said. Johns reported that the Rev. J. R. Green, registrar of the south precinct, had said that he would stay open until 6 o'clock the first two nights since he wasn't sure of the exact hour of sundown.

Mrs. John Gillin, president of the Chapel Hill League of Women Voters, said last night that the League was acting in good faith when it distributed signs saying that registration would be conducted until 6 o'clock. "Elections officials in Chapel Hill should be given a pat on the back for keeping the books open until 6 o'clock. The league acted under instructions from Mr. Johns when issuing the signs."

The student who filed the complaint with Johns was unaware of the ruling that on the last night of registration the books (See ELECTION, page 4)
