Waiting for Spring?

'Winter Is A Natural Phenomenon'

By Don Maynard
Students who tripped heavily down their dormitory steps yesterday morning were somewhat startled to see that winter had last arrived in Chapel Hill.

Several meteorologists, unperturbed by the sudden shift in barometers, sat by their firesides yesterday and calmly awaited the spring.

"After all," they asserted, "winter is a natural phenomenon." And they produced records to back their statement.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's yearbook for 1941, "Climate and Man," furnishes factual information on North Carolina in general along with a few scattered chips pertaining to "the Hill."

For example, the yearbook states quite blandly, "North Carolina is rather sunny."

In spite of the sunny outlook of the yearbook, statistics cannot be overlooked. In the period from 1899 to 1938, the Chapel Hill area averaged 100 days per year of rain, 60 days of thunderstorms, 15 days of snow blanketed mud, 30 days of dense fog, 120 cloudy days and one hailish day.

Add 'em up. In the course of one average year, 326 days are passed beneath overcast skies. And when it does get sunny—

Council Group Reviews Plans For Projects

Four Proposals Are Discussed

The Project committee of the Student council of the Greater University of North Carolina met here over the weekend and discussed projects that have been submitted by various members of the council.

Composed of two members from each of the schools of the Greater University, the committee discussed at length several proposals.

Heading the list and receiving much attention was the proposal for the sponsorship of the State Student legislature. This proposal would have the council sponsor the legislature at its annual meetings in Raleigh. To grant the council this authority a bill would have to be introduced and passed at the regular legislature meeting.

Another project discussed was the possibility of a Greater University day sponsored by the council. As suggested there would be one such day in the spring of this year and another next fall at the time of the State-Carolina football game.

The proposal for recognition of the council and of the unity in the Greater University was made in a motion that such recognition come by reciprocal of monograms on cheerleaders uniforms.

An idea for presenting some token to the delegates as a symbol of the unity of the three schools was discussed. The final proposal rested on the idea of presenting keys each year to the delegates. The keys would be so designed to show the unity of the three branches of the University.

It was suggested that three copies of the newly adopted constitution be drawn up, written in longhand and on parchment. The copies would be signed by all members of the council and a copy would be presented to each library of the three branches.

Delegates present at the meeting were Nell Jones and Betsy Umstead of Woman's college, Ted Williamson and Preston Andrews of State college; and Jim Godwin and Dorch Warriner of the University.

Sleet Storm Hits Campus As Warm January Fades

Month Is Warmest Since Freeze of 1931 Says Saunders of Local Weather Station

"The warmest January since 1931" stepped out of the limelight early yesterday to make way for a low mercury reading of 25 degrees and a blustery sleet and rain storm of almost one-inch depth, filter plant official Max Saunders said yesterday.

The sleet and freezing rain began to blow into the Chapel Hill area Monday night, following a steadily-sliding mercury reading throughout the day. Relatively cold weather Saturday and Sunday day nights were the early fore-runners of yesterday's freeze.

The sleet storm became quite heavy late Monday night, icing roadways not only in Chapel Hill, but throughout the state and in most of the Southland. Snow was reported in Raleigh and other areas of the state, although only a few flakes were noticed in this vicinity.

Saunders said the University electric and water division cooperative weather station recorded a low early yesterday morning of 25 degrees, and a high reading of 36 degrees at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The temperature was not expected to drop below yesterday's 25-degree level this morning.

The filter plant worker also said the University weather station's precipitation reading showed that .95, or almost one inch, of sleet and rain fell during the storm.

Saunders said the lowest temperature reading this winter was 14 degrees last Dec. 26 and 27. The highest temperature reading in the unusually summer-like January was 79 degrees on Jan. 25, last Tuesday. But Saunders pointed out that yesterday's 25-degree low was the lowest for any January reading since 1940. Last year the January minimum reading was 26 degrees.

The Chapel Hill police department reported no accidents caused by the heavy ice slick which covered the town's streets. And the State Highway Patrol said the number of accidents in the state was "surprisingly low," the United Press reported. The patrolmen were quoted as saying motorists have been much more cautious because of the treacherous weather.

L. C. Morrow of the University electric and water division said yesterday that few power lines had gone down because of the weight of ice or snow. He said some were down on Columbia streets and in west Carrboro along the Lake road. No telephone wires have been broken so far, he reported.

The local Carolina Trailways bus ticket office said their buses were running "on schedule without any accidents."

Canterbury Club Will Hear Wells

Dean William Wells of the College of Arts and Sciences will be one of the four lay members of the Episcopal church to lead discussions on "Marriage and the Family" at a meeting of the Canterbury club tonight at 6 o'clock in the parish house.

This is the second in a series of four programs on the subject of Christian marriage. In planning these programs, the members of the Canterbury club are following the project of Episcopalians all over the country.

Models Minus Chests

Goff Scoffs at 'False Modesty', Bosom Is 'God-Given Right'

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—(UP)—A girl who can wear sweaters should be proud she is built that way, an orthopaedic surgeon said today.

Dr. Charles M. Goff of Hartford, Conn., said he'll have none of this false modesty from women with bosoms.

"It's their God-given right," he said, "and they should be proud of it."

Dr. Goff's chief interest is in posture. He's a member of the Posture committee of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons which is in session here. One of his chief worries, he said, is the esteem American women are giving to the flat-chested figure.

"It's awful," he said. "There's a growing impression that the thin flat-chested women are what men want—and that's not true."

Actually, he warned, girls who try to look flat-chested can grow up with all sorts of inhibitions. They'll have trouble with their husbands, too, he added.

Dr. Goff said that the women who model clothes are setting the bad example.

"Live models make us groan," he said. "They're terrible."

"These fashion models go around with their stomachs pushed out and their chests caved in," he said.

Snow, Icy Rain Blanket State

By United Press

Winter skidded into North Carolina yesterday on a slick coat of ice and brought a warning that highways were dangerous with or without chains.

Police departments and the weather bureau joined in broadcasting road warnings after a 36-hour fall of snow, sleet and freezing rain over the entire state.

But for east and central portions the weatherman promised quick relief. Freezing rain ended at mid-day with somewhat warmer showers continuing through yesterday to thaw out the ice coating.

Months, Carolinians were grumbling that it was too hot when the mercury soared to 107. They prayed for the coolness of winter. "We can always warm up," they could be heard to say.

That same year those folks got their "cool" winter, a thumping 10 below.

But the Tar Heel state is not at a total loss. Figures show that in leap years Chapel Hill may look forward to from 15 to 65 days of absolute weathery bliss.

To a disgruntled student body these appalling figures are submitted: Approximately 25 days of that fair weather allotment have been expended since the beginning of 1949.

Weather observers are beginning to make long-range predictions for next summer. "If we have any more fair weather between now and the summer months, the good days will be dangerously near exhaustion," they warned.

"If this allotment is exhausted we will be forced to predict a summer of sleet and snow."

"Mother Nature must be kept balanced," they grimly explained.

In 1936, during the summer

Y Solicitors Begin Drive With Supper

Baptist Church Scene of Meet

A kick-off supper for YMCA fund solicitors held yesterday evening in the Baptist church formally opened the campus-wide fund raising drive, Charlie Fox, YMCA financial chairman, announced last night.

Speakers at the supper included Chancellor R. B. House, Jess Dedmond, student body president, and Warren Ashby, chairman of the YMCA advisory board.

Today, solicitations will begin all over the campus and all students will be asked to contribute money to the depleted Y funds.

Booths will be set up in the YMCA for town men or other students who wish to contribute their money there. Pledges may be used for money in case students are short of ready cash, and all students contributing to the Y fund campaign will receive membership cards granting them full YMCA privileges.

Fox said the membership cards will indicate the bearer endorses the purpose of the YMCA, identifies him as a bona fide student of the University, and gives him the privileges of "visiting member" in city YMCA associations.

"The YMCA is shooting for a $5,000 goal," Fox said. "I feel confident the drive will be a success and we will meet our goal."

Chancellor House, endorsing the drive, said, "I am appealing to students to give more financial support to the YMCA. The University has always given what it could and would give more if it were able. Friends and alumni give some money, perhaps they should give more."

"But my appeal is to students who benefit by the Y every day and who may take too much for granted. The YMCA is a fellowship of Christians in service of the campus, and it needs student membership, support and participation. To me, it is not just a matter of meeting a campus need. It is a personal opportunity. I have been working in the YMCA for over 30 years, and I find that it gives me more than it ever gets from me."
